JEWELER'S "DIAMOND TREE"

On Which Tiny Stones Are Made to Grow Into Large-Sized Gems.

"I haven't a diamond tree," said the jeweler. "Smith, over the way there has one, though. At least, so I've been told."

"What is a diamond tree?"

"It is a tree where diamonds grow, of course."

"No, seriously. What is it?"

The jeweler smiled, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"Well," he said, "a diamond tree is a swindle, a very profitable swindle, and one that can be carried on forever with mighty little risk of detection. I'll explain to you.

"I am a jeweler and you bring me a diamond ring for repairs. I take the diamond out of your ring and I put back into its place a similar diamond that is a little, a very little smaller. You naturally don't discover the trick that has been played on you.

"The same day a brooch is brought to me, and since the central stone of the brooch is a little larger than your diamond, I get rid of yours and keep the bigger gem. In this way, four or five times in one day, I make diamond exchanges, keeping always a better stone than I part with.

"On good diamond trees diamonds as small as pinheads have been known to grow to the size of peas in two days. A good tree, too, won't have only one diamond growing on it at a time. A dozen stones or more will be simultaneously increasing in size and value as the days pass."

WHEN THIEVES HOLD REVEL

In Russia it is said that more houses are broken into by burglars while the people are at the Easter midnight mass than on any other ten nights in the year. And apropos, the Russian watchman has an ingenious arrangement for letting thieves know when he is coming and giving them time to escape. He carries a huge wooden rattle, which he swings energetically as he advances along the street, giving full warning to timid burglars of his approach, but effectually preventing any drowsiness on the part of the unfortunate inhabitants of the houses.

An Englishman who was staying at a country house in the government of Cherson, and not having been initiated into the meaning of the unearthly racket that disturbed his slumbers rose in a rage at last and, opening the window, hurled the soap and other bulky toilet requisites at the head of the astonished and indignant watchman. The latter actually protested, and refused to be comforted until he received a handsome "for tea"—as a tip is called in Russia—by way of compensation.

OBJECT LESSON AT HOME.

Clubwoman Devotes Time to Nature Studies and Husband's Clothes Suffer.

"I don't see how you can say I've been neglecting my home and wasting my time attending club meetings," protested Mrs. Dorcas, according to the New York Times. "You men are so sordid in your views you can't see good in anything unless there's money in it."

"Well, what good is there in that club of yours that keeps you from home most of the time?"

"Intellectual good, my dear," returned his better half; "something more to be desired than all the money in the world. For instance, our club has gone in for nature study, and I have learned all about the habits of the interesting little creatures of the insect world."

"You have, eh?" sneered Dorcas. "Well, all I can say is that if you'd kept away from your old club and studied insect life at home, I would have been spared the shock I received on opening the wardrobe and finding all my best clothes full of moth holes."

SIX HATS OF MODERN MAN

And the Hatbox That Is Made to Carry Them All When He Travels.

The latest thing in the way of hat boxes for men is one made to carry six hats. These include a silk hat, an opera hat, a derby, a soft hat, a straw hat and a soft, roll-up hat for traveling, says the New York Sun.

There is besides plenty of room in the hat box for a cap, also, if it is desired to carry one. The box is provided, furthermore, with two hat brushes, one of the narrow sort to work under the derby's brim and one of the ordinary kind. there is also a polishing pad for the silk hat.

With such a hat box completely filled with all the hats it is designed to contain, the owner is equipped for any occasion, at any season, in any part of the world. This hat box is square in shape, made of sole leather and sells for $25.

Huge Hospital Magnet.

A huge electro-magnet has been set up in a certain hospital in England. It drew out splinters of steel which had become lodged in the eyes of patients. In one instance it drew out a piece of a hammer head which had been driven into the muscles of a patient's upper arm and in another case drew out a piece of a cold chisel in a forearm. The success of the magnet is said to have been complete, the fragments of the metal appearing quickly on the pole of the magnet. It is suggested that such an electro-magnet could be of great use in military hospitals for the removal of pieces of shell and steel bullets.

NEBRASKA'S GOVERNOR TACKLES FARM DUTIES.

Lincoln, Neb.—John H. Mickey, governor of Nebraska, laid aside his frock coat and high hat and the cares of the state's business the other day. Then he donned overalls—dirty overalls—and spent the day working on his farm east of Osceola. He had bet his farmhands that he could do more work than any one of them could do in the same time.

Before Gov. Mickey amassed wealth and got into politics he used to be a plain farmer. His chief delight nowadays is to tack the sign "closed" on the door of his office at the statehouse and go to the farm for a few hours. This outing consists in showing the men at the farm that, in spite of the frock coat and the silk hat, he can do more work than they can.

When Gov. Mickey put in his appearance at the Osceola farm a few days ago his foreman and some of the men chaffed him about his soft hands and muscles. The legislature had been in session, and the governor had been away from farm work a good many months.

"You're bands'll be so full of blisters that you can't hold a pen," laughed the foreman when Gov. Mickey put on the overalls and went to work where some of his men were building a fence. Mickey held up his hands to show that they were still calloused, and after a little more good-natured chaffing had been passed he spoke up:

"I'll tell you what it is, boys. That new board fence is not going up as fast as I would like to see it, and I believe the old man can beat the best of you when it comes to nailing boards."

The men selected their champion, whose work during the afternoon was to be matched against that of the governor of the state. It was agreed that Mickey should start at one end of the fence and that his man should start at the other end. The one who nailed the largest number of boards during an hour should be declared the winner. The governor reached the middle point first, and had the laugh on the crowd.

After this test of his ability the governor assisted in the work about the farm during the rest of the afternoon, and when chore time came he took his part in feeding the teams and milking the cows.

GIRL IN OVERALLS PAINTS.

Disappointed by a Workman, Miss Viola Van Ness Climbs the Ladder Herself.

Evanston, Ill.—Miss Viola Van Ness, clad in overalls, painted her dwelling. Her deed set all South Evanston talking, and the work was criticised by a big crowd that gathered to cheer.

Several weeks ago Miss Van Ness decided the cottage needed painting and she engaged a man to do the work. He failed to appear and sent word the task could not be started for a month. Then Miss Van Ness made up her mind to do the work herself.

Miss Van Ness soon found that skirts impeded her movements on the ladders. A sweater and overalls were obtained.

For awhile the young woman worked away on the ladder without her identity being discovered. Then an intimate friend recognized her and the news was spread. The news spread quickly and the crowd gathered.

A storm of cheers and criticism induced Miss Van Ness to retreat to the inside of the house.

"It is a shame," the young woman said. "One can never get a thing done within a reasonable time in Evanston. I'll just simply have to paint the house myself. I really don't see why people should interest themselves in what I do. Women paint flower pots and plates, and I do not see any reason why they cannot paint houses. However, if people are so curious, why I'll paint the ouse at night or early in the morning."

Miss Van Ness also declares that she will paper the house if the paperhangers do not appear on time.

Rich Widower Buys Bride.

Fairmont, W. Va.—A novel agreement has been entered on the records of the county court here whereby Miss Gertie Lowther, of Ritchie county, agrees for a sum of money to marry S. W. Harden, Catawba, this county. She agrees to become his wife and remain such until his death, when she is to receive $1,000 from his estate. Harden is 59 years old and a rich widower. Miss Lowther is 28. They have obtained a license to marry.

Arklirta a Hoodoo.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 12—There must be a hoodoo hovering around Arklirta, Frank Farrell's colt. He won a race at Brighton Beach a short time ago and was disqualified for an alleged foul. Although he was interfered with yesterday afternoon by Rustling Silk, that finished first in the Troy Stakes the stewards not only refused to entertain Jockey Knapp's protest against the winner but they disqualified his mount, Arklirta, that ran second.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Mrs. Deborah Stillman, of Easton, Conn., 104 years old, remembers the stirring times of the War of 1812 as well, she says, as if they were yesterday. She has never ridden in a railroad train, and has not even seen a trolley car. She has not been out of Connecticut since 1819. She retains all her faculties except that of hearing.

The Countess of Jersey possesses attainments many and varied and she has an immense fund of general information. She has justly earned for herself the character of being one of the best platform speakers in England. She has written several books of travel and stories for children.

Harold A. Loring, of Portland, Me., has received an appointment from the Secretary of the Interior as supervisor of native Indian music. Mr. Loring has studied some time among the Sioux Indians of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota.

Eugene Richter, the Great German radical, who has recently gone blind, was a thorn in the flesh of Prince Bismark. No member of the Reichstag was more dreaded by the "Iron Chancellor," and no other member so often caused him to lose his temper. This was largely due to Richter's extraordinary command of figures and finances.

Countess Lonvay's collection, which is to be sold soon in Paris, includes a veil presented her by the city of Brussels on her marriage to Rudolph of Austria, showing the united arms of Belgium and Austria.

The late Sir D. M. Petiti, a parsee of Bombay, who founded numerous cotton mills in India, gave $2,500,000 to benevolent projects and was created a baron, an honor conferred on only one other native.

John Butler Burke, who through the discovery of radiographs has suddenly become the most talked of man in the United Kingdom as a man of science, is an Irishman, and was graduated from Trinity College.

Miss Edna Dickerson, a Chicago court reporter, has come into undisputed possession of a fortune of $2,000,000, bequeathed to her by a second cousin whom she had rarely seen.

Miss Anna Hoch, daughter of Governor Hoch, of Kansas, who has been chosen sponsor for the new battleship Kansas, is looked upon by the politicians of the State as one of the strongest gubernatorial influences. Although she is just past her majority she is close to her father in all of his administrative duties.

LITERARY.

A highly complimentary sketch of Frederick W. Parker, formerly manager of the Lake Pigment Company, West Front street, and since July 1 general sales agent of the corporation with an office in New York, appears in the August number of the Wall Paper News. Mr. Parker is a resident of New Brunswick. eH is credited with having much to do with making the Pigment Company a success. He is the author of a brochure on "Lake Pigments; What they Are and How They Are Used." A cut of Mr. Parker heads the article in the trade journal.

The August number of The Era Magazine presents an attractive variety of illustated sketches and entertaining fiction as well as articles of serious import on topics of current human interest. "Frederick of the Flats," by Catherine Frances Cavanagh, gives a new version of the Barbara Freitchie incident, and many hitherto unpublished facts closely associated with a cherished shrine of American patriotism. "Society's Marital Exchanges" is the title of a piquant sketch, illustrating the divorce entanglements of the smart set of New York and Newport. The ninth in the series of articles on mismanagement in life insurance brings out in strong relief many surprising facts. Judge J. M. Mason contributes the second of a studious and impressive series of articles on the railway rate question. Besides these special features, there is the usual number of short stories, while the general ensemble and handsome typographical effects of the current number give substantial evidence of the recent great improvement in this popular and progressive periodical.

Do Automobiles Injure Roads?

One citizen of Elizabeth believes the license fee demanded of automobilists should be raised from $1 to $25, and, in a letter, adds: "And the fee should be paid every year." The writer holds that the scorching automobile is the source of greatest injury to Jersey's good roads. "Why," he claims, "this machine fairly churns up the road's surface, which is carried to either side. As days go by the top disappears, and the counties are forced to make good the loss. A heavy license fee, two-thirds of which should go to the counties, would be only fair under the circumstances."—New York Press.

BOOKS IN THE LIBRARY ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

General interest in the municipal ownership of water works has followed the presentation of the subject to the voters by the Common Council. The municipal proposition is now the one topic of conversation among property owners and others interested in the question.

There is, however, a general lack of real information on the subject. Not one man in ten in this city knows anything about the question of polity and economics involved, beyond the unsubstantial periods of campaign orators, socialistic agitators, and municipal ownership newspapers.

For the information of those who would like to know more about the question, and glean substantial points on the policy of municipal control of water supply, the librarian at the Public Library has compiled a list of the more important books and magazine articles on the subject, both for and against.

The list is as follows:

Baker's municipal ownership of water works.

Parson's city for the people, or the municipalization of the city government and of local franchises.

Public peril in city franchises.

West's reports from various cities.

Loomis' municipal ownership of franchises.

MAYOR BELCHER'S MUCH ABUSED WIFE A PLAINFIELDER

Because of the rascality of Former Mayor Belcher, of Paterson, his wife, a former Plainfielder, is completely prostrated at her summer home, Midvale, near Paterson, and it is intimated that she may return here to live after she recovers from the shock of her husband's deviltry.

Mrs. Belcher was formerly Miss Abigail James, and for twenty-one she was the matron at Dr. J. H. Cooley's sanitarium on Westervelt avenue and left there five years ago to marry Mr. Belcher. According to the statement of close friends she was grievously deceived in her husband not surmising in the least his many infamous acts. Mrs. Belcher's home before coming here was in Kingston, N. Y. She has always been highly regarded by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who now sympathize with her in her position.

A large picture of the former Mayor, handsomely framed was disposed of by Mrs. Belcher the other day to help her keep the wolf from the door.

ALL-CUBANS DO IT AGAIN

HITS AND ERRORS

Beck Larruped Out of the Game and the Westfield Series—Deegan Stops Hitting and Scoring.

Aided by four fateful errors, in conjunction with a vicious assault on Bill Beck, that All-Cuban exhibit again put our home display on the blink, Saturday afternoon. The blinking figured 4 to 1.

In that one potent inning the foreign invaders of the ballyard got all four of their runs. In acomplishing this comparatively easy feat they batted Bill to the bench and partial retirement from activity. They pasted Bill for five bases and worked him for a pass. After the inning Magnate Daab called Bill aside and told him to rest for awhile. After the game it was announced that Deegan will pitch every Saturday. The senior Bill is stronger than the junior William and can stand two games a week. Dave Driscoll says it will do him good.

One of the things that didn't happen was the appearance of Pete Kiernan. The short stop gent was missing when the gong sounded, and nobody knew why or what for. Neither Daab nor Driscoll had any word and lines of worriment appeared on the managerial brow whenever Pete's non-arrival was mentioned. Pete was never known to stay away without sending word before. "I guess he's dead," said Captain Dave. "That's the only explanation I can think of."

Pete Cregan, who used to flit around the shortfield in his cub days, covered Happy's position, and Tuck Turner went into left. Tuck carried off the honors of the shift. Pete made one of the potent errors, but Tuck got everything that came his way. But Tuck made his really great showing at the bat. He scored our one and only and worked Polamino for three passes. Getting to base four times without hitting is going some.

Real outfield glory fell to Wally Cosgrave, the displaced idol. In consequence of his doings on Saturday Wally is trembling on the verge of idoldom again. He made the catch of the game, a one-handed sensational affair that lifted the bleacherites out of their seats. Close on the heels of this he picked up a grounder cleanly. Not satisfied with these marvels, Walter rubbed it into the knockers by pushing out two singles. Do like that in the next six Westfield games, Wally, and we will give you a house and lot and report for duty every morning as doormat. We are nothing if not forgiving.

Wally's hits were particularly noticeable, because biffs were scarce. Polamino was wild in the first inning, but he steadied down and held the clamps on the Commuters in great style. And with men on bases he was the Demon Flinger for fair. No less than eleven panting runners were left homeless on the alleys through the deadly effectiveness of Senor Polamino's hurling. Men on second and third with one or more out made no difference to the Cuban performer. He kept the next batsmen from a look-in under those ordinarily trying circumstances several times with much apparent ease.

After Willie Deegan went on the firing line the Cubans quit hammering the ball. They only managed to pull two widely separated singles from his delivery in five innings. Neither side made errors except in one inning, and when the silent finger took hold the game developed into as pretty a contest as the fans could desire.

That racking fourth section showed its ugly tendencies with the first man up. Almeyda stung one at Pete Cregan, and the utility shortstop went to the bad right away. Immediately after Mr. Almeyda had settled on the bag Jack O'Neil tried a trick play with Dave Driscoll and Kid Brogan. Something went wrong with the trickiness and the ball hurtled into right field. The fever of miscue seized Dan Connolly and he passed up the error-stricken globule. When Dan finally retrieved the ball Almeyda was on third. Polamino took a walk. Finding things thus encouraging, R. Garcia smashed a three-bagger into center, sending his mates home. Heldago died, Leonard to Driscoll. Marzan slammed one between third and short and the usually faithful Mr. Leonard fell all over himself, the ball and the surrounding section of the ballyard. Garcia didn't have time to make home on that play, but Cabrera hammered him in with a two-bagger in left-center. Marzan ruffled in likewise. That ended it, but it was good and plenty. A. Garcia and Bustamenta flied out.

THE HOPE EXCURSION BREAKS ALL RECORDS

ONLY ONE THIS SEASON TO PROVE A FINANCIAL SUCCESS.

The Hope chapel excursion of Saturday again proved that the West End Sunday-school conducts the banner trip of the season to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. Notwithstanding the fact that nearly 600 free tickets were issued, the committee paid all expenses and had the neat balance of $67, beating all records for this or any other year. It is the only local school that carries every scholar gratis that came out ahead this summer.

Though the trip was started under lowering clouds and it rained for about an hour after the arrival, the day proved enjoyable and the large throng enjoyed "self immensely. There were no accidents of any consequence but Mrs. Bert Snowden, of West Front street, was taken ill with congestive chills and fever on the way down. She was treated by Dr. Cregar on the train and spent the day in the Asbury Park hospital. She came home with the excursionists at night and was removed to Muhlenberg hospital in the ambulance. Today she was much better.

Miss Hazel VanSickle, of East Third street, attempted to board the train when it drew in the Asbury Park station for the homeward run and was violently thrown to the ground. She caught hold of the hand rail and had reached the step but lost her balance. She received a few bruises and a severe fright but otherwise escaped harm.

SMALL ATTENDANCES AT THE GOLF COURSES

G. F. EARLE GETS FIRST HONORS IN WEEKLY COMPETITION.

Oppressive heat and an unusual rush of players vacationward pulled down the attendance at the local golf courses Saturday. The links had almost a deserted appearance and it was a slow day generally.

At the Plainfield Country Club the only scores turned in were those for the Golf Committee cup as follows: G. F. Earle, 94, 16—78; Robert Abbott, 78, plus 2—80; Earl Stockton, 92, 11—81; W. P. Boggs, 100, 19—81; R. F. Murray, 90, 5—85; C. H. Stover, 99, 10—89; W. D. Riggs, 107, 17—90; J. E. Erickson, 100, 10—90. There was to have been a golf ball sweepstakes during the afternoon but not enough entries were received and it was not held.

At the Park links there were a number of players out but no scores were handed in for the usual weekly competitions.

NEW FIRE COMPANY.

Dewey Park Citizens Organize and Arrange to Order Steamer.

Dewey Park has a regularly organized fire company and will soon have a steamer. Papers in the incorporation of Dewey Park Fire Co. No. 1 were filed with the county clerk at New Brunswick Saturday. The trustees are named as follows: Michael A. Gallagher, Richard Thomas, Harry Van Fleet, Gustave Pervesus and Henry C. Vogel.

The company was organized at an adjourned meeting of citizens at S. D. Drake's house Friday night. Officers will be elected at a meeting to be held August 25. It is agreed that 250 feet of hose will be ordered purchased at that meeting. Arrangements for the purchase of a steam engine, to be delivered by June 1, 1906, will be made at the same meeting.

The hose company at Lincoln, in which Mr. Drake is also interested has ordered 500 feet of hose to be delivered by September 15. With this lot, Lincoln will have 1,000 feet of hose.

THE CORPSE WOKE UP

And Maybe it Didn't Lambaste the Crew of Car No. 1493.

PASSENGERS CRACKED

The Awful Effect Scotch Plains Fuss Fungle Had On a Young Man Who Was Annoyed by a Conductor.

Car No. 1493, speeding from Scotch Plains to this city at 4:45 yesterday afternoon, numbered among its passengers an inebriated young man who climbed aboard at the former place. He was unable to secure a seat and stood on the running board swaying backward and forward with the motion of the conveyance. As is usual with the drunks who get ossified with Plains fuss fungle he was full of advice and was busy handing it out to nearby passengers, when the conductor meekly asked for the nickle due to the company for the ride.

"G'way," said the intoxicated one; but the conductor failed to pass on.

"D'ye hear me?" queried Mr. Drunk. "Move on; shell yer papers; be on your job er shomebody'll get hurt and it wont be me." Still the Knight of the Register stood his ground and insisted on having the five cents. The man who had been viewing Scotch Plains scenery through the bottom of glasses got highly excited and holding on to the rail with one hand made a pass at his annoyer's face that, had it landed, would have sent him to the hospital. He must have seen two conductors, however, and aimed at the one that wasn't there.

His arm swung around with such a jolt that he lost his balance and tumbled head over heels into the roadway. The car was just passing Johnson avenue then and it went half way to Berckman street before the motorman could bring it to a stop. The drunk remained just where he had fallen, an inert, pitiful-looking specimen, to all appearances hurt or else a dead man. As the car backed up several women screamed and proceeded to faint and a dapper little Buttinsky standing on the rear platform hollered out:

"Gee, conductor, he's a goner; I wouldn't be in your shoes for $5,000."

The conductor and motorman picked up the unconscious form and proceeded to place it on the front platform while an inspector on board who used to work for an undertaker, declared that life was extinct and began to canvass the passengers for names in the event of a damage suit. He had gotten two or three when a yell from up front caused him and everybody else who hadn't been doing so to look in that direction.

They were just in time to see the conductor do a double back-action leap and quadruple chasm act that landed him in the north gutter of Second street. The supposed corpse had suddenly come to life and furnished the propelling force that had lifted the poor nickle gatherer into the air. The conductor was still rolling when the now thoroughly aroused drunk soaked the motorman an uppercut that caused him to jump as though he had been stung by a short circuit and leap to the street. Two or three male passengers who had assisted in carrying the "dead" man failed to get a move on them and they also stopped a few right-handers with their noses. Disposing of them the infuriated trouble maker got down to the running board and was going to clean out the car when he made a misstep and took another tumble to the road.

This time he was trying to regain his feet but was making a bad job of it. But just the same it was the opportunity of the bruised-up conductor and motorman wanted and hustling back to their respective ends the car went ahead with a jerk and kept on going. When last seen the drunk had assumed the perpendicular position and was cutting great gashes in the air, probably in the belief that he was beating the conductor to a jelly. The car arrived at the Watchung terminus eight minutes late.

Helping Poor Children.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, on Saturday, a meeting in the interest of the Netherwood Home was held in the church rooms. Miss Curry was present with about thirty youngsters, who took part in the programme. Miss Curry spoke on the work that has been done and that which is planned. A number of examples were given to illustrate her meaning. The collection was a liberal one.

HARRISON SUIT OPENED

Crowds In Dunellen Court Room When the Hearing Begins.

PLAINTIFF SWORN.

Swears He Was Driving Slowly—Three Witnesses On the Stand Before Adjournment at Noon Time.

The trial of Oscar Harrison's suit for damages against William R. Stanbery, which grew out of the accident as a result of which Mrs. William A. Westphal lost her life, was opened in Justice VonMinden's court this morning. Three witnesses were examined, including Harrison himself, before the noon adjournment. The hearing is being held in the borough hall. Spectators crowded it to the doors when the trial opened, and the overflow stood around the open doorway, and hung in at the open windows.

The trial opened at 10:15 o'clock. The jury is made up as follows: C. E. Kelly, foreman; Abram Nelson, Nelson E. Giles, Charles Clark, William Veler, J. Y. Ruppel, George Harris, William Giles, Bert Platt, Edward Richards, James Maitland and Henry C. Saunders.

S. S. Swackhamer, counsel for Stanbery, started the proceedings by filing objection to the stated demand, on the grounds that it was insufficient and did not set forth the cause of action. The court promptly ruled against the objection.

In opening the case for the plaintiff, W. L. Hetfield, Jr., Harrison's lawyer, declared that he would prove Stanbery was on the left side of the road; that he was going at a high rate of speed; and that he nearly crashed into two other rigs between Grant avenue and the scene of the accident; and that, on the other hand, Harrison was on the right side of the road and going at a moderate speed.

Abner Coriell, of Dunellen, a civil engineer, was the first witness called. He proved a map showing the distance between the curbs and between the tracks and the curb. The crash occurred exactly 23.2 feet from Jackson avenue. He was briefly cross-examined as to the figures cited.

Frank VanWinkle, of this city, a photographer, testified as to pictures of the automobile taken on July 30, showing that the left side of the car was broken and dented. He was not cross-examined.

Harrison followed VanWinkle. He swore that he was driving between six and eight miles an hour, and proceeding between the two tracks, when the carriage was struck. He testified that at the Central roundhouse he passed a trolley car and was compelled to drive over to the left side of the road, and was on his way to the other side when the smash occurred. He said the car struck his horse a glancing blow, the crash resulting in the breaking of both shafts, front axle, four wheels and the harness. The car, he testified, carried the horse and shafts and front wheels to the north sidewalk and dropped them at the fence.

On cross-examination by Mr. Swackhamer, Harrison stated that he saw the auto 150 feet off before the conveyances came together, his brother-in-law, Joseph Rutledge, who was in the carriage with him, calling his attention to it. The auto, he said, showed no lights and no warning toot came from its horn; the night was cloudy. The witness swore that the horse was pulled up, and almost squatting, when the automobile hit it. The horse had a record of 2:04, he swore.

Mr. Swackhamer's line of questioning as to the speed of the horse and the distance at which the auto was first seen was evidently designed to lay the groundwork for a contention that Harrison had ample time in which to get out of the automobile's path.

The trial is likely to be strung out over tomorrow. The plaintiff is said to have ten witnesses, and the defense no less than twenty.

Stanbery was in court, and will go on the stand early in the defense. The warrants against Harrison and the auto owner for manslaughter are expected to be served as soon as the trial ends. An officer from the county prosecutor's office is in court, and he is said to have taken the warrants from Constable Pierce. He has been instructed, it is said, to keep both men in sight until the warrants are served.

A Dinner Party.

A dinner party wass given Friday night by Miss Lizzie R. Kinley at the residence of Mrs. Werd Watkins on East Third street in honor of Miss H. M. Lane. Covers were laid for eight. Among those present were Miss Lane, Miss Brodna, Miss Plummer and William Bonns, both of Detroit, Mich., Walter Reed, of New York; R. B. Fisher and A. Casey.

FIRST WIFE GETS $6,250

NOW ALL'S HARMONY

Divorce Proceedings and Alimony Ordered by the Court Had Already Cost Him $30,000.

Augustus Ralph Keller, of West Seventh street this city, for many years president of Gebbie & Co., publishers of editions de luxe in New York and Philadelphia, has finally made peace with his first wife, Annie Louise Keller. He is no longer compelled to sequestrate himself from the eyes of Sheriff Erlanger's deputies, even in so pleasant a spot as Plainfield for the purpose of evading order of arrest issued by the Suprem Court of New York, because of his failure to pay her alimony. He will be permitted henceforth to live with his second wife, who was the co-respondent named in the first Mrs. Keller's suit for an absolute divorce, without fear of molestation.

To secure this happy state of affairs Mr. Keller parted with $6,250, according to the papers receiving the approval of the Supreme Court Justices.

Mr. Keller is inclined to look upon the transaction as a good bargain, for when negotiations were first opened looking toward a settlement, it is understood that the first Mrs. Keller held out for the purchase of an annuity which would have cost her former husband $28,000. As it is, the litigation, covering a period of many years, is said to have cost Mr. Keller in the neighborhood of $30,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Keller were married in New York in 1883. Three children were born to them, Arthur, the youngest, still living with his mother by order of the court. They lived together in New York until 1889, when differences arose, and in 1897 it was suggested that they should live apart. An agreement was entered into to that effect, and, according to Mr. Keller, some time later negotiations were opened looking to a divorce. Proceedings to this end were begun in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Keller in January, 1902, she naming as co-respondent a beautiful young woman who she declared had been employed by her husband as stenographer and typewriter in the Philadelphia office of her husband's firm. On April 21 of the same year Justice Fitzgerald, of the Supreme Court, granted Mrs. Keller a decree of absolute divorce and awarded her the custody of the minor child, Arthur Ray Keller.

Under the terms of the same decree Mrs. Keller was awarded alimony at the rate of $85 a month, while her husband was prohibited from remarrying. Prior to this time, Mrs. Keller asserted her husband had been allowing her $115 a month for household expenses, "while at the same time he was maintaining a richly appointed establishment in Larchwood street, Philadelphia, for the co-respondent, upon the evidence of whose relations with the defendant the decree was secured, and which co-respondent is now the wife of the defendant."

Justice O'Gorman issued an order adjudging Keller in contempt for failure to pay the alimony, and committing him to the custody of the Sheriff. Mr. Keller retained Lawyers Moses H. Grossman and Alfred Beekman, of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, to take an appeal to the Appellate Division. While these proceedings were pending in the courts Mr. Keller stuck pretty close to his home in this city. The Appelate Division reversed the order of the lower court directing the imprisonment of Mr. Keller for contempt of court in failing to give a bond of $5,000 to secure the payment of alimony, on the ground that he had never been served with the papers in the proceeding; but it upheld the appointment of Sampson H. Weinhandler as receiver of Keller's property in New York and the order increasing the alimony from $85 to $112.

The decision led to negotiations for a settlement which have proved successful.

The Last of the Season.

The local season for excursions to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove closes Wednesday when the members of Warren chapel Sunday-school and their friends make their trip. MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR DEPARTED SCHOLAR

PARK AVE. BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONDUCTS IMPRESSIVE PROGRAMME.

In place of the regular Sunday-school session at the Park Avenue Baptist church, yesterday morning, the scholars conducted a service in memory of Walter Van Winkle, one of its faithful members who died three weeks ago. The young man was a devoted worker in his department and in the school he was a great favorited.

The nature of the programme made the service very impressive and it was attended by a large gathering. In detail it was as follows: Hymn, "Whiter Than Snow," by the school; scripture reading; hymn, "When the Mists Have Rolled Away," by members of the Junior and Intermediate departments; hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," school; reading of letter from Mrs. W. S. Lowery, superintendent of the Intermediate department to which Walter belonged; hymn, "Saved by Grace," by the Junior and Intermediate departments; reading of letter from Mrs. D. M. Runyon, who was Walter's Sunday-school teacher; selection, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," by quartette; reading of letter from Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the church; selection, "Some Time We'll Understand," by quartette; prayer; hymn "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," by the school.

The letters read were sent by Mrs. Lowery, Mrs. Runyon and Mr. Finn because of their inability to be present.

REV. T. MOORE-SMITH AT NETHERWOOD HOME

'PLAINS PASTOR ADDRESSES FRESH AIR CHILDREN.

What promised to be one of the best Sunday meetings so far this year at the Netherwood Home, was somewhat spoiled by a sudden rain. George E. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, presided at the service, while the main part of the programme was in charge of the Scotch Plains Baptist church people. The open air meeting began with the singing of a few hymns, followed by Scripture reading by George E. Hall. When Miss Hawkins was leading in prayer rain began to fall and the service had to be continued in the main room of the home.

When Dr. Anthony Bassner, of New Yqrk, arose to speak a few words, he was greeted with much applause by the children. Dr. Bassner has been one of Miss Curry's kindest friends in New York during the past winter and whenever any of her charges were in trouble, he always came to their aid. He spoke highly of the philanthropic acts which the people of this vicinity are doing for poor children. Another devoted worker of the camp, Clarence Titus, of Roselle, accompanied Dr. Bassner.

In the course of the programme, vocal selections were given by Mr. Gilmore, leader of the Scotch Plains choir. The cornetist was E. H. Guest, of this city, and the organist Miss Mary Clark, of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

After the services Dr. Bassner looked some of the Home children over and bandaged up one youngster's sprained ankle.

Netherwood Home Bathing Pool.

Through the kindness of David Hand, of Leland avenue, a part of the old brick yard pond has been dredged, cleaned and surrounded by a wire fence. It will be used as a bathing place for the children at the Netherwood Home. The children are permitted in the water once a day as a rule, except on hot days when they are allowed to make use of it at least twice.

A Sunday Morning Blaze.

A slight fire occurred at the home of David Bowden on West Fourth street yesterday morning, through the gasolene in a stovecan igniting from a match flame. The blaze spread to the wall nearby and was assuming dangerous proportions when the firemen from No. 3 house arrived in response to a still alarm. The damage will amount to about $25.

Preached at Trinity.

Rev. William T. Pannell, of Flanders, N. J., preached in Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning, from Colossons. The text was "God's Poem, the Church."

Funeral of Infant.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs Willard Swick, of Elm place, was buried yesterday afternoon. The interment was made in Hillside.

ANSWERS MR. RANDOLPH

ITS NOMINEES O. K.

J. V. F. Dilts Declares That the Way to Put Down Alleged Bossism is to Elect Democrats to Office.

The following communication in reply to the one of former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, published Saturday, was received from J. V. F. Dilts, formerly chairman of the Democratic City Committee:

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of Saturday last, former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph asks the citizens of Plainfield to join with him in a movement for reform in our local municipal government and to control the powers of the political bosses. The facts that he states and upon which he bases his appeal are acknowledged by every right-thinking person who has the welfare and best interests of our city at heart. The charges of "inefficiency, extravagances and abuses," that Mr. Randolph in his letter has so openly and aboveboard charged, I, being a Democrat, and never having had any part in the make-up of the officials, who are responsible for the conditions of affairs, will leave to the Republicans for their own house cleaning. He says the tendency toward "reform is abroad in the land and that the feeling grows that Plainfield in particular needs reform." What a humble confession for so eminent a Republican as Mr. Randolph to make! He thereby acknowledges that the Republican party of this city is unworthy to be further trusted to remain in power and as he, to use his own phraseology, has entered the political arena, I will wait and watch to see which of the gladiators in the contest for Republican supremacy in this "acrobatic tussle is No. 1, and comes on the top."

He says "large questions await careful attention, relating to the singular tax law," and also adds "that it was enacted apparently under corporate influence by the last Legislature; questions as to the monopolies with which we are afflicted; questions as to local official appointments; questions as to taking better care of our tax moneys and receiving taxes; questions as to the improvement and enforcement of our ordinance." Here he falters in his address to the citizens and asks "who shall be sufficient for these things? Evidently no such sufficiency now exists." Another confession of Republican weakness.

My reason for noticing this letter and asking permission for space in your paper is to reply to his questions. "How shall we choose clean and capable men? How shall we find and choose them?" These questions he says are alike "momentous and urgent" and that he is willing and desirous to co-operate in a movement to bring about this result. The Democratic party in the past three elections has given Mr. Randolph and all other men who, like him, are not satisfield with past and present conditions a remedy to correct all of the evils, by placing in nomination men worthy of every citizen's vote; and if they had been elected would have saved our Republican friends the humiliating spectacle in which his letter places them. And again this year the Democratic party will, in the coming local election, place in nomination a full and complete ticket of men who are not seeking the office, but the office the man. Here is the remedy he asks for, and not in an independent movement as his letter suggests.

I earnestly urge all Democrats to refrain from helping the Republicans pull their chestnuts out the fire and attend their own primaries, and help select the best men from their own party for our local ticket.

J. V. F. Dilts.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD

The local ball team took a brace Saturday afternoon and defeated Berkeley Heights in one of the best games the local followers have witnessed since the disbanding of the old team two years ago. Neither side was able to score until the ninth inning, the home team, by bunching three base hits at the right time, brought two runs across the rubber. Berkeley was unable to do the trick in their half, so the score stood 2 to 0. Johnston, who was in the box for the home team, was in fine form and the visitors could do nothing with his delivery. Anderson, in the point for Berkeley, was equally as effective until the ninth.

Rev. T. Moore-Smith had charge of the 4 o'clock meeting at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp yesterday. The large church stage was out, with Deacon David Hand in charge, to convey the friends of the camp from here who attended the meeting. Special music by the choir under the leadership of L. D. H. Gilmour was rendered. At the close of the meeting the visitors met Miss Curry and her many little charges in a social way.

The weeds and underbrush in the old cemetery cover the graves and in many places hide the tombstones from view. This should not be as it is a disgrace to the town.

The Daabsters met defeat again Sautrday at the hands of the All Cubans. It was a good game so there was no kick coming from the local cranks who attended.

George Ball, who was injured in the trolley accident at Leland avenue two weeks ago, is still confined to the house with his injuries.

John Alberts, the liveryman, lost a hack horse yesterday, the animal dropping dead while being driven on Mountain avenue.

Mrs. Sarah Fithian, who has been spending two months with Miss Susie Parse, has returned to her home at Bridgeton, N. J.

Mrs. George L. Dunn led the weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the church parlors.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sharp, of Front street, entertained Mrs. Sharp's brother from New York over Sunday.

August Sheelen, of the borough, has returned from a week's stay at Atlantic City.

BEGIN LEGAL FIGHT FOR $65,000,000

BIG CLAIMS OF JERSEY HEIRS TO DUTCH MERCHANT'S ESTATE.

Atlantic City, Aug. 14—Descendents of Theobald Metzger, an early Amsterdam merchant, who died in 1691, after his government had seized his property for a war fund, have organized to make a fight for its restoration. Arno P. Mowitz, a Philadelphia lawyer, has been retained in the case and is making his headquarters at the Hotel Adolphus here while gathering claim affidavits from heirs of the American branch of the family, now scattered throughout South Jersey.

The present claimants are direct descendants of Christina Metzger, only daughter of Theobald, who came to America. The campaign will be taken to Holland in the fall, and the heirs are confident that at least a compromise can be effected with the representatives of Queen Wilhelmina. It appears that after the war of 1691 was over the burgher government could never bring itself to restore the money and real estate to its rightful owners, and it has kept it ever since, until it has increased through accumulated interest to the enormous total of $65,000,000.

A previous effort to secure a settlement was made in 1874, but it failed because of improperly prepared affidavits and lack of energy on the part of the European agent of the American heirs. A portion of the vast estate is said to be occupied by a branch of the great Rothschild family as a summer home. Recent advices from Holland state that the government there is disposed to recognize the American claim as legal, but insists that all the heirs file affidavits and statements at the same time, so that the case when settled will never have to be reopened again.

New York, Aug. 14—Twenty-four religious denominations containing 18,000,000 communicants, have each appointed from five to 50 delegates to take part in an inter-church conference of federation.

The meetings will be held in Carnegie Hall for a week, the object being the federation of the Protestant forces in America. President Roosevelt has expressed his sympathy with the movement and it is expected that one or more members of his cabinet will be able to take part in the discussions of the conference.

The 60 speakers on the programme and the presiding officers include five bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church, six bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, a bishop of the Reformed Episcopal church, a bishop of the Moravian body, representatives of the Presbyterian Congregational, Baptist and other denominations, two United States Supreme Court justices, two judges of the state courts, a United States senator, a congressman, a governor, a mayor and several college presidents and professors, editors and ministers.

Among the issues to be brought before the church and nation by the conference are religious education, the social order, evangelization, home and foreign missions, the fellowship of faith, the national life and Christian progress. Besides declaring faith in the essential unity of the Protestant churches, several speakers will rehearse the practical workings of present federation movements in cities, rural districts, states, foreign lands and interdenominational work.

Denominational rallies, a platform meeting devoted to young people's movements and a reception to the delegates at the Waldorf-Astoria, given by the half dozen denominational social unions in this city, will be among the more popular features of the conference.

The chairman of the executive committee is Dr. William Henry Roberts, of Philadelphia; the secretary, Dr. E. B. Sanford, of New York. The chairmen of others committees, all New York men, are: Programme, Dr. William Hayes Ward; finance Stephen Baker; hospitality, Professor E. S. Tipple; reception, Dr. K. B. Tupper; meetings, the Rev. M. E. Dwight; publication, W. T. Demarest; pulpit supply, Dr. Wallace MacMullen; press, Dr. John Bancroft Devins.

The Boston Bag.

"The Boston bag is a growing evil," said a man who has just returned from the Hub. "Formerly it was only the women who carried them, but now no Boston man is correctly equipped for the street who does not carry a bag. Every day in Boston I saw scores of business men carrying large green or blue broadcloth bags, exactly like those the women affect. They contain their books, papers, and small packages, and on one occasion I saw a man dive into his bag for street car fare. Do you think you could hire a New Yorker to do that?"

Mrs. Clarence Murphy, of Sandford avenue, is suffering from a slight illness.

Miss Marion Porter, of New York, has returned home after a two weeks' visit to her sister, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of West Fourth street.

JOURNALISTIC OPINION

Didn't Get His Bath.

Last week while the mercury was reaching for the top of the glass an East Pearl street man got the idea in his head he wanted a river bath and improvising a robe he started for the river, but there is where he missed it. His dog and all the neighbors took fright at the sight and chased the would be bather into the house and he had to give it up as a bad job.—Burlington Gazette.

Cape May Has Better Beach.

Atlantic City has organized an automobile club in rivalry with Cape May and offers a stretch of the beach below Chelsea for a racing course. Atlantic City is not to be outdone in enterprise, but in this case she hasn't got a good enough beach to offer. There is no comparison between the beaches of Cape May and the island on which Atlantic City is built, as the automobilist will soon discover. —Newark Advertiser.

Citizens As Police Catspaws.

A correspondent of the Home News has expressed the opinion in these columns that in the matter of Charles Long's capture, "the Plainfield police department are entitled to no credit," claiming that "Long was apprehended by Frank VanNuis and in accordance with a distinct agreement and understanding with the Trenton authorities he notified them to come on and take him away." The controversy following Long's arrest, both as to the capture itself and the payment of the reward that was offered, promises to prove more exciting than the pursuit of the murderer, and to be more difficult to solve than was the location of the fugitive. The matter is not permanently decided by the determination to give the reward to the Plainfield police. The case is yet to be passed upon at the bar of public judgment, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether the popular decision will be in favor of the police. It is claimed that Farmer VanNuis would have been given a share of the reward but for his attempt to corral it all. Now he is to be given nothing, his claim being decided against him on legal technicalities, such as the meaning of word "apprehension," it being alleged that he did not personally "apprehend" the prisoner but only revealed his whereabouts, and consequently did not come within the provisions of the offer of reward. Nor is this all. The farmer is even threatened with prosecution, on the ground that he aided Long to escape, and while denied the reward for his capture may have to face an indictment in the courts as the result of his connection with the case. This is rather tough on VanNuis. Without entering into the merits of this particular example, it seems to us that the precedent established in VanNuis' case is very apt to react upon the authorities in the long run. If citizens are expected to actually seize an escaped prisoner or other criminal for whom a reward may be offered and personally convey him to jail, in order to be entitled to any pecuniary consideration extended, civilians hereafter will be very loath to interest themselves in such matters and the police will obtain small help. The average citizen is not prepared to perform the duty of the police to the extent demanded. The decision in the Long case will serve to deter people from "butting in" at all or in any capacity, when criminals are sought, and the authorities may have to depend upon their own efforts. Citizens, it is safe to say, are not ready to serve as mere catspaws for the police in the gathering of financial chestnuts in the form of public rewards.—New Brunswick Home News.

Why Adams Should Be Nominated.

The Summit Herald for some time past, and lately in a hysterical way, has been booming Dr. Lawrence, of that town, for the shrievalty nomination. If we understand the sentiment of the leading Republicans throughout the county, including Elizabeth, it is that the nomination for Sheriff should go to one of the townships. Summit lays claim to a monopoly of that sentiment whereas an acceptable candidate from either Cranford or Westfield would fill the bill just as completely. Summit's conceit becomes decidedly ridiculous when she claims that the "upper part of the county" means only the top of the hill. The term really applies to all the county outside of the cities of Elizabeth, Rahway and Plainfield. There is, however, a much more important consideration which Summit ignores, and we are afraid many of the county leaders do not give it the importance which its deserves. We refer to the matter of regularity in party affairs in the records of the candidates. Are the men who two short years ago were mainly instrumental in defeating the regular nominees of the county convention, Kirk and the lamented Coyne and Embree to be rewarded by nominating them to the most important offices to be filled at the coming election? Are there so few available candidates that mutiny and gross breaches of regularity even to disloyalty which resulted in the election of three Democrats to the Assembly from this county and which might have jeopardized Republican control of that body to be overlooked, nay, even rewarded? Are the nominees for Senator and Sheriff to be selected from among those who organized and carried out the mutiny and boasted of the success of their schism and the "lessons" they taught the organization? Judge Runyon has claimed to be proud of his victory over the organization. Dr. Lawrence was then Summit's member of the county committee and chairman of the local organization which did the cutting there. The same men are now back of his candidacy. A deflection of 200 votes in Summit could not have been made by his friends without his knowledge, consent or assistance. No claim can be made on the merits of Dr. Lawrence as a sheriff candidate which is not equally applicable to Cranford's candidate, Freeholder Emmor K. Adams. Cranford Republicans have always been conspicuous for their loyal support of the whole county ticket as made by the convention, and Cranford is as much, nay more, entitled to recognition than Summit for her unexcelled party record. Cranford's candidate, endorsed unanimously by the local committee, is known throughout the county as a vote getter; a winner. Beyond that Mr. Adams in previous years failed to press his claims in the interest of party harmony. This is an off year and the party will have all they can do to elect a ticket made up of their strongest candidates. There will be no time for explanations or apologies for party disloyalty.—Cranford Citizen.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

"Mike" Leonard still continues his brilliant game at third. His playing is the admiration of every fan.

Dalton, the new second baseman for the locals, has written Manager Daab that he will be in condition to play on Saturday at Westfield.

"Wally" Cosgrave certainly redeemed himself on Saturday. His playing was gilt-edge, especially his one-hand catch of a long fly in center.

The All Cubans played their usual steady, snappy game and their remarkable fielding cut off many runs. The locals had eleven men left on bases.

Captain Driscoll says that if possible the team will not allow Westfield to get another game in the series. "Dave" has played against Westfield ten times and the defeat on August 5 was the first one in which he has taken part.

Perez, the All Cuban pitcher, who defeated Plainfield in the first game by a score of 1 to 0, is in the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia. He was hit in the head with a ball in the recent All Cuban-Cuban X Giants' game, sustaining a severe injury.

"Dan" Connolly made his first error on Saturday and considering the circumstances it seemed almost a shame to charge him with it. The play allowed a baserunner to advance and there was nothing else to do.

There was about 900 people at the game. No doubt the Hope chapel excursion kept many away.

Manager Daab was greatly worried over "Happy" Kiernan's failure to show up. It was the first time since his connection with the team that he has ever done this and his absence was a deep mystery. However, Cregan filled the position in the infield acceptably, while "Tuck" Turner took care of left field all right, besides making the only run.

"Billy" Beck has a great many friends here, who believe he is a comer in the twirling line, but they do not think he is fast enough for the rest of the team. He has done good work, but in the Westfield series and with faster teams he does not appear to be equal to the task. In view of this Manager Daab has decided wisely in calling upon "Willie" Deegan to pitch every Saturday for the local team. This will inspire confidence in the rest of the players and should make the winning of the county championship somewhat easy. The matter was decided on Saturday and "Willie" was perfectly agreeable to the proposition. Manager Daab is convinced that he should be able to pitch Saturday and Sunday the same as Waller and Linderman are now doing and it will tend to keep him in the best of condition. Besides, it is argued that this change will increase the attendance materially, for it has been learned that not a few have remained away from the games when it was known that Beck was to pitch.

The Historic Hudson.

The Hudson River has a renowned reputation in more ways than one. Its business interests are more widely known than any other stream, while for excursions and outings it has no equal. There are sights galore—the palisades—the U. S. Military Academy at West Point—the far famed State Prison at Sing Sing and interesting Newburg. The scenery in every direction is superb and the steamers which convey the excursionists are commodious and comfortable. On August 17, 1905, the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its popular low-rate excursions up the Hudson, the rate for the round trip to be $1, children, 50 cents, and special train leaving Plainfield at 8:46 a. m., will connect at Jersey City station with famous steamer "St. Johns" for the trip. Don't forget date or train time. 8 11 td

No one will ask "what's the matter with Kansas," after a battleship named for her is christened with water.

Isn't it about time that a thorough investigation be made in this city as to the cause of the prevalence of dysentery.

The Trenton correspondent of the New York Tribune believes that the Republican party in New Jersey needs a leader, and quotes some who favor John Kean. Well, if Kean has not been the boss for some time past, who has?

Are there not others besides Mrs. F. O. Herring who will bear in mind the Netherwood Fresh Air Home and other local charities while away for the summer? Mrs. Herring has sent to this paper for the Netherwood Home, two dollars, which represents a balance remaining from an entertainment given at the resort at which she is stopping. Her thoughtful gift is much appreciated.

THE POLITICAL TIPSTER.

Wise ones say Freylinghuysen has North Plainfield clinched.

Fanwood is in line for Runyon and Lawrence. Phil Jahn says so.

Some one said that Clarence Murphy is politically dead. A rigid investigation is being made to find out the authority.

Steps are being taken to organize a Republican club in the First ward in the interests of W. S. Bullock's canvas for a renomination to Common Council.

For various reasons, the tipster can not quote James E. Martine word for word, but the sense of his declaration is that if you are out for reform get aboard the Democratic band-wagon.

Complaint Dismissed.

M. F. Kiely, a West End youth, was arrested on Plainfield avenue yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Messler, on complaint of Joseph Streyer, who accused him of hitting his daughter with a stone. Streyer said he was sure Kiely did the throwing, but he failed to appear in court this morning and the complaint against the youth was dismissed. Counsellor F. J. Blatz appeared for Kiely.

Crap Shooters Released.

Sheridan Jones and Edmund Scott, colored, were arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning for shooting crap on the street. It was a harmless game, according to the evidence and sentence was suspended. Edward Brown and William Brown, who were in the same game and summoned to appear, failed to obey the summons. They will be arrested on sight.

The Week at the Home.

The meeting tomorrow evening at the Netherwood Home will be in charge of the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. Members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church will lead on Friday, and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will conduct services on Saturday.

Visitors at Netherwood Home.

In addition to the regular number being cared for at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home at present, about thirty-five adults, mostly parents of the children who have been there for a week or more, was accommodated over Sunday. Quarters were provided for the women in a tent in the rear of the home, while the men were allowed to find bunks where they could.

Trinity C. E. Entertains.

The Christian Endeavor Society, of Trinity Reformed church, had charge of the services at the Netherwood Home, on Saturday. The children were entertained during the afternoon by phonograph selections. A prayer meeting followed.

PRACTICAL MEN AT MUNICIPAL CONVENTION

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE A REPRESENTATIVE AT SESSIONS.

Among the important papers to be discussed at the annual convention of the League of American Municipalities, to be held at Toledo, Ohio, August 23-25, will be that of Prof. L. G. Powers, chief statistician of the Department of Commerce and Labor Washington, D. C., on the subject of "Municipal Finance and Accounting." Louis Betz, city comptroller of St. Paul, Minn., will lead in the discussion which will follow Prof. Powers' paper.

City Surveyor Andrew J. Gavett, who will attend this convention as Plainfield's official representative will be much interested in the discussion of "Street Cleaning," on which Mayor Cook, of St. Louis, will present an exhaustive paper. City Engineer Rosewater, of Omaha, will speak at length on the question of paving construction, and Mayor Jeffery, of Columbus, Ohio, will discourse on "Municipal Ownership." The paper by Judge Oscar Leser, of Baltimore, setting forth the benefits derived by the Maryland metropolis as a result of its great fire, will be of particular interest.

City officials from all parts of the country are regular attendants at the annual conventions of the league and all of them find that the interchange of ideas on subjects of mutual interest, as well as the extensive commercial exhibits of leading manufacturers of municipal machinery supplies and equipment, are of very material advantage to them in their several departments of city work.

The league is composed of the practical administrators of city affairs in all sections of the country and it cannot be doubted that those in attendance at its annual conventions add enough to their practical knowledge to much more than compensate their cities for all the expenses for their trip. The Common Council deemed it for the best interests of Plainfield in sending Commissioner Gavett as its representative.

ECLIPSE OF MOON IS DUE TONIGHT

SCIENTISTS ALL OVER THE WORLD WILL BE PEEPING AT IT.

If the weather man stows away some of the clouds that have been hovering over Plainfield and sprinkling in the last few days the populace is certain to see an astronomical treat scheduled for tonight. From 10 until 12 the moon will be in partial eclipse. Scientists the world over have been getting ready to take all sorts of observations of the eclipse.

The moon will peep over the horizon at about 7 o'clock tonight and just two hours and fifty-five minutes later—should the clouds disappear in time—the shadow on the moon's surface will begin to show itself here. The eclipse will reach the greatest limit on the lunar surface just at 11 o'clock. At that time it will begin to recede and at midnight the moon will have passed entirely out of the shadow.

SERMON BY EDITOR.

Rev. J. M. Whiton, of the Outlook, Preached at Crescent Avenue.

Pharasaism was the subject of a strong sermon preached by Rev. J. M. Whiton, one of the editors of the Outlook, at the Crescent Avenue church yesterday morning. His text was, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Pharisees, ye shall in nowise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven."

Rev. Mr. Whiton's discourse was a general condemnation of the surface-morality affected by professing Christians. It scored the people who are moral only in so far, and to such an extent, as public opinion demands—people who parade morality for appearance's sake. Innate righteousness was needed for salvation, the speaker said, a morality that came from within, a conviction of righteousness and conscience, a deep-rooted regard for the right and the true, and not merely an observance of Christian conventionalities.

Jailed for Peddling.

Hiram Stranton and James Harris clean-looking young fellows, were arrested by Detective McCarthy on Saturday for peddling without a license They were kept in jail until this mroning, when Judge Runyon, impressed by their straightforward stories and appearance, released them with words of kindly warning.

third. Tuck Turner punched a hot one at second, and Valdes burned his fingers unavailingly trying to check it. Tuck went to second and continued to third when the round thing rolled tarough Cabrera's right-field breast works. Cosgrave went out short to first, but Brogan turned off the necessary long fly and Tuck fluttered in. While on the subject of the youthful Mr. Brogan's exploits we will mention that he pulled off the only extra base hit wrenched from Senor Polamino. Red Waller's amazement at the Kid's hitting, which he disrespectfully referred to as flukey after Mr. Brogan's first appearance here, does not appear to be much to the proper. The Kid is no fluke hitter. He is the Juvenile Demon Batsman, and the Terror of Terrible Pitchers.

MISS FROEHLING BURIED.

Girl Friends Act As Pall Bearers.

The funeral of Miss Jennie Edna Froehling, who died suddenly at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Chauncey F. Stout, of Madison avenue, was held yesterday from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julia Froehling of Liberty Corner. They were conducted by Rev. Charles B. Condit, of Liberty Corner, and were attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, many of them from this city. The Sunshine Mission Band of the Liberty Corner Presbyterian church of which Miss Froehling was a member, sang three selections. The floral tributes were numerous.

There are nine remaining members of the Sunshine Mission Band and six of them acted as pall bearers. They were the Misses Belle E. Acken, Marion E. Allen, Eretta Baldwin, Ella Laire, Charlotte Frost and Addie Woods. The other three, Minnie Allen, Lulu Acken and Frances Wheat acted as honorary bearers, following those who carried the casket. Interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery.

MARRIAGE ENDS A THRILLING ROMANCE.

Indiana Girl, Engaged to One Man, Forced to Wed Another, But Soon Secures a Divorce.

Marion, Ind.—The marriage of Rhetta Ellis Huff of this city to Charles E. Sutton of Knoxville, Tenn., by Rev. Mr. Carlyle at his home in Covington, Ky., March 25, has been announced in this city. The marriage is one of many chapters in a romance in the life of the bride, who was formerly a student in the Marion normal college and later a teacher.

a queenly bearing. She was modest and refined, had an excellent education, but her one fault was a desire for the romantic.

While a student in college three years ago she met Charles E. Sutton, a traveling artist of fancy needle work. They talked of his work and his life. He became infatuated, proposed marriage and the wedding day was fixed.

Miss Huff visited St. Louis on a college excursion. She failed to return with the party. After ten days Miss Huff returned to Marion with a wonderful story.

She said she had answered letters of an unknown correspondent in St. Louis who was known as John S. Ellis. She said Ellis demanded that they get married at once, but she refused. Ellis took her to a room in a secluded place, where she was kept as a prisoner until she promised to marry him, which she did.

Mrs. Ellis filed suit in the local circuit court for a divorce. Judge H. J. Paulus refused to grant a decree. Later Ellis came to Marion and sent for his wife to come to a hotel to meet him. She went to the hotel, but was accompanied by Sutton. Ellis flashed a revolver and threatened to shoot Sutton, who departed, leaving Ellis and his wife together to talk the situation over. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis had a reconciliation. Later she went to Cincinnati, where she again filed suit for divorce from Ellis.

GIRL WEDS AGED PREACHER

Worse Than All, Pair Elope with Potato Cart Belonging to the Bride's Father.

Waterbury.—Maudie Bascom and George Williams, an itinerant preacher and book agent, with white hair, have gone off and got married, eloping in the Bascom potato cart, drawn by the Bascom white mule.

"Mother, you were once young yourself and George has been much misrepresented to you. Cheer up!" was the note left by Maudie, who is 20 years old. Mrs. Bascom is heartbroken as she had always talked to her daughter about George's bad habits, in spite of his being a preacher.

"I don't feel so bad," said Franklin Bascom, the father. "I always wanted to see Maudie married, and if she has done it suddint, so much the better. I do worry about the mule, though, because I wanted to haul the potatoes to town."

The last report from the eloping pair is that they abandoned the mule for a train at Carmel and are going to New York, where both have relatives on the police force. The mule is a wonder, having been taught many tricks at Coney Island, where Bascom bought it.

Teacher Weds Pupil.

New York.—The marriage of a woman teacher in a public school to one of her boy pupils has been disclosed. The bride is Miss Mary McMillan Steffens, instructor of the fourth grammar grade in the public schools. Her age is said to be 28. The bridegroom is Bennie Trigano, a pupil in her class last term, and now learning the tonsorial business. His age is said to be under 17. After getting two witnesses to swear that he was of age, they were married. The couple separated at the door of the notary's office, the bride going back to her school and the bridegroom returning to the little barbershop to earn money to go into business for himself.

Rich Widow Weds Coachman.

Whitehall, Pa.—Mrs. N. O. Griffin, 60 years old and worth $1,000,000, married John Wood, her 18-year-old coachman. The bride, who is the widow of a millionaire Philadelphia merchant, appeared at the Episcopal rectory with Wood and asked Rev. Mr. Elliott to marry them. The clergyman tried to dissuade her, but she replied she was old enough to know whether she loved the young man.

THE "COLD PLANT."

Grows on Rocky Wastes of Yucatan Where No Other Vegetation Will Exist.

On the sandy and rocky wastes of Yucatan, where nothing else in the vegetation line will grow, the henequin plant, or Mexican sisal, as it is commonly known, finds congenial soil, and grows its great leaves, from which is produced a fiber used in the making of rope and twine. The first cousin to the century plant, thriving on soil which could not be used for any other purpose, has been dubbed the "gold plant" by the native planters, because it is one of the chief sources of wealth of the peninsula. It grows luxuriantly under the most adverse circumstances, and thrives in a marvelous way when given the assistance of modern cultivation. It is a plant that was worshiped as divine by the ignorant natives there many generations ago, because it was able to grow in soil where no other vegetation would thrive and often was found solidly established and thriving on a pile of stones or gravel. To the ignorant mind of the original native, the development of the towering plant from a pile of stone was proof positive of its divine origin, and even now there are many henequin worshipers there.

The plant is a cousin to the aloe or century plant. It grows a large number of thick, broad and heavy leaves which are a mass of stout fibers laid parallel, like the fiber in a stalk of celery, only much closer, much longer and stronger. The profit from the plant is made by extracting these fibers, drying them and manufacturing them into twine, this production taking the place of manila hemp in the manufacture of everything in the twine class, from the ordinary twine used on the American harvesters to the stout hawser on board the harbor tugs and the ocean liners. No other plant yet found produces such large quantities of the fiber.

The cultivation of the plant is not a new industry, the bales of the fiber being imported to this country as far back as 1860. In that year the importation amounted to 1,393 bales. The demand for twine and cordage and rope since that time has given a great stimulus to the importation and the records of the revenue office show that for the year 1903 this country imported 569,212 bales.

STATE'S FIRST PUBLIC BELL

Historic Bell, Presented to Town of Vandalia, Ill., Is Still Preserved.

Vandalia, Ill.—There is in this historic old town, the property of the Presbyterian church, the first bell to call together a Protestant congregation in Illinois.

It was hung in the first church edifice built in Vandalia, known as the House of Divine Worship," which was erected by munificence of the state in the twenties. The bell bears the following inscription: "Illinois Riggs, to the Presbyterian congregation of Vandalia, 1830."

HISTORIC OLD BELL.
(It Called Together First Illinois Protestant Congregation.)

The Illinois Monthly Magazine, conducted by James Hall, and published in Vandalia, under date of December, 1830, has this to say of the bell:

"During the last month the town of Vandalia received a valuable acquisition in the donation of a fine-toned bell for the cupola of the meeting-house. The bell was presented to the Presbyterian congregation of Vandalia by Romulus Riggs, a merchant of Philadelphia, in the name of his daughter, Miss Illinois Riggs. This bell was hung November 5, 1830, and announced its own arrival in joyous tone. This event is interesting, inasmuch as it is the first public bell introduced into the state by American inhabitants. The French had one or more bells in their villages on the Mississippi, but the public buildings erected by the American settlers have been entirely destitute of this useful appendage."

For several years the bell has been used by the Fall Methodist church of this city, but recently has been taken down and mounted on a frame and placed in a gallery of the Presbyterian church.

NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, chessy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

MEET TROUBLE BRAVELY.

It is a grand thing to be courageous, to carry a brave heart that sees the bright side of things and rises supreme above the worries and troubles of life.

We all number a few cheery souls of this kind among our friends, and what a comfort they are to live with.

There has come to light one woman who has lost money, position and even confidence in the one who should have been nearest and dearest to her.

She has had to slave early and late to keep a roof over herself, her husband and her three helpless babies, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

If ever woman had cause to feel and look discouraged and sour she has.

But in spite of all she wears the sweetest expression ever seen on a woman's face.

Every one loves her, every one goes to her for encouragement and mental stimulation.

We call her a "soul tonic."

This woman is, of course, unusual in her brightness and courageous way of taking life, but we can all take a chapter out of her book if we put our minds to it.

Let us begin with the little things that jar and fret us every day.

If we wish to conquer the big troubles we must first tackle the little ones.

It takes more perseverance and courage to deal with the latter than with the former.

For we are praised when we are brave over big things, but no one notices us when we are brave over little ones.

Don't be easily cast down and conclude that just because a few things go wrong you are a blighted being with nothing left to live for.

As long as you exist in this wonderful, beautiful world, there is a great deal worth living for.

Put your shoulder to the wheel and say: "I will be bright, I will make the best of things."

If you wish to achieve any success in life, the surest way to do it is by keeping at whatever your appointed task may be with unflagging interest and energy.

If at the end of the day you feel discouraged at your lack of progress don't sit down and lament over it; find out your mistake and try to do better next day.

This all sounds like sermonizing, and you may be tempted to ask me if one can practice what is preached.

One may try, dear girls, but of course, many slips are made, for sometimes it's almost impossible to feel bright and hopeful when everything seems wrong, isn't it?

Just remember that "every cloud has a silver lining."

Don't be overpowered by the dark side; keep at it until you find the bright one, for "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

WHO SHOULD NOT MARRY.

The woman who buys for the mere pleasure of buying.

The woman who expects to have "a good, easy time."

The woman who thinks that cook and nurse can keep house.

The woman who would die rather than wear last season's hat.

The woman who wants to furnish her house every spring.

The woman who expects a declaration of love three times a day.

The woman who marries in order to have some one to pay her bills.

The woman who reads novels and dreams of being a duchess or a countess.

The woman who proudly declares that she cannot even hem a pocket handkerchief, and never made up a bed in her life.

The woman who cares more for the style of her winter cloak than she cares for the health and comfort of her children.

FOREIGNERS ENJOY SURF.

Unlike Americans, Englishmen prefer to have their surf bath before breakfast. They slip out of their rooms and into the surf as a sort of duty, and prefer a buff bath, or one without the incumbrance of a bathing suit, if they can be permitted to enjoy it. With them the bath, even in the breakers, is more of a duty than a pastime, as it is with the French and Americans. Neither do the people of continental Europe enjoy the pleasures of the surf with the same avidity as marks the summer day along the American coast. There is more or less of custom or fashion to dictate to the temporary dwellers along the seashore.

An Engineeress.

Running an engine, firing the boiler, and keeping the books in her husband's establishment is the way in which Mrs. H. D. Schaefer, of Logansport, Ind., is proving a true helpmate to her husband. Finding it difficult to secure a man to do the work satisfactorily, and appreciating the fact that no one else would feel so keen an interest in the business, Mrs. Schaefer learned to handle and care for the machinery, and thinks a woman can do such work as efficiently as a man. In addition to her business efforts, Mrs. Schaefer does all her housework, not neglecting the care and education of her two little girls—surely performing the full duties of wife and mother—while her husband solicits and attends to all orders and outside work.—The Pilgrim.

IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

CHAPTER III.

O H, Mag, Mag, for heaven's sake, let me talk to you! No, don't say anything. You must let me tell you. No—don't call the other girls. I can't bear to tell this to anybody but you.

You know how I kicked when Tom hit on Latimer's as the place we were to scuttle. And the harder I kicked the stubborner he got, till he swore he'd do the job without me if I wouldn't come along. Well—this is the rest of it.

The house, you know, stands at the end of the street. If you could walk through the garden with the iron fence you'd come right down the bluff on to the docks and out into East river. Tom and I came up to it from the docks last night. It was dark and wet, you remember. The mud was thick on my trousers—Nance Olden's a boy every time when it comes to doing business.

"We'll blow it all in, Tom," I said, as we climbed. "We'll spend a week at the Waldorf, and then, Tom Dorgan, we'll go to Paris. I want a red coat and hat with chinchilla, like that dear one I lost, and a low-neck satin gown, and a silk petticoat with lace, and a chain with rhinestones, and—"

"I can't. I'm so fidgety I must talk or I'll shriek."

"Well, you'll shut up just the same. Do you hear me?"

I shut up, but my teeth chattered so that Tom stopped at the gate.

"Look here, Nance, are you going to funk? Say it now—yes or no."

That made me mad.

"Tom Dorgan," I said, "I'll bet your own teeth chattered the first time you went in for a thing like this. I'm all right. You'll squeal before I do."

"That's more like. Here's the gate. It's locked. Come, Nance."

With a good, strong swing he boosted me over, handed me the bag of tools and sprang over himself. He looked kind o' handsome and fine, my Tom, as he lit square and light on his feet beside me. And because he did, I put my arm in his and gave it a squeeze.

Oh, Mag, it was so funny, going through Latimer's garden! There was the garden table where I had sat reading and thinking he took me for Miss Omar. There was the bench where that beast Merlway sat sneering at me. The wheeled chair was gone. And it was so late everything looked asleep. But something was left behind that made me think I heard Latimer's slow, silken voice, and made me feel cheap—turned inside out like an empty pocket—a dirty, ragged pocket with a seam in it.

"You'll stay here, Nancy, and watch," Tom whispered. "You'll whistle once if a cop comes inside the gate, but not before he's inside the gate. Don't whistle too soon—mind that—nor too loud. I'll hear ye all right. And I'll whistle just once if—anything happens. Then you run—hear me? Run like the devil—"

"Tommy—"

"Well, what?"

"Nothing—all right." I wanted to say good-by—but you know Tom.

Mag, were you ever where you oughtn't to be at midnight—alone? No. I know you weren't. 'Twas your ugly little face and your hair that saved you—the red hair we used to guy so at the Cruelty. I can see you now—a freckle-faced, thin little devil, with the tangled hair to the very edge of your ragged skirt, yanked in that first day to the Cruelty when the neighbors complained your crying wouldn't let 'em sleep nights. The old woman had just locked you in there, hadn't she, to starve when she fit out. Mothers are queer, ain't they, when they are queer. I never remember mine.

Yes, I'll go on.

I stood it all right for a time, out there alone in the night. But I never was one to wait patiently. I can't wait—it isn't in me. But there I had to stand and just—God!—just wait.

If I hadn't waited so hard at the very first I wouldn't 'a' given out so soon. But I stood so still and listened so terribly hard that the trees began to whisper and the bushes to crack and creep. I heard things in my head and ears that weren't sounding anywhere else. And all of a sudden—tramp, tramp, tramp—I heard the cop's footsteps.

He stopped over there by the swinging electric light above the gate. I crouched down behind the iron bench.

And my coat caught a twig on a bush and its crack—ck was like a yell.

I thought I'd die. I thought I'd scream. I thought I'd run. I thought I'd faint. But I didn't—for there, asleep on a rug that some one had forgotten to take in, was the house cat. I gave her a quick slap, and she flew out and across the path like a flash.

Mag Monahan, if Tom had come out that minute without a bean and gone home with me, I'd been so relieved I'd never have tried again. But he didn't come. Nothing happened. Nights and nights and nights went by, and the stillness began to sound again. My throat went choking mad. I began to shiver, and I reached for the rug the cat had lain on.

Funny, how some things strike you! This was Latimer's rug. I had noticed it that evening—a warm, soft, mottled green that looked like silk and fur mixed. I could see the way his long, white hands looked on it, and as I touched it I could hear his voice—

Oh, Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make,
And ev'n with Paradise devise the Snake;
Is blacken'd—Man's forgiveness give—and take!

Ever hear a man like that say a thing like that? No? Well, it's—it's different. It's as if the river had spoken—or a tree—it's so—it's so different.

That saved me—that verse that I remembered. I said it over and over and over again to myself. I fitted it to the ferry whistles on the bay—to the cop's steps as they passed again—to the roar of the "L" train and the jangling of the surface cars.

And right in the middle of it—every drop of blood in my body seemed to leak out of me, and then come rushing back to my head—I heard Tom's whistle.

Oh, it's easy to say "run," and I really meant it when I promised Tom. But you see I hadn't heard that whistle then. When it came, it changed everything. It set the devil in me loose. I felt as if the world was tearing something of mine away from me. Stand for it? Not Nance Olden.

I did run—but it was toward the house. That whistle may have meant "Go!" To me it yelled "Come!"

I got in through the window Tom had left open. The place was still quiet. Nobody inside had heard that whistle so far as I could tell.

I crept along—the carpets were thick and soft and silky as the rug I'd had my hands buried in to keep 'em warm.

Along a long hall and through a great room, whose walls were thick with books, I was making for a light I could see at the back of the house. That's where Tom Dorgan must be and where I must be to find out—to know.

With my hands out in front of me I hurried, but softly, and just as I had reached the portieres below which the light streamed, my arms closed about a thing—cold as marble, naked—I thought it was a dead body upright there, and with a cry, I pitched forward through the curtains into the lighted room.

"Nance!—you devil!"

You recognize it? Yep, it was Tom. Big Tom Dorgan, at the foot of Latimer's bed, his hands above his head, and Latimer's gun aimed right at his heart.

Think of the pluck of that cripple, will you?

His eyes turned on me for just a second, and then fixed themselves again on Tom. But his voice went straight at me, all right.

"You are something of a thankless devil, I must admit, Miss—Omar," he said.

I didn't say anything. You don't say things in answer to things like that. You feel 'em.

Ashamed, What do I care for a man with a voice like that! But you should have heard how Tom's growl sounded after it.

"Why the hell didn't you light out?"

"I couldn't, Tom. I just—couldn't," I sobbed.

"There seems invariably to be a misunderstanding of signals where Miss Omar is concerned. Also a disposition to use strong language in the lady's presence. Don't you, young man!"

"Don't you call me Miss Omar!" I blazed, stamping my foot.

He laughed a contemptuous laugh.

I could have killed him then, I hated him so. At least, I thought I could; but just then Tom sent a spark out of the corner of his eye to me that meant—it meant—

You know, Mag, what it would have meant to Latimer if I had done what Tom's eye said.

I thought at first I had done it—it passed through my mind so quick; the sweet words I'd say—the move I'd make—the quick knocking-up of the pistol, and then—

It was that—that sight of Tom, big Tom Dorgan, with rage in his heart and death in his hand, leaping on that cripple's body—it made me sick!

I stood there gasping—stood a moment too long. For the curtains were pushed aside and Burnett, Latimer's servant, and the cop came in.

Tom didn't fight; he's no fool to waste himself.

But I—well, never mind about me. I caught a glimpse of a crazy white face on a boy's body in the great glass opposite and heard my own voice break into something I'd never heard before.

Tom stood at last with the handcuffs on.

"It's your own fault, you damned little chump!" he said to me, as they went out.

You lie, Mag Monahan, he's no such thing! He may be a hard man to live with, but he's mine—my Tom—my Tom!

What? Latimer?

Well, do you know, it's funny about him. He'd told the cop that I'd peached—peached on Tom! So they went off without me.

Why?

That's what he said himself when we were alone.

"In order to insure for myself another of your most interesting visits, I suppose, Miss—not Omar? All right. Tell me, can I do nothing for you? Aren't you sick of this sort of life?"

"Get Tom out of jail."

He shook his head.

"I'm too good a friend of yours to do you such a turn."

"I don't want any friend that isn't Tom's."

He threw the pistol from him and pulled himself up, till he sat looking at me.

"In heaven's name, what can you see in a fellow like that?"

"What's that to you?" I turned to go.

"To me? Things of that sort are nothing, of course, to me—me, that 'luckless Pot He marr'd in making.' But, tell me—can a girl like you tell the truth? What made you hesitate when that fellow told you with his eyes to murder me?"

"How did you know?"

"How? The glass. See over yonder. I could watch every expression on both your faces. What was it—what was it, child, that made you—oh, if you owe me a single heart-beat of gratitude, tell me the truth!"

"You've said it yourself."

"What"

"That line we read the other night about 'the luckless Pot.'"

His face went gray and he fell back on his pillows. The strenuous life we'd been leading him, Tom and I, was too much for him, I guess.

Do you know, I really felt sorry I'd said it. But he is a cripple. Did he expect me to say he was big and strong and dashing—like Tom?

I left him there and got out and away. But do you know what I saw, Mag, beside his bed, just as Burnett came to put me out?

My old blue coat with the buttons—the bell-boy's coat I'd left in the housekeeper's room when I borrowed her Sunday rig. The coat was hanging over a chair, and right by it, on a table, was that big book with a picture covering every page, still open at that verse about—

Through this same Garden—and for one in vain!

RUSSIA'S CHIEF CENSOR.

Highest Intelligence and Learning Are Requisites for Those Who Revise Newspaper Reports.

St. Petersburg.—Michael de Krivochlik, the chief censor of Russia, has been keeping an eye many years on all newspapers entering and published in this country. He had power to strike out anything which he considered dangerous for the Russian people to know, and his authority was so great that he was privileged to cut out paragraphs from foreign newspapers intended for the personal use of the czar.

DE KRIVOCHLIK.

Krivochlik is one of the brightest and most learned of Russians. His title is director of the journal of the prefecture.

The recent decree of the czar to abolish the censorship of the press will relieve Krivochlik of a great deal of his responsibility. The new Russian press law is similar to that enforced in Germany, newspapers are allowed to print almost anything, but the editors are made responsible for everything appearing in their papers.

Foreigners cannot imagine the system of censorship prevailing in Russia. One has to observe at close range the effect of the system on the daily press. It is seldom that any paper appears on the streets here or in any place in Russia without great black spots blotting out sections, and even whole columns.

The censorship now is not as rigorous as it once was, but it still is a great force. News gets out of Russia that is not allowed to see the light of day within its borders. To the foreigner the system is not easily explained, for type is blotted out that would seem to have no bearing on the internal affairs; sometimes the most innocent of items disappear because they would set the readers to thinking. For instance, an eclipse of the moon might lead the superstitious to imagine that some hard blow was to be struck to the empire.

The system requires, it is plain, the highest intelligence and learning on the part of those who revise the press reports, and even then the job is not a bed of roses, for some one high in authority will be found objecting to items that have not been blotted out.

VANDALISM IN ITALY.

Galileo's "Star Tower" Defaced to Make a Restaurant—Of Historical Interest.

Florence.—For centuries a conspicuous object on the beautiful hill of Arceti, above Florence, the famous "Star tower" of Galileo, where the great astronomer made many of his most important discoveries, is now practically ruined. What goes by the name of commercial enterprise is responsible for this act of vandalism which robs the world of another of its historic places of pilgrimage. The picturesque structure has been swathed in scaffolding, while workmen have been cutting down the quaint castellated tower by a third of its former height, piercing its walls with two new tiers of windows and adding a loggia. When the vulgar desecration is completed, in place of the venerable tower, surrounded by luxuriant masses of wild flowers, will appear an ugly conglomeration of anachronisms, standing in the dreary waste of a new made garden and devoted to the purposes of a cafe and restaurant.

GALILEO'S "STAR TOWER."

"To the Anglo-Saxon race," says one writer, who has protested too late against the destruction of the historic monument, "Galileo's tower possessed a special interest, in that it was the scene of the classic meeting between John Milton and the great Italian astronomer. Indeed, in the whole history of science and literature there is no incident more picturesque or affecting than this introduction of the Puritan poet, young and vigorous, with his brain teeming with conceptions for his mighty epic, to the Florentine sage, blind, old and persecuted for affirming the great truths of the solar system."

Measuring Waves.

The Atlantic waves have been carefully measured for the Washington hydrographic bureau. In height, the waves usually average about 30 feet, but in rough weather they attain from 40 to 48 feet. In storms they are often from 500 to 600 feet long, and last ten or 11 seconds, while the longest yet known measured half a mile, and did not spend itself for 23 seconds.

BADLY INJURED BY FALL FROM TROLLEY

GUILLEMO THORN MEETS WITH ACCIDENT RETURNING FROM TRIP.

Guillermo Thorn, the well known photographer, lies at his home on East Second street in a serious condition as a result of falling from a trolley car nearly opposite his residence last night. Just exactly how the accident occurred has not yet been made clear as the victim has been semi-conscious most of the time since. He was very badly cut about the head, one gash requiring seven stitches, and it is believed he is injured internally. Dr. J. H. Buchanan is the attending physician.

Mr. Thorn had ben spending the past wek with relatives at Troy, N. Y., and was returning home when the mishap befell him. Just as the car reached the trolley station west of Berckman street he left his seat to step on the running board at the same time signalling the conductor to stop. The next instant he disappeared and when the crew looked around he was lying in the road. He was picked up unconscious and remained in that way until late last night. Owing to his advanced age his condition is regarded as serious.

HIS WHEEL WRECKED AND HIS HEAD BROKEN

THEN ITALAIN THOUGHT IT TIME TO RETALIATE—MAKES GUNPLAY.

One of the Standard Oil Company wagons, driven by Augustus Frumerie, ran into a bicycle ridden by an Italian on Washington street Saturday afternoon. The Italian was thrown down and his wheel was wrecked.

When he got on his feet he relieved his feelings with sundry remarks. Frumerie got down from the wagon, according to eyewitnesses, and hit the Italian over the head with the butt end of his whip. The blows broke the Italian's head and blood ran down his face in streams.

He shook the blood out of his eyes and drew a revolver. He fired two shots and Frumerie dropped his whip. The Italian turned and ran toward Fanwood. The onlookers say he fired the shots downward making no attempt to his his assailant.

The police did not hear of the affair until three hours later, when people in the neighborhood told Officer Kelly. The Italian is believed to be in Fanwood. The police know him as Luigi; he lives at 329 Cottage place.

YELLED MURDER AT A WEDDING FEAST

LOUIS COULDN'T FIND HIS HAT AND HOWLED FOR HELP.

For unseemly behavior at a wedding feast, Louis Behr, of West Third street, was fined inthe City Court this morning. He was arrested in the Schepflin building last night, during the reception that followed a marriage in the synagogue on New street.

Louis succumbed to the effects of frequent nuptial and friendly tasting. Finding things too dull for his fevered mind, Louis went for his hat to go away in search of livelier scenes. Louis couldn't find the hat, and immediately raised a sinful fuss. He was offered a substitute by an obliging guest, but he would have none of it. His fussing increased in violence until the guests couldn't stand him any longer. Several husky and able ones grabbed Louis and ran him toward the door. Louis immediately conceived the idea that his life was in danger and yelled "murder," "police," and "help," with all his vocal might.

The bouncers, appalled, stopped throwing Louis out, but he kept on yelling. His howls were heard at the police headquarters and as far south as Third street. When they penetrated the cop stronghold Roundsman Flynn hotfooted it to the hall.

Louis stopped yelling when Flynn got him. He was hustled to jail, and the wedding guests heaved a united sigh of relief. Before Judge Runyon this morning Louis denied that he was drunk.

"I was strong in mine feet and I had mine senses too, but dot was a three-dollar hat. Could I lose such a thing like that and not say something, yes?"

"Well, what you did say and do will cost you $5 or 20 days in jail," said the Magistrate unfeelingly. Louis sadly paid.

HEBREW BANKERS TO LEND TO RUSSIA

PEACE TO THE JEWS MAY COME FROM IT.

Portsmouth N. H., Aug. 14—With the arrival here today of Jacob H. Schiff, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Messrs. Seligman and Strauss, of the Wall street banking house of J. & W. Seligman & Co., a new angle has come into the outlook for a successful issue to the peace conference now going on between the envoys of Russia and Japan.

"Is the settlement of the war only a financial proposition after all?" is the question asked here today on all sides.

Honor, patriotism, national pride, humanitarianism, have been catch words here among those unofficially engaged in settling the Russo-Japanese difficulties. But now that the conferees have buckled down to real work the bankers are called in.

Th envoys and their secretaries had departed for the Navy Yard and were busy discussing the question of Japan's protectorate over Corea before the distinguished financiers reached here. It is announced that they are here to consult with M. Witte and Baron Rosen regarding the negotiation of a loan to the Russian Government, but there is no official authority for this statement and it seems strange on its face, inasmuch as Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have had the handling in America of the last two Japanese loans.

The fire was then held. It is estimated by officers of the company that the damage will exceed $10,000.

BOSSES DISTRIBUTE THE PLUMS, SAYS MR. LIEFKE

He Declares "Leaders" are Arrogant and Tyrannical.

ARRAIGNS MACHINE

Must Applicant "See a Certain Individual?"—Report That Some Councilmen Are to be Turned Down.

The following communication has been received from Henry Liefke, a prominent real estate man and large property holder:

Editor, The Daily Press:

"Mr. L. V. F. Randolph certainly hit the nail squarely on the head in his outspoken opposition to Plainfield's present system of political bossism. It is time that our citizens united in one solid front against the machine. If it is true, as currently reported, that a man who wishes appointment in any city department has to 'see' a certain individual before his application will even be considered, the matter deserves attention. No one who knows anything about the methods of the local machine can fail to observe the arrogance and political tyranny of the so-called 'leaders' toward their helpers in case matters are not to their liking.

"The reference in Mr. Randolph's communication to the fact that these self-appointed 'leaders' plan and distribute public offices is far too true, And still, citizens who know the truth sit back and take no active steps toward having a voice in the affairs of their own city. The 'leaders' seem to have no particular objection to the presence of two or three independent men in the Council—they never have had absolute control of all the wards—but when a majority of the councilmen are not under machine dictation the bosses get busy.

"It is common report that the machine has declared that certain members of the Council whose terms expire this year shall not go back. Among those who are reported to be under the ban are the men who brought the question of municipal ownership of the water plant to a focus, who are trying to secure a much-needed fire-house in the East End, who succeeded in raising the license fee to $1,000, who kept at the water company until it actually began the long promised water main on South Second street from Clinton to Rock avenues, and who compelled the Public Service to live up to its contract and run fifteen (15) minute cars on Arlington avenue. What have the bosses got against these men? It would seem to the average citizen that they were doing faithful work for the best interests of the city.

"The bosses have had things their own way for years because—and only because—they have done as they pleased at the primaries and have absolutely controlled the entire election machinery of the city. How long will this continue? Not one day longer if the independent citizens of Plainfield will get together and nominate men whom they know to be free from machine control.

"Henry Liefke."

SKIRT FACTORY OWNER WAS BURIED TODAY

SAMUEL HERZIG PASSED AWAY AT HIS NEW YORK HOME.

Samuel Herzig, who with Edward Kapp, established the skirt facory in the rink building on Watchung avenue, died Saturday morning at his home, 108 Central Park West, New York. He had been ill but a few days and his death was entirely unexpected. The factory was closed yesterday but will reopen tomorrow the funeral taking place from his late home this morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Herzig had resided in this country for many years and was known in the metropolis as a successful business man. He had operated factories in various parts of the country and finally centered his interests with Edward Kapp at Dover. The plant soon outgrew the town and in 1900 was removed to this city.

The firm was known as Herzig & Kapp, but several months ago the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Kapp engaging in business in New York. Mr. Herzig took several associates in conducting the local plant and it is now known as Herzig & Company. It will probably be continued as such until the estate is closed.

Mr. Herzig leaves a widow, who is quite well known in Plainfield, having visited here with her husband on many occasions.

STANBERY JURY DISAGREE

TO START SUIT AGAIN

Auto Owner Displays Strong Emotion On the Stand—Jurymen Wrestle With Evidence for Three Hours.

After wrestling for three hours with the testimony the jury in the suit of Oscar Harrison against William R. Stanbery, for $200 in compensation for the loss of his horse and wagon, which opened in Justice Von Minden's court yesterday morning, was discharged last night as hopelessly divided. A second suit will be brought by Harrison. The case went into the jury's hands at 5:30 o'clock. They were discharged at 8:30.

Court reconvened after the noon recess at 2 o'clock. Five witnesses were presented by the plaintiff, and the defense put on eight. A crowd as large as the one that attended the morning session was present. Boys and men; unable to get into the courtroom, still hung outside the open door and windows.

There was one intensely dramatic feature to the session. The testimony of Stanbery was marked by a display of emotion rarely seen in justice court cases. It was noticed all through the trial that the automobilist's face worked whenever reference was made to features of the accident that recalled the death of Mrs. Westphal, and when he told the story of the accident himself his emotion appeared to be almost too strong to control Twice he broke down, and the thread of his testimony was interrupted while he recovered himself.

The first witness called after court reconvened was Michael Boyle, of Dunellen, an eye-witness. He testified that Stanbery was on the wrong side of the road and that Harrison was on the right.

Elmer Howell, of Brooklyn, a summer resident of this city, testified that Stanbery passed a runabout he was driving to the city just before the accident. The automobile, he swore, cut sharply across the path.

James Greenhouse, who lives near the scene of the accident, swore that Stanbery was on the left side of the road, and that Harrison was on the right side.

Theodore Voorhees another resident of the vicinity, testified to going over the scene of the accident a few minutes after it occurred, and described the course of the tracks.

Joseph Cullom, an employee at the Central Railroad roundhouse, a short distance away from the scene of the crash, testified to seeing the auto and carriage come together. He said Stanbery was on the left side of the road and that the runabout was on the right side. He said he saw Stanbery drinking out of a black bottle after the smashup. Mrs. Voorhees also swore to seeing the motorist drink out of a black bottle.

This closed the plaintiff's case in direct testimony. The defence opened with Chauncey Martin, a trolley conductor, and George Staller, a motorman. They swore that they saw a horse and carriage go by them about the time of the accident, in that neighborhood, at a rapid rate.

F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, proved a map of the scene. After him Stanbery took the stand.

He told the story of the accident in detail. The first warning he had of the runabout's approach, he testified, was a cry from Mrs. Westphal. "Look out!" the witness said she cried, "here comes a runaway." Then he turned to the right, and the runabout crashed into the left side of his machine. He described the damage done to the automobile to support the contention that the driver ran into him. The shaft, he said, pierced the side of the auto and pushed up the seat. A picture was shown to illustrate this bit of testimony. He denied he had been drinking through the day. The only intoxicating drink he had had, he swore, was a milk punch in the morning. He testified that his speed was slow.

Under cross examination Stanbery's testimony was unshaken. His display of emotion appeared to have considerable weight with the jury.

Following Stanbery's testimony a five-minute recess was taken. Lawyers, court attendants and audience needed the rest. The room was close and the tediousness of the proceedings was plainly affecting everyone.

When the trial was resumed Dr. Platt, who attended Mrs. Westphal after the accident, was called. He started to describe the wounds in detail, but Attorney Hetfield objected to the gruesome testimony. Mr. Swackhamer said he wanted to prove that the dead woman was struck on the left side. Mr. Hetfield said he would grant that to avoid the necessity for recounting the hurts to which the victim succumbed. The

RUSHING THE WORK ON NEW THEATRE

SCENERY ARRIVES AND DECORATORS ARE AT WORK.

Although there is no doubt as to the opening taking place on time several gangs of men worked until late last night on the new theatre in order to complete various parts for other purposes. The scenery arrived yesterday and the contractors are anxious to get the stage cleared in order to get it placed and for that reason the electricians were busy out of hours installing lights. The decorators also remained at work and the greater part of the ornamental plaster board is now in position. Word was received yesterday that the seats had been shipped and that they would be in Plainfield in a day or so.

Manager Counihan has been having lots of fun the past week with several well known Plainfielders who insisted not long since that the theatre would never be ready by August 24. They made vigorous wagers to back up their opinion and the genial manager took every one that was offered. Now that it is easy to be seen that the house will be completed on time it is a different story and Mr. Counihan has "guyed" them without restraint.

The management wishes it made plain that the scale of prices for the first night is not to be maintained. The first rows in the orchestra for "The County Chairman" were made $2.50 because of the magnitude of the company. It includes some of the highest salaried artists in the profession and was secured by Mr. Counihan at great expense. The same prices were charged for the initial performance in Music Hall and it was only a choral concert. After the first night the prices will be scaled according to the attraction with $1.50 as the possible highest figure.

The lowest priced seats for "The County Chairman" are fifty cents and they will be placed on sale within a few days. A feature of the house is the fact that the stage can be seen fully from any part of the orchestra, balcony or gallery. The gallery is to be reached by an entrance separate from the lobby. For the opening night the theatre is to be lavishly decorated with flowers.

EASY ON THE VETERAN.

Spanish-American War Soldier Forgiven for a Jag by City Judge.

John Murphy, of Germastown, arrested yesterday for drunkenness and suspected of having stolen ten boxes of honey found in his possession, vindicated himself with the signal success in the city court this morning. John, sobered and repentant, discloses John, sobered and repentant, discloss possessor of the honey, but a battle-scarred veteran of the Spanish-American War. John described with a minuteness of detail that left no room for doubt the operations at El Caney, where he was wounded four times.

"I served the country honest and faithful," said John appealingly, "And I ain't never been behind prison bars before. Couldn't you overlok this, Judge."

Judge Runyon decided that a man who serves his country honest and faithful is entitled to an occasional and harmless jag. John was sent away, grateful and rejoicing, with his boxes of honey under his arm.

SPOT ON LUNA.

Partial Eclipse Darkens Lower Edge of the Moon For Two Hours.

There was a partial eclipse of the moon last night. The spectacle was not impressive enough to reward the watchers who stared upward is this vicinity for two reasons. Even at the time of greatest obscuration, 10:41 o'clock, not more than a third of the lunar disc was hidden in the earth's shadow, and there were clouds enough in the sky to make the view unsatisfactory at most times. It showed enough, however, to prove the almanac predictions true.

The eclipse began at 9.39 o'clock and ended exactly two hours later. The shadow infringed on the lower edge of the moon, advancing from the southeast and leaving it on the southwest. It was generally observed, but created little comment.

Last Call of the Season.

Asbury Park and Ocean Grove are the most popular resorts on the New Jersey coast and tomorrow will be the last time this season that you will have the opportunity to visit them at small cost. Go with the excursion of Warren chapel Sunday-school and enjoy the bathing, the music, Wesley lake and the multitudinous attractions of the two places. The train leaves the North Avenue station at 8 o'clock and begins the return trip at 6, giving you a full day at the shore.

DECIDE AGAINST FARMER

City Solicitor of Trenton Says Long Reward Goes to Police.

SCORES VAN NUIS.

Declares His Assistance of the Fugitive Murderer Precludes Him From Reward Alone.

City Solicitor Bird, of Trenton, has filed an adverse opinion on Franklin Van Nuis' claim to the reward offered for Charles Long's capture. He says the Plainfield policemen who made the arrest are clearly entitled to the money. The opinion is formal and official and settles the question definitely as far as the $250 offered by the city of Trenton is concerned. Opinion as to the money offered by the County of Mercer has not yet been filed by County Prosecutor Crossley, but he will undoubtedly decide as the city solicitor did.

The opinion scores Van Nuis for sheltering Long and hindering the police, and declares for that reason alone he would not be entitled to the reward, but cites authorities to prove that the actual capture as demanded under the terms of the reward circular was made by Chief Kiely and his men. The solicitor is of the opinion that Van Nuis' actions during the hunt for Long would preclude him from suing and recovering the reward.

In part the opinion is as follows:

"It must be conceded, I think, that the taking of Long was the result of the active work of the Plainfield police, and not of the passive conduct of the claimant Van Nuis, although such conduct undoubtedly contributed towards this result.

"The word 'apprehension,' as employed in the circular letter issued by order of William J. Crossley, prosecutor of pleas of this county, is used in a legal sense and means 'To seize a person for the purpose of taking him before a magistrate to answer for some offense alleged to be committed by him.' This the claimant did not do.

"Apprehension means manual caption, and it seems that nothing short of this fills the full measure of the word. The same construction is given to the phrase 'apprehend and pursue.' Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law (2d Ed.), Vol. 24, page 948, and cases cited.

"This interpretation of the meaning of the word 'apprehension' is supported by the cases of Shuey vs. U. S., 92 U. S. 73 and Lovejoy vs. Atchinson, &c., R. Co., 53 Mo. App. 386.

"Again in the cases of Burke vs. Wells Fargo Co., 50 Cal. 218, and Austin vs. Milwaukee Co., 24 Wis. 278, it is held that 'The giving of information leading to an arrest will not constitute an arrest.'

"The conduct of this claimant in relation to the work of pursuing and apprehending Long has been such as would, in my opinion, preclude him from suing for and recovering the reward offered, but as he did not 'apprehend' the prisoner (and is therefore not entitled to the reward, for that reason) a consideration of this matter is not essential to the disposition of this question.

"Upon this principle and authority I am of the opinion that Franklin Van Nuis is not entitled to the reward offered by the City of Trenton and advise accordingly."

BAND LEADER BENEFIT ON FRIDAY NIGHT

MAYOR SMALLEY ARRANGES THE CONCERT.

At the suggestion of Mayor Smalley and other boroughites who have been instrumental in providing the weekly band concerts, the one Friday night is to be made a benefit for Leader Ben LaVere. It is to be given the popular bandmaster in recognition of his untiring efforts in securing the musicians and soloists and his general activity for the cause. He has been conducting local concerts for many years and without recompense, frequently going to great expense in getting new music.

The coming concert will be made unusually elaborate and will include a display of fireworks as well. Arrangements for the latter have been perfected and representatives of one of the big manufacturing companies will have charge. There are to be bombs and set pieces between every instrumental selection and no waits from beginning to end.

The soloists will be four in number and will include Miss Nellie Florede, the well-known vaudeville artist who appeared at Saengerbund hall in connection with the band concert entertainment last winter. She will sing two selections and others will be provided by "Billy" Redmond, "Billy" Murray and "Lew" Leever, the favorite trio. Beside the vocalists, John S. Lelick, the famous cornettist, will return after a week's absence through filling an engagement at Proctor's Newark Theatre.

All told this collection of artists, the fireworks and the fact that the proceeds are to be donated Mr. La Vere should result in bringing out a record breaking crowd. On account of the big expense the admission fee to the grandstand will be made fifteen cents. In the event of rain the programme will be given Monday night.

PROF. LOWANDA'S BIG TRAINING BARN BURNS

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING SUNDAY AND COMPLETELY DESTROYED.

The fire at Sebring's Mills Sunday evening was not on the Totten place, as reported yesterday, but on the country place of Professor Lowanda, the well-known circus rider and performer. Lightning struck the large barn which he had built as a place for training horses and it was completely destroyed together with its contents and two valuable watch dogs, chained to the structure. The place adjoins the Sebring homestead and the latter was threatened several times.

A hose was run from the four-way hydrant near the Sebring corner by Charles Sebring and he managed to keep his buildings sufficiently wet down until the arrival of the recently organized Lincoln Hose Company. The members reached the scene in remarkably quick time and did excellent work in protecting the surrounding property. The members were commanded by Assistant Chief Abram Gulick.

Professor Lowanda is at present with Hargreaves circus and was the man who showed the ponies in the ring when the circus appeared here two weeks ago.

The building was covered by insurance but the contents were not.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Thieves visited three local houses in the early hours Saturday morning. They made a haul in but one house, being frightened away in the other places. Dr. M. J. Whitford was the victim. The thieves got into his house through an unlatched window, and stole a watch and chain and a small amount of money from a pair of trousers. The trousers were in the doctor's bed-room, but he slept undisturbed through the raid. At A. F. Sampson's house the thieves were frightened away by Mr. Sampson's dogs. They were heard running down the road as the dogs barked. The third attempt was made at George Caske's house. Mr. Caske sleeps on the ground floor, and he heard the thieves fumbling at the window. He jumped out of bed and took up a revolver. The thieves heard him moving and fled. He fired at them, but there was no indication that the shots took effect. As usual, there is no trace of the identity of the marauders.

Rev. L. C. Randolph, who accompanied the great World's Sunday-school convention to Palestine last year, delivered a highly interesting lecture on the Holy Land at the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night. It was enjoyed by a large audience. The subject of Mr. Randolph's discourse was "In the Footsteps of Christ in Palestine." A number of views illustrated it. A generous silver offering was contributed. Mr. Randolph gave his lecture in response to a personal request from Rev. H. N. Jordan, the pastor, who is a close friend.

With the material the local ball club now has, the local cranks should be able to see some good games on the home diamond once more. Saturday's game with a score of 2 to 0 was fast enough for most anyone.

That drunk who created all the excitement on the 4 o'clock trolley to Plainfield Sunday afternoon, surely didn't get loaded here. It hardly seems possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Feils, of East Sixth street, have been visiting Mrs. Feils' parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Frentz, of Westfield avenue.

Miss Lilly Frazer, of Newark, is spending several weeks with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, of Front street.

Only about three weeks more and school will reopen, much to the regret of the younger generation in town.

The Old Guards have about decided on the last Sunday in the month as the date for their second clambake.

Robert Jahn has returned from a week's outing, enjoying the ocean breezes at Asbury Park.

Mrs. Isaac Ryno has been entertaining her mother from Westfield over Sunday.

HER 102D BIRTHDAY.

"Aunt Sallie" Doremus Strong and Active.

Boonton, N. J., Aug. 15—Mrs. Sarah Hall Doremus, or "Aunt Sallie" Doremus, as she is better known to all the people in this vicinity, was one hundred and two years old Sunday. "Aunt Sallie" is a remarkably healthy woman for her age, but does not stand excitement very well, and the presence of strangers seems to upset her. For this reason her birthday celebration is confined to the members of her immediate family.

Mrs. Doremus has lived on the old homestead at Parsippany, about two miles from here, and which is her present home, ever since she was married—eighty-one years ago. Her husband died many years ago. Her son, Abram Doremus, with whom she lives, has celebrated his golden wedding.

"Aunt Sallie" is still active and needs but little assistance. Only a short time ago she visited Boonton and rode about town. When she was one hundred years old she thought she had not long to stay in the world, and that her time would soon come, but now she believes she has a good number of years ahead of her.

Mrs. Doremus has two children living, Abram, of Parsippany, and Mrs. John Broadwell, of Newark. There are eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildern.

She was born in Paramus. She has relatives scattered about the State. William H. Plumley, a well-known resident of East Orange, is a nephew, and Recorder Elijah Doremus, of East Orange, is also a relative.

TO MAKE TOTS GO TO SLEEP.

How many ways are there of getting the wee ones to sleep! One mother, of whom a friend was telling me, always walked the floor with her little one until sleep came to him. Another one I knew always lay down with her child to get her to visit the land of dreams. In another household a little maiden of five was always expected to rock the baby to sleep. In still another the mother let the child take its naps in her arms and it lay close beside her at night. She had lost one little one when it was a small child, and she could never bear to have this baby out of her arms longer than was absolutely necessary. I felt much sympathy for this mother, for there is a little grave that holds one of these precious little ones, that was, oh, so dear to me, says an exchange.

But I wonder how little ones are ever broken of such habits, and have thought how much better it would be for mother and babe if the child were taught to go to sleep, from the first, in a sensible way.

In the first place always let baby have her own little bed. She will sleep just as well if kept warm, and it is much better for her than sleeping in a bed with older persons, inhaling the poisonous air under the covers.

One mother who had a large family once told me she had always had each baby sleep with the dear little head resting on her during the night. Another time I heard her complaining that there was no strength left in her arm and wondering why.

Always insist on the little ones retiring early in the evening. Besides being better for the child, it affords the mother time for needed rest and recreation. Do not romp or play with the little ones just before sleepy time comes, as they will go to sleep much better if the brain is kept quiet.

Do not always be saying, "Hush, the baby is asleep," when the little one is taking a nap. She will soon become accustomed to ordinary sounds if everything goes on as usual.

Up the Hudson.

On Thursdays, July 27, August 10 and 24, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will run its usual midsummer excursion to the "Upper Hudson," under personal escort. Special excursion tickets will be sold on these dates for regular trains arriving at Jersey City prior to 10:05 a. m., good to return on same day on any regular train leaving Jersey City after arrival of steamer. A stop will be made at West Point, giving those who disembark an hour and a half at that point, and enabling them to view the United States Military Academy. In order to insure an early return, no stop will be made at Newburgh, although the steamer will run to a point off that city and there turn. Round-trip rates: Princeton, $2.00; New Bunswick, Metuchen, and Perth Amboy, $1.00; Rahway, 80 cents; Elizabeth, 75 cents; Newark, 50 cents. Proportionate rates from other points. 7 18 oaw td

Months to Marry.

June is first choice.

In Holland girls prefer to become blushing brides in May.

About an eighth of Scotch marriages take place in June.

One-seventh of the Swedish marriages occur in "the month of roses."

Germany favors April, regarding it as the first of the spring months.

February is the first choice in Italy, especially in the period preceding the beginning of Lent.

Russia's favorite marriage month is January.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donley, of East Sixth street, leave tomorrow for Atlantic City to spend two weeks.

Mrs. Isaac Kennedy and daughter, Miss Edna Kennedy, have returned from a two weeks' stay at Asbury Park.

There must be at least thirty-six entries for this match. There will be twelve prizes, ranging from the first, a gold medal and $60, to the twelfth, a bronze medal and $5. Individuals making the highest aggregate at the different ranges will receive prizes.

Crack pistol shots will find the national pistol match all that can be desired. There will be slow fire, timed fire and rapid fire. The twelve prizes will range from a gold medal and $30 for the first prize to a bronze medal and $10 for the twelfth. Competitors making the highest aggregate on the different ranges will get medals and cash prizes.

The National match will excite the greatest interest of the meeting. New York won it last year, at Fort Riley, Kan., after an exciting struggle. The match will be open to teams of twelve men from the army, navy, marine corps, military and naval academies and the National Guard of the several States. The slow fire will be at 200, 600, 800 and 1,000 yards. The rapid fire will be at 200 and 500 yards, and there will be two skirmish runs. The team making the highest aggregate will take the national trophy and $300 in cash; the team making the second highest aggregate will take the Hilton trophy and $200 in cash; the team making the third highest aggregate will get the "Soldier of Marathon" and $150 in cash; the fourth prize will be $100; the fifth prize $75, and the sixth $50. Each competitor on the winning team will receive a medal.

The Columbia trophy, for which the New Jersey National Guard will shoot, was the gift of the District of Columbia. Teams of six men will shoot for it at 200, 600 and 1,000 yards, with one skirmish run. There will be three prizes—the trophy and $100 for first, $50 for the second and $25 for the third.

The Dryden trophy is one of the finest of prizes. It was presented by United States Senator John F. Dryden, of Newark, and cost $4,000. The match will be open to teams of eight men. The distances will be 200, 600 and 1,000 yards, and it is required that every competitor shall have performed 75 per cent. of military duty. The first prize will be the trophy and $150; the second prize will be $100, and the third prize $50. The New Jersey State team won the trophy in 1904.

Teams of six men will shoot in the regimental team match, one of the most interesting of the tournament. It will be shot at 300 and 600 yards. The first prize will be the Interstate trophy and $150; the second prize will be $75; the third $50, and the fourth $25. In the years 1903 and 1904 the match was won by the team of the First Regiment of New Jersey, with headquarters at Newark.

The Hale match will be shot at 600 yards, squadded competition for a trophy presented by Robert S. Hale, of Boston, Mass. There will be twelve prizes ranging from $25, and the trophy for the first, to the twelfth, $5. The National Rifle Association will also give $50 additional to the winner. The matches for the Wimbledon and Leech cups will both attract plenty of riflemen as will also the president's match, which was won last year by Howard Gensch, of the First Regiment.

The executive officer of the national match will be Brigadier General William P. Hall. The other officers of the tournament will be Brigadier General Bird W. Spencer, inspector general of rifle practice of New Jersey, executive officer; Lieutenant Albert S. Jones, post adjutant; Captain William Libbey and Captain Charles Reynolds, assistant statistical officer; Captain Alvin H. Graff, of the First Regiment, Newark, post quartermaster. The committee on competition is composed of General William P. Hall, General Bird W. Spencer, General George H. Harries, District of Columbia; General Lawrason Riggs, of Maryland; Colonel Frank Y. Paterson, of Pennsylvania; Lieutenant Albert S. Jones and J. A. Haskell, of New York.

AMUSEMENTS.

Keith's has another big comedy bill scheduled for the week of August 21. Every act on the programme is a tried and approved laugh-producer of the highest proof, and will be literally "more than a box of monkeys." For, by special arrangement with Barnum & Bailey's, Galletti's Dog and Monkey Circus, one of the greatest animal acts in the world, will on that date begin a brief vaudeville tour at the Union Square. Miss Mignonette Kokin, daughter of the celebrated Prince Kokin, will re-appear in her singing and dancing specialties. Leona Bergere, sister of Miss Valerie Bergere, is the feminine feature of the Jorsky-Bergere Co. presenting the screaming one act farce, "Je, She and He," while Vistor Moore and Emma Littlefield are making their farewell appearance in vaudeville with their laughable traversty on variety, entitled "Change Your Act" or "Back to the Woods." The Marvellous Merrills, America's cleverest comedy cyclists, will uphold the athletic end of the bill; May Duryea and W. A. Mortimer present "The Imposter;" Dixon and Anger appear as "The Baron and His Friend," while the Barrett Bros. have a bunch of Hibernian bon mots and songs. The Kinetograph, with funny pictures, which has become a strong feature, is interesting to old and young.

The Historic Hudson.

The Hudson River has a renowned reputation in more ways than one. Its business interests are more widely known than any other stream, while for excursions and outings it has no equal. There are sights galore—the palisades—the U. S. Military Academy at West Point—the far famed State Prison at Sing Sing and interesting Newburg. The scenery in every direction is superb and the steamers which convey the excursionists are commodious and comfortable. On August 17, 1905, the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its popular low-rate excursions up the Hudson, the rate for the round trip to be $1, children, 50 cents, and special train leaving Plainfield at 8:46 a. m., will connect at Jersey City station with famous steamer "St. Johns" for the trip. Don't forget date of train time. 8 11 td

WEALTH FOR HEIRS HERE

A Tale That Reads Like A Chapter of Fiction.

WORMAN ESTATE.

Vast Possession Said to Await Claimants—Why Elizabeth Man Visits Europe Suddenly.

When Councilman Bernard J. Higgins, of Elizabeth, left New York for London last Tuesday he carried with him, it is alleged, the details of a story of thrift, cupidity and wealth seldom surpassed in the world of romance. He is to use his information in an effort to secure a prize of a vast estate for an association of the heirs of Christopher Worman, a silk manufacturer, who died at an advanced age in London, leaving an estate and a large amount of money which has now increased to an immense sum.

Harvey E. Worman, of Elizabeth, who is employed in the blacksmith shop of the Singer Manufacturing Company, is the secretary of the association, which numbers about fifty heirs of the deceased manufacturer.

In the latter part of the 18th century Christopher Worman, by years of toil and patient industry, had grown to be the leading silk merchant of the British metropolis. Almost in the shadow of the famous London bridge his dingy office faced the entrance to that structure. It was the official of his great manufacturing establishment covering almost the entire area of the square which he owned. He had entered the real estate field too, and owned several other large blocks of property in the city limits.

In sharp contrast to the life of Christopher was that of his brother John, who, of a shiftless and erring disposition, failed to make a success in England and finally came to America. While John did not believe in devoting all his energies to the accumulation of wealth, he was secretly proud of the achievements of his brother, and while he envied him and longed for a time to come when he should fall heir to the vast estate, although he was some years older than Christopher. He hoped the latter would die as he had lived most of his life, a bachelor.

The fates, however, brought Christopher and a bright young English maid together and they married. John had settled in Pennsylvania when he heard of the marriage, and, deeply chagrined, he awaited developments, tormented by the fear that an heir would be born to the couple. He had himself married and was the father of a son whom he named John.

In the course of a year he learned that Christopher also had a son who was also named John. The young mother died, but the boy lived, and as he grew in strength his Uncle John laid plans to do away with him. He finally decided on kidnapping him. He went to Europe, and, visiting the home of his brother, managed to get possession of the boy and fled with him to Pennsylvania. Thousands of dollars Christopher is said to have spent in fruitless efforts to recover his child, until, overcome by grief and broken-hearted, he died in 1780.

His entire fortune he left to the boy, but it was so tied up that in the event of the failure of provisions made in the will for his recovery the fortune would go into chancery until some trace of the boy or his descendants could be found. The kidnapped boy grew to manhood, and died in Warren county, N. J., without learning of the wealth that awaited him in England.

His cousin, the son of John, the kidnapper, remained in Pennsylvania. It is not known that they ever had any intercourse with each other or that the old silk merchant's son ever dreamed of the wealth to which he was the rightful heir until a few years ago the descendants of his cousin formed an association and made an effort to secure possession of the property. This fight was continued until recently, when their legal representative was convinced that he was appearing for the suing branch of the family. The New Jersey branch, which Lawyer Higgins represents, claims to have records that will make their title to the property clear beyond doubt, and it is expected that before another year is over Harvey E. Worman will be one of the multi-millionaires of America.

It is said that several residents of Elizabeth have visited the old Worman mansion and heard there the story of the romance and sorrows of the old silk manufacturer. The Rev. Dr. Thomas E. Vassar, a retired Baptist minister, who is now living on Madison avenue, Elizabeth, is said to have recently visited the mansion and noted the name Worman still visible over the old doorway, where it was inscribed during the life of old Christopher about the time the Continental troops were battling for liberty in Elizabeth, 125 years ago. The mansion and the business block cannot be sold. They are in the care of a crown trust pending the appearance of the rightful heirs.

Miss Ella Coddington, of Grove street, has returned from Harrisburg, Pa., after an absence of two weeks.

RESULTS FROM FILTRATION

Evidence of Its Value Shown in the Water System of One Big City.

Recent statistics of typhoid fever in Philadelphia furnish evidence of the value of the filtration of the water supply which amounts to positive demonstration, says the Philadelphia Ledger. In a portion of West Philadelphia still supplied in part with unfiltered water there were, during four months of the present year, 273 cases of typhoid fever in a population of 140,517, or one in 514. In the adjoining section, supplied entirely from the Belmont filtering plant, there were but seven cases in a population of 41,424, or one in 5,917.

A similar contrast is shown in the northwestern portion of the city. The Germantown and Roxborough district is supplied with filtered water from the Roxborough beds. In this district, with a population of 113,750, there were 37 cases of typhoid fever, or one in 3,074. In two neighboring wards, receiving unfiltered water, in a population of 89,142, there were 132 cases of typhoid, or one in every 675. In the northeastern section, supplied with unfiltered water from the Delaware, 3,035 cases of typhoid fever occurred in a population of 144,906—the appalling proportion of one in 140. The difference between the two extremes of ratio shown by these figures represent, in the whole population, the difference between 9,240 cases of typhoid fever and only 220 cases—or exactly 42 to 1. If we leave the worst results from the unfiltered Delaware out of consideration, we have still the contrast that among 567 people drinking the ordinary water from the Schuylkill there has occurred this year one case of typhoid fever, while there was but one case among 3,526 persons using the same water filtered. In other words, the filtration of water has reduced the liability to typhoid fever 83 per cent.

"Astounding."

"Astounding" is the only word to apply to the statistics of "mysterious disappearances" in London last year. No less than 35,262 cases were notified to the police, and in less than half was any trace of the missing persons discovered. In other words, something like 70 Londoners disappear every day in the year, so completly that nothing more is ever heard of them.

WANT STOKES IN FEDERAL SENATE

PROVISION IN STATE CONSTITUTION MAY PREVENT HIS ELECTION.

Trenton, Aug. 15.—Friends of Governor Stokes who would like to see him lay down the gubernatorial toga to take up the position to be made vacant by United States Senator John F. Dryden, March 4, 1907, are now inquiring into the legality of the constitutional provision which prohibits the legislature from electing the Chief Executive "to any office under the Government of the State or of the United States during the term for which he shall have been elected Governor."

They question the right of the State to endeavor to dictate to the United States Senate as to the qualifications of its members. They believe that if he should be elected by the legislature he would undoubtedly be seated by the Senate and claim to be able to find precedent to warrant their belief.

There is a strong demand for the Governor to stand as a candidate for the senatorial office. State leaders point out that he is well qualified for the office and that he would make a valuable man in the Senate.

Admitting that all this is true and expressing the wish that conditions might be otherwise, a number of other leaders are of the opinion that it would be foolishness, if not worse, for the legislature to think of electing the Governor to the Federal Senate. They point out that the members of the legislature are sworn to support the constitution in its entirety. They also argue that the people of the State have a right to demand that the Governor shall serve them for the full term of three years, to which he is elected.

There is general regret that Governor Stokes is not entirely free to enter the senatorial race. It is remembered that in January, 1902, when Senator Dryden was elected to serve the unexpired term of General William J. Sewell, deceased, the office would have gone to Governor Stokes, then Clerk in Chancery, had he been willing to accept it. As it was he was almost elected against his wishes, receiving within two or three of the necessary vote. He then declared that for business reasons he did not care to go to Washington, but it is believed that conditions are now favorable to his acceptance of such an office.

Although the election of Senator Dryden's successor does not take place until in January, 1907, there is already much interest in the outcome of the campaign which has been started. Friends of Mr. Dryden assert that he is entitled to another term, particularly as he has not served a regular term, being elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Sewell.

It is known, however, that there are several other Jerseymen, in addition to Governor Stokes, who are in line for senatorial honors. Among them are former Governor Franklin Murphy, former First Assistant Postmaster General William M. Johnson and several of the New Jersey Congressmen, including Representatives Howell, Gardner and Loudenslager.

Had a Double Funeral.

The double funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Peter T. Green, who had been married fifty-two years and who died last Thursday within thirteen hours of each other, was held yesterday at their residence in Whitehouse. Rev. S. D. Decker, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated, and was assisted by two former pastors, Rev. George F. Apgar, of Pine Brook, and Rev. E. E. Robinson, of Bound Brook. After the services the bodies were taken to the Methodist cemetery and put in the same grave.

HUNTED ELOPERS WITH HIS SHOTGUN

Phillipsburg, N. J., Aug. 15.—The elopement of little Miss Luella Winters, fifteen years old, with August Reed, forty-five years old, came perilously near ending in a tragedy on Saturday. Some of the neighbors persuaded the girl's father that it would do more harm than good to "fill Reed's skin full of buckshot."

The father of the youthful bride is Spencer Winters, a prosperous farmer living between here and Washington, N. J. Reed was employed as man-of-all-work on his place. Winters never dreamed that there was any billing and cooing going on about his house. But it seems that for several months Reed had been doing more cooing business than anything else on the farm.

They were both aware that the stern Papa Winters would not look kindly upon their attachment, and so they decided to elope. On Friday night the girl smuggled a clothesline into her bedroom, and the moment she heard the snores of Papa Winters she let herself down from her second-story window into the waiting arms of the man-of-all-work.

They went by train to Philadelphia where the thrifty farm hand began to spend with lavish hand the $8.75 he had saved up in the last thirty-two years. Papa Winters hunted all the next day for the elopers. He carried a nice big shotgun, with shells that were loaded with buckshot. But he got no sight of big game. He learned, however, from an obliging ticket agent that his daughter and hired man had bought tickets the night before for Philadelphia. At first he said that was punishment enough, but later changed his mind and went to Philadelphia himself. The neighbors persuaded him that it was not proper to carry a shotgun, and so he left it at home.

But when Farmer Winters got back her today with the elopers he led the hired man behind the barn and had a talk with him, in which he reminded him that he was the crack wing shot of "them diggins," whereupon the farm hand agreed to marry the girl. Papa Winters took them around to the Rev. E. C. Cline and saw the knot properly tied. The man-of-all-work then went home to "do the chores."

NEW YORK LIFE FIRST TO BE INVESTIGATED

THAT IS THE PLAN OF THE ARMSTRONG COMMITTEE.

It is practically settled that the New York Legislative Investigating Committee will first take up the examination of the condition of the New York Life Insurance Company. James McKeen, counsel for the committee, said yesterday that the Western Insurance Commissioners had requested that the committee should begin with the New York Life and that there was a disposition to oblige them.

"The plans of the committee are too indefinite to outline them positively at this time," said Mr. McKeen, "but it is probable that the committee will first give attention to the affairs of the New York Life. The work of this investigation is so broad that, of necessity, there will be much ground to be gone over before the actual sittings of the committee begin. I think that it will be at least two weeks before the committee will be ready to give public hearings."

BRIDE 30 YEARS HIS JUNIOR.

Couple, Both Religious Workers, Met at Religious Services.

Recorder Thomas P. Day, of Nutley, who lacks one year of being a septuagenarian, surprised his friends yesterday by announcing his marriage last Thursday at Ocean Grove to Miss Ida M. Jordan, who is more than thirty years his junior. Mr. Day is a local preacher and his wife is an evangelist.

The couple met several months ago at religious exercises in Ocean Grove. Despite the disparity in ages it was not long before they were engaged.

With her mother, Miss Jordan moved from Ocean Grove to Nutley, taking rooms above the Recorder's office on Chestnut street. Friends and neighbors of Mr. Day never dreamt that "the lady upstairs," whom they saw daily going quietly about, was to soon become his wife. News of the wedding quickly spread and soon Mr. Day's office was filled with friends who came to congratulate him.

IT'S A MODERN MIRACLE.

How the Coachman Keeps His Tall Hat On in the Windiest Weather.

There are three things I have never yet been able to clearly understand, says a writer in the London Graphic. The first is how a train keeps on the rails; the second how a well-staircase endures so long without perpetually collapsing; and the third, which is the most difficult to comprehend of any, how a coachman manages to keep his hat on.

In the stormiest weather—when most hats are taking flight—when it is blowing fiercely and raining vindictively, you may see a coachman driving a pair of spirited horses and both hands so occupied that they could not touch the brim of his topper, and yet he never loses it.

How is this? Does he use some adhesive composition to make it fast to his head, has he an invisible string fastened under his chin, has he some extraordinary method of developing his occipito frontalis so as to render it equal to the occasion, or does he follow the example of the fair sex and run a hatpin through his back hair?

I am sure I cannot tell how this may be. All I know is that in the midst of a blinding deluge and a terrific hurricane you will find his hat securely planted on the top of his head as if it grew there.

JAPANESE DEATH SPIRIT.

To the Soldiers of the Mikado No Dishonor Is Greater Than Failure.

Within the human frame is a power that passes the understandings of boasted scientists of the twentieth century, and the supreme ideal of the Nippon samurai, the yamato damashi, is a spark that does often wake that power, mysterious, unknown, nevertheless real, writes Adachi Kinnosuke, in Leslie's Monthly. The Nippon soldier dies when his life is under the cloud of dishonor, as he sees it. In your way of looking at things you might be superior enough to say to him: "Dear fellow, you are mistaken; there is no dishonor in being prisoners of war." And you might be right. Permit me to remind you of one solid, historic act—your genial and good-natured attitude toward life has never yet produced men of whom, as the circular of the 13th of April, in Gen. Kuroki's camps, has it, is expected the accomplishment of the impossible. Moreover, to the samurai this life is nothing; fulfilling a duty to his own country and to the emperor is everything. No dishonor is greater to a samurai than the failure in accomplishing his work in the discharge of his duty toward his country. In the code of the samurai honor it is written that none would survive dishonor.

SOME GORGEOUS INSECTS.

Beautiful Butterflies and Luminous Beetles Found in South America.

An Englishman, who lives in British Guiana, was in New York visiting his brother, and one evening the conversation turned upon the wonderful South American insects, relates the Tribune.

"I wish that when you go back you'd send me some of those gorgeous butterflies and luminous beetles and things," remarked the New York brother. "I'm interested in them and it must be so easy for you to get them. I suppose you've caught some fine specimens, haven't you?"

The man from Georgetown smiled. "Catch them," he exclaimed; "you don't fancy we trouble ourselves to chase those things. If we wanted any, all I should do would be to call a coolie boy, give him a 'killing bottle'—one with poison in the bottom, you know, to kill them as soon as they're in—and tell him that when he brought the bottle back to me full of fine insects I'd give him ten cents. Of course, a lot of the specimens are broken from being captured and kept in that careless way, but you can always find some perfect ones which make the thing worth while."

SEWING BEES IN COURT.

An American Sewing Machine Proves a Source of Delight to the Chinese Empress.

A French officer who, returning from Manchuria, visited Peking, where he was presented at the imperial court, tells that the dowager empress of China, who had been given an American sewing machine, is so delighted with it that she has decided to order one for every lady at the court and intends to have regular sewing bees in the palace, to which daughters of all the highest mandarins are to be invited and try their skill on the wonderful machines.

The empress is at present even more interested in sewing machines than in the magnificent mausoleum which she is having built for herself and on which she has spent nearly $500,000.

She told the officer that she had no intention of dying for some time yet and that she feels as well as ever. She will continue to be the actual ruler of China until the war between Japan and Russia is ended, but she will then retire and spend the rest of her days in the palace at Eho, which has been almost built over and greatly enlarged to suit her taste.

The Ville Lumiere.

Paris! Paris! No other city knows how to amuse itself. The passing of time, elsewhere so pitiless, here brings nothing but a succession of feast days, which follow so rapidly and closely that one has hardly time to count them.—Journal des Debats.

TOOTH BRUSHES IN SCHOOL

English Writer Would Require All Pupils to Be Furnished with Them.

"In the political economy of nations the toothbrush is of much more importance than the sword, and tooth powder is infinitely more important than gunpowder."

So writes Mrs. John Lane in the Fortnightly Review, in the course of a plea, both amusing and very sensible, for greater care of the teeth than is customary in this country.

The English have not the habit of going to the dentist; money paid to him they consider wasted—there is nothing to show for it.

They still have teeth out rather than stopped (filled) as being cheaper, and when they are all out they replace them on too slight provocation by what American humor calls "store teeth."

Nor are the English supersensitive, and their complacency, which upholds them in more important things, inclines them to believe that if their fathers muddled along with bad teeth, so can they.

If, as it is said, bad teeth are a sign of the degeneracy of a race, then are the sturdy English in a very bad way.

The English, Mrs. Lane points out, used to be always caricatured on the continent as possessing very prominent front teeth. Now they often have no front teeth at all.

And the worst of it is they do not seem to mind.

"If I were one of the powers that be," concludes Mrs. Lane, "I should require all board schools to furnish their pupils with toothbrushes and tooth powder, and I would open the morning session with a general brushing of the teeth. Not only that, but I would have a dentist attached to each school district whose duty it would be to attend to the children's teeth free of charge."

KISSING ADVERTISEMENT.

Paris Restaurants Wherein the Cashier Pays Peculiar Premium on Checks.

In many of the European cafes of the cheaper order it is the invariable custom to print the daily menu on the napkin provided for the guest, so that when the latter desires to study the bill of fare he has to raise his serviette from his knee in order to do so.

But perhaps the most extraordinary custom in connection with restaurant life, says a writer, is that which obtains in a certain little cafe in the suburbs of Paris, where every customer whose bill amounts to one shilling or over is entitled to receive a kiss from the very attractive young lady who acts as cashier to the establishment.

So used has the damsel become to the osculation routine that she goes through it without the slightest reticence, looking upon it purely as a matter of business, and it is reported that the proprietor of the restaurant is more than satisfied with the result of his curious device for attracting patrons.

Another enterprising restaurateur has instituted the practice of making a present of a box of Havana cigars every New Year's day to those patrons who have been pretty regular in their attendance at his establishment during the preceding year.

DON'T USE HARD BRUSH.

The Frequent Cause of Unsound Teeth in Young Persons, Says a Dentist.

"In spite of all that is printed nowadays about the care of the teeth," said an experienced New York dentist, according to the Press, "we should have to go out of business if we depended upon the patronage of men and women who have passed the prime of life. It is a mistake to assume that most of the false teeth are made for old persons. I venture to say that scarcely a day passes that a patient well in the sixties does not come to my office for some slight treatment to an almost perfectly sound set of teeth.

"I have frequently treated men and women past 50 who never had a tooth out, and but one or two slight cavities that required filling. On the other hand, we are repeatedly called upon to make artificial teeth for very young persons. I attribute it to the use of the hard toothbrush, which is a comparatively modern invention. The use of a hard brush, even occasionally, is a great mistake. The softest kind of hogs' bristles makes the best toothbrush."

Splendid Offer.

The chance of his life has come to Robert Mantell. A young woman has written him offering to liven up his productions by playing mouth organ solos between the acts. She says in a letter which he mistook for Volapuk until his leading woman pointed out to him that it was merely advanced spelling—spelling with regard only for sound, not for appearances—that besides being the only mouth-organ artist on the stage, she is handsome, and has her own trunk.—Boston Herald.

In Chicago.

"She's a distant relative of mine."

"Distant! Why, man, she's your wife, isn't she?"

"She was, but she's been married twice since then. She's my wife twice removed."—Boston Traveler.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Mrs. Clara Kennedy, of Rutger's alumnae, has won the first prize in a recent competition for the best place of verse suitable for advertisement purposes.

woman has been apointed superintendent of highways in the district near Chatham, N. Y., and she announces that it is her intention to have the best section of road in the county. Her name is Miss Bessie Bain, and she expects to superintend the work in person.

The sixteenth biennial convention of the Kappa Alpha Thetat Society was held in Philadelphia recently, and thirty-six colleges were represented by 150 women. This is the oldest Greek letter orgnization among the college women, having ben established at De Pauw University, January 27, 1870. Its newestt chapter is the one recently installed at the University of Toronto.

Colorado is proud of the fact that it has the only woman food commissioner in the United States, Mrs. Mary L. Wright, who serves under the title of dairy commissioner. Her work for the betterment of conditions in dairy products in her State has been so efficient that she was appointed not long ago to serve for another year.

The work of investigating the records in the old court houses on the eastern shore of Maryland, with a view of reporting on their condition to the next legislature, has been undertaken by Mrs. Hester Dorsey Richardson. Mrs. Richardson is president of the public records commission of Maryland, and in addition to the report on the old records she will offer recommendtions for their preservation.

In spite of the growing tendency on the part of women, to study medicine the number of women physicians in some parts of the country is by no means large. Dr. H. B. Jones, of Wheeling, W. Va., in her recent address before the women of the American Medical Association at Portland, drew attention to the fact that in her state there were only five women physicians. She mentioned several large towns that as yet are without any and said that West Virginia ought to be a very good field for women doctors.

The library of the late Professor Mommsen, the celebrated German historian, has been purchased by Mrs. von Rottenburg and presented to the university at Bonn. She is the wife of Dr. von Rottenburg, rector of Bonn University, and an American by birth, her father having been Professor Phelps, a well-known diplomat.

Miss Fannie Perkins, a missionary at Thaundaung, Burmah, has given evidence of wonderful versatility in the work that she has done on her place. With the assistance of Miss Illingsworth, another missionary, she ran her electric wire through the jungle and then wired her house with electric lights. In addition she recently built with her own hands a water tank at the top of her house with pipes for its distribution.

In the California building at the Lewis and Clark Exposition there is a fine exhibit of olives and olive oil by Mrs. Freda Ehmann, of Oroville, Cal. Mrs. Ehmann is of German extraction, but her home was in Quincy, Ill., until eight years ago, when she started her olive business. Since then she has been so successful that she practically controls all the olives raised in northern California. She ships great quantities of pickled olives each year.

PRETTY WIVES BECOME PLAIN.

One reason why the average woman wears out and grows old and plain is that, through a mistaken idea of duty, she lays out for herself at the beginning of married life a scheme of duty of which every hour is filled with work.

This she follows religiously for years, feeling that she has done her duty. She, however, soon becomes merely a machine. Can any woman keep brightness, originality of thought, or even good looks with such a life? And, without those things, how can she keep her husband and children full of loving admiration?

Women's Tempers.

I recently saw it stated somewhere that women are much better tempered than men. This, of course, is a self-evident proposition up to a certain point. Women, as a rule, are altogether more self-possessed and have a greater control over themselves than men, who want everything their own way, resent all trouble, cannot endure the smallest discomfort, and are rarely unselfish. But in justice to men it must be said that, generally speaking, they have very much more to try their nerves. —London World.

Simpson Collects $38,000.

Old Orchard, Me., Aug. 15—The collection at the services Sunday of Dr. Simpson, of the Missionary Alliance, amounted to $38,000. Of this sum $29,000 was taken in the morning and $9,000 in the evening. There were twenty pledges of $1,000 each. The attendance at each service was large. The principal addresses were delivered by Dr. Wilson, Dr. Troy and Pastor March, of England.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

CHAPTER IV.

NO—no—no! No more whining from Nance Olden. Listen to what I've got to tell you, Mag, listen!

You know where I was coming from yesterday when I passed Troyon's window and grinned up at you, sitting there, framed in bottles of hair tonic, with all that red wig of yours streaming about you?'

Yep, from that little, rat-eyed lawyer's office. I was glum as mud. I felt as though Tom and myself were both flies caught by the leg—he by the law and I by the lawyer—in a sticky mess; and the more we flapped our wings and struggled and pulled, the more we hurt and tore ourselves, and the sooner we'd have to give it up.

Oh, that wizen-faced little lawyer that lives on the Tom Dorgans and the Nance Oldens, who don't know which way to turn to get the money! He looks at me out of his red little eyes and measures in dollars what I'd do for Tom. And then he sets his price a notch higher than that.

When I passed the big department store, next to Troyon's, I was just thinking of this, and I turned in there just aching for some of the boodle that flaunts itself in a poor girl's face when she's desperate, from every silk and satin rag, from every lace and jewel in the place.

The funny part of it is that I didn't want it for myself, but for Tom. 'Pon my soul, Mag, though I would have filled my arms with everything I saw, I wouldn't have put on one thing of all the duds; just hiked off to soak 'em and pay the lawyer. I might have been as old and ugly and rich as the yellow-skinned woman opposite me, who was turning over laces on the middle counter, for all these things meant to me—with Tom in jail.

I was thinking this as I looked at her, when all at once I saw—

You know it takes a pretty quick touch, sharp eyes and good nerve to get away with the goods in a big shop like that. Or it takes something altogether different. It was the different way she did it. She took up the piece of lace—it was a big collar, fine like a cobweb picture in threads—you can guess what it must have been worth if that old sinner, Mother Douty, gave me $15 for it. She took it up in a quick, eager way, as though she'd found just what she wanted. Then she took out a lace sample from her gold-linked purse and held them both up close to her blinky little eyes, looking at it through a gold lorgnette with emeralds in the handle; pulling it and feeling it with the air of one who knows a fine thing when she sees it, and just what makes it fine. Then she rustled off to the door to examine it closely in the light, and—Mag Monahan, she walked right out with it!

At least, she'd got beyond the inner doors when I tapped her on the shoulder.

"I beg pardon, madam." My best style, Mag.

She pulled herself up haughtily and blinked at me. She was a little, thin mummy of a woman, just wrapped away in silks and velvets, but on the inside of that nervous, little old body of hers there must have been some spring of good material that wasn't all unwound yet.

She stood blinking at me without a word.

"That lace. You haven't paid for it," I said.

Her short-sighted eyes fell from my face to the collar she held in her hand. Her yellow face grew ghastly.

"Oh, mercy! You—you don't—"

"I am a detective for the store, and—"

"But—"

"Sh! We don't like any noise made about these things, and you yourself wouldn't enjoy—"

"Do you know who I am, young woman?" She fumbled in her satchel and passed a card to me.

Glory be! Guess, Mag. Oh, you'd never guess, you dear old Mag! Besides, you haven't got the acquaintance in high society that Nance Olden can boast.

MRS. MILLS D. VAN WAGENEN

Oh—Mag! Shame on you not to know the name even of the bishop of the great state of—yes, the lean, short little bishop with a little white beard, and the softest eye and the softest heart and—my very own bishop, Nancy Olden's bishop. And this was his wife.

Tut—tut, Mag! Of course not. A bishop's wife may be a kleptomaniac; it's only Cruelty girls that really steal from stores.

"I've met the bishop, Mrs. Van Wagenen." I didn't say how—she wouldn't appreciate that story. "And he was once very kind to me. But he would be the first to tell me to do my duty now. I'll do it as quietly as I can for his sake. But you must come with me or I must arrest—"

She put up a shaking hand. Dear little old guy!

"Don't—don't say it! It's all a mistake, which can be rectified in a moment. I've been trying to match this piece of lace for years. I got it at Malta when—when Mills and I—on our honeymoon. When I saw it there on the counter I was so delighted—I never thought—I intended taking it to the light to be sure the pattern was the same, my eyesight is so wretched—and when you spoke to me it was the first inkling I had that I had really taken it without paying! You certainly understand," she pleaded in agitation. "I have no need to steal—you must know that—oh, that I wouldn't—that I couldn't— If you will just let me pay you—"

Here now, Mag Monahan, don't you get to sneering. She was straight—right on the level all right. You couldn't listen to that cracked little voice of hers a minute without being sure of it.

I was just about to permit her graciously to pay me the money—for my friend, the dear bishop's sake, of course—when a big floor-walker happened to catch sight of us.

"If you'll come with me, Mrs. Van Wagenen, to a dressing-room, I'll arrange your collar for you." I said very loud. And then, in a whisper: "Of course, I understand, but the thing may look different to other people. And that big floor-walker there gets a commission from the newspapers every time he tells them—"

She gave a squawk for all the world like a dried-up little hen scuttling out of a yellow dog's way, and we took the elevator to the second floor.

The minute I closed the door of the little fitting-room she held out the lace to me.

"I have changed my mind," she said, "and shall give you the lace back. I will not keep it. I cannot—I cannot bear the sight of it. It terrifies me and shocks me. I can take no pleasure in it. Besides—besides, it will be discipline for me to do without it now that I have found it after all these years. Every day I shall look at the place in my collection which it would have occupied, and I shall say to myself: 'Maria Van Wagenen, take warning. See to what terrible straits a worldly passion may bring one; what unconscious greed may do!' I shall give the money to Mills for charity and I will never—never fill that place in my collection."

"What good will that do?" I asked, puzzled, while I folded the collar up into a very small package.

"You mean that I ought to submit to the exposure—that I deserve the lesson and the punishment—not for stealing, but for being absorbed in wordily things. Perhaps you are right. It certainly shows that you have at some time been under Mills' spiritual care, my dear. I wonder if he would insist—whether I ought—yes, I suppose he would. Oh!"

A saleswoman's head was thrust in the door. "Excuse me," she said, "I thought the room was empty."

"We've just finished trying on," I said, sweetly.

"Don't go!" The bishop's wife turned to her, her little fluttering hands held out appealingly. "And do not misunderstand me. The thing may seem wrong in your eyes, as this young woman says, but if you will listen patiently to my explanation, I am sure you will see that it was a mere eager oversight—the fault of absent-mindedness, hardly the sin of covetousness, and surely not a crime. I am making this confession—"

The tender conscience of the dear, blameless little soul! She was actually giving herself away. Worse—she was giving me away, too. But I couldn't stand that. I saw the saleswoman's puzzled face—she was a tall woman, with a big bust, big hips and the big head all right, and she wore her long-train black rig for all the world like a Cruelty girl who had stolen the matron's skirt to "play lady" in. I got behind little Mrs. Bishop, and looking out over her head, I tapped my forehead significantly.

The saleswoman tumbled. That was all right. But so did the bishop's wife; for she turned and caught me at it.

"You shall not save me from myself and what I deserve," she cried. "I am perfectly sane and you know it, and you are doing me no favor in trying to create the contrary impression. I demand an—"

"An interview with the manager," I interrupted. "I'm sure Mrs. Van Wagenen can see the manager. Just go with the lady, Mrs. Van Wagenen, and I'll follow with the goods."

She did it meek as a lamb, talking all the time, but never beginning at the beginning—luckily for me. So that I had time to slip from one dressing-room to the next, with the lace up my sleeve, out to the elevator, and down into the street.

D'ye know what Heaven must be, Mag? A place where you always get away with the swag, and where it's always just the minute after you've made a killing.

Cocky? Well, I should say I was. I was drunk enough with success to take big chances. And just while I was wishing for something really big to tackle, it came along in the shape of that big floor-walker!

He was without a hat, and his eyes looked 50 ways at once. But you've got to look 51 if you want to catch Nance Olden. I ran up the stairs of the first flat-house and rang the bell. And as I sailed up in the elevator I saw the big floor-walker hurry past; he'd lost the scent.

The boy let me off at the top floor, and after the elevator had gone down I walked up to the roof. It was fine 'way up there, so still and high, with the lights coming out down in the town. And I took out my pretty lace collar and put it around my neck, wishing I could keep it and wishing that I had, at least, a glass to see myself in it just once, when my eye caught the window of the next house.

It would do for a mirror all right, for the dark green shade was down. But at sight of the shade blowing in the wind I forgot all about the collar.

It's this way, Mag, when they press you too far; and that little rat of a lawyer had got me most to the wall. I looked at the window, measuring the little climb it would be for me to get to it—the house next door was just one story higher than the one where I was, so its top story was on a level with the roof nearly where I stood. And I made up my mind to get what would let Tom off easy, or break into jail myself.

And so I didn't care much what I might fall into through that window. And perhaps because I didn't care, I slipped into a dark hall, and not a thing stirred; not a footstep creaked. I felt like the princess—Princess Nancy Olden—come to wake the Sleeping Beauty; some dude it'd be that would have curly hair like Tom Dorgan's, and would wear clothes like my friend Latimer's, over in Brooklyn.

Can you see me there, standing on one leg like a stork, ready to lie or to fly at the first sound?

Well, the first sound didn't come. Neither did the second. In fact, none of 'em came unless I made 'em myself.

Softly as Molly goes when the baby's just dropped off to sleep, I walked toward an open door. It was a parlor, smelly with tobacco, and with lots of papers and books around. And nary a he-beauty—nor any other kind.

I tried the door of a room next to it. A bedroom. But no beauty.

Silly! Don't you tumble yet? It was a bachelor's apartment, and the Bachelor Beauty was out, and Princess Nancy had the place all to herself.

TIPS TOTAL $30 A WEEK.

That Is What Some of the Brushers in First-Class Hotels Take In.

A woman who appealed to the Charity Organization society for help said that her son was able to assist her if he would, relates the New York Press.

"What does he do?" she was asked.

"He is the brusher, and has charge of the bootblack chair in a hotel," was the reply. "He makes between $30 and $40 a week."

The agent sent out to investigate and found the woman's statement true. Her son is employed in one of the big hotels close to Madison square, and has been for six years. He declined to assist his mother because she had turned him away from home. He was married, he explained, and it cost him $100 a month to run his flat.

This young man told the agent he was no exception; that the position of brusher in a large hotel was worth at least $20 a week if a young man attended to his business. Hotel patrons are liberal tippers. The brusher is expected to find seats for customers if the barbers' chairs are filled, and to hand around the morning and illustrated papers. The boss barber pays them no salary. Permission to work in the shop is considered sufficient compensation. The hours are long and in most cases brushers are allowed a boy as an assistant.

BEAUTY STANDARD OF JAPS

Features a Woman Must Possess to Be Considered Beautiful in Their Country.

It's a nice standard of beauty that the Japanese have for their dear little, queer little, most fascinating little women, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

On the whole, the Japanese consider that a woman should not exceed five feet in height, should have a comparatively pale skin, and be well developed, should have long, thin, and jet black hair; an oval face, with a narrow, straight nose; rather large eyes, nearly black; thick eyelashes; a small mouth, hiding behind red full lips, even rows of small white teeth; ears not altogether small; thick eyebrows and a medium forehead, from which the hair should grow in circular or Fujiyama shape—that shape recalling the truncated cone of the famous volcano.

Add to these the modesty, sweet humility, and gentle submission which the Japs deem essential to their womankind, and which long centuries of practice have instilled into them pretty thoroughly—and the result might well be an interesting and adorable little creature.

LAND OF SULLEN SILENCE.

Where You Ask Your Question Today and Get Your Answer To-Morrow.

The following story is told in the Kansas City Star, as being illustrative of the absolute silence and loneliness of the typical Australian bush camp:

Two men were camping together, but rarely exchanged a word.

One morning one of the men remarked at breakfast: "Heard a cow bellow in the swamp just now."

Nothing further was said and they went about their business for the rest of the day. Twenty-four hours later, once more at breakfast, the second man said: "How do you know it wasn't a bull?"

Again no comment. Again a pause of 24 hours. Next morning the first man began to pack up his "billy" and "swag."

"You going?" inquired the other.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because," said his friend, "there's too much argument in this camp!"

Everything there is tremendous, and just a little terrible; but its strength, its beauty and its strangeness are things to seize on the imagination and grip the heart, even as its political and social systems are things to compel the admiration and envy of the world.

Accidental Discovery.

There lived in Boulogne, Italy, over a hundred years ago, a learned student, Dr. Galvani by name. On one occasion he was making a scientific experiment with frogs. After they were dead, wishing to dry them, he pierced them with little brass rods and hung them on the iron railing of his balcony. To his surprise they began to move, and Galvani saw this was due to the action of the wind. This knocked the part of the bodies pierced by the brass rods against the iron balcony. This discovery resulted in the galvanic battery, which has been employed in the later inventions of the telegraph, trolley cars, electric lights, bells, etc.—all these because a frog made the acquaintance of a wise man.—Science.

Danger of Over-Concentration.

Certain sections of the country are full of decaying communities, once active, but from which the chief industries have been withdrawn. A country consisting mainly of large cities with merely incidental rural population has take a long step toward final disintegration. No country in which the productive forces are steadily being subordinated to an intricate (and, upon the whole, wasteful) mechanism of distribution can long remain prosperous.—London Engineering Magazine.

English Shopkeepers.

The upper class in England is sinking; the middle is rising rapidly, and those who belong to the former keep shops in assumed names, while those who belong to the latter endeavor to conceal that they themselves are connected with the trade. The conversation of both, however, betrays that they are shopkeepers.—London Truth.

WIFE'S BODY PETRIFIED.

Discovery Made When Remains Were Removed to Cemetery.

Oxford, Mass., Aug. 15—Charles C. Rawson and Undertaker E. A. Wheelock, while removing to the cemetery lot of Miss Clara Barton the remains of Capt. David Barton and his wife Julia, relatives of Clara Barton, found that the body of Mrs. Barton had become petrified, while that of Capt. Barton, buried twenty inches from that of his wife, had crumbled to dust.

The body of Mrs. Barton was buried in July, 1899. Undertaker Wheelock said the casket had rotted but the body was firm and rigid, the color of marble, and it weighed 275 pounds.

PRISON OFFICIALS WORRIED.

State Jail Wall Down for Repairs, Made Keepers Fear Trouble.

Trenton, Aug. 15—Fearful results from panic among the inmates of a prison, which is always feared by prison-keepers, threatened Saturday, when a section of the State prison wall was torn down here to make way for the foundations of the new cellhouse. For the first time in many years the inmates saw a glimpse of the outside world. Libbie Garrabrandt, who has been in the prison for over thirty-three years, was one of these.

The prisoners became excited, especially as crowds of people stopped at the break in the walls and looked in. That restless feeling which pervades a prison just before a panic, which sometimes means murder and a jail delivery, came over the prisoners at the glimpse through the aperture, and Head Keeper Osborne immediately telephoned the Second District Police Station to send policemen to the scene at once and drive the crowds back.

Before the policemen arrived the danger of a jail delivery grew greater as the people outside began calling to the prisoners as some were recognized. The police drove the people away, and all Saturday night and Sunday, and until the foundations of the new wing go up, and the gap showing the world is closed to the eyes of the prisoners, the police will patrol the neighborhood and prevent people stopping to gaze upon the prisoners.

Tales humorus and sunshiny, pathetic and sad were told in Mr. Yatman's inimitable way.

STANBERY JURY DISAGREES

physician's testimony ended. Miss Ada Westphal, the daughter of the dead woman, who sat with Walter Vail, a youth, in the rear seat of the auto, testified to the general circumstances surrounding the crash. Her testimony brougnt out nothing new. She delivered her testimony in a strong clear voice.

Young Vail testified to hearing Mrs. Westphal's cry about a runaway horse. He said the horse turned into the automobile.

John Fenner was called, but when he testified to seeing the horse and carriage go rapidly two blocks away from the scene of the accident the plaintiff successfully objected to his testimony as immaterial. That closed the defense. In rebuttal, Attorney Hetfield put Mrs. James Boice on the stand to testify that Stanbery, a short distance below where the accident occurred, turned around her carriage rapidly.

Counsellor Swackhamer consumed half an hour in summing up. He warned the jurymen that their verdict would have an effect on the criminal prosecution the county is expected to begin, and asked them to weigh the testimony very carefully for that reason if no other. He made a characteristic appeal to sentiment.

Attorney Hetfield's summing up was ten minutes shorter than Mr. Swackhamer's. He referred to the latter's declaration that a verdict for the plaintiff would ue followed by an appeal as a threat to the jury and told the jurymen that he would not appeal; that he was satisfied to accept Dunellen justice.

"Didn't you tell me this morning, that you would appeal this case if it went against you?" interrupted Mr. Swackhamer.

"No, I didn't," retorted the younger lawyer. "Now, none of your grandstand plays," he continued as Mr. Swackhamer gave symptoms of a rush of eloquence.

A burst of handclapping came from the rear of the court. "Good, young fellow," shouted a man in the crowd, "don't let him walk over you."

Justice Von Minden was scandalized. He rapped sharply for order, and when the buzz of approbation for Mr. Hetfield continued he ordered the room cleared. All the people in the rear of the room were turned out.

When quiet was restored, Mr. Hetfield resumed his argument. In the course of it he said bluntly that it was a well known fact that automobiles could not be run with a mixture of gasoline and rum.

Before Justice Von Minden addressed the jury Counsellor Swackhamer requested him to charge as follows:

"1. That if the injury complained of was contributed to by the plaintiff in such a manner that if he had not been negligent he would have received no injury from the negligence of the defendant, in that case he is not entitled to recover.

"2. If the injury was contributed to in this sense by the plaintiff's negligence, the comparative degrees of the negligence of the parties is immaterial. If the injury was occasioned in any degree by the plaintiff's own negligence he is without redress unless the act of the defendant amounted to a wilful trespass or intentional wrong.

"N. J. Express Co. v. Nichols, 4 Vr. 434.

"3. That drivers of carriages, sleighs or sleds whether of burden or pleasure using any of the turnpike or public roads of this State, when men by another carriage, sleigh or sled, shall keep to the right, and when overtaken by a carriage, sleigh or sled, they shall likewise keep to the right, so as in both cases to permit such carriages, sleigh or sled either met or overtaken, to pass free and uninterrupted; and if any person shall offend against this provision such person shall forfeit and pay the sum of two dollars to any person who shall be obstructed or hindered in his or her passage and will sue for the same, and shall be subject to an action for damages for every such offense to be recovered with costs of suit.

"Genl. Stat. Vol. 3, page 2823, sec. 91.

"4. That by the law of 1905, sec. 4, the defendant was required to carry upon his automobile during the period from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise, at least two lamps showing white lights, visible at least two hundred feet in the direction towards which such automobile was proceeding, and to exhibit at least one red light visible in the reverse direction; but that he defendant was not required to carry upon his automobile any light except during such period.

"That when the plaintiff and defendant approached each other just prior to the collision in question, it was the legal duty of the plaintiff to have turned to the right of the street and it is no defense that he had no design to offend; that he attempted to prevent a collision; that the street on his side was rough and rutty; and that it was more difficult for him than for the other party to turn out unless the obstacles to turning out were insuperable or extremely difficult."

The case went to the jury at 5:35. Justice Von Minden's charge was very brief. He told the jurymen that they were not to concern themselves over the death of the woman, the criminal side of the case, nor the wealth and poverty of either party. They were to consider the loss of the horse and wagon and fix responsibility for that.

The jury came in three hours later and the foreman reported a hopeless disagreement.

It was said by a court officer in a position to know that the jury took three ballots. On the first they stood 7 to 5 for Stanbery; on the second 9 to 3 for Stanbery; and on the third and deadlocked vote they went back to 7 to 5 for Stanbery.

After the jury's return Mr. Hetfield announced that another suit would be brought immediately.

Out of the hearing has grown a settlement of the manslaughter warrant muddle. Detective Mulvey, of Prosecutor Berdine's office, was present at the trial, and when the noon adjournment came he informed both parties to the suit that their presence at the September session of the grand jury was required. Both agreed to appear. This is practicallly a short-cut in the preliminaries to criminal prosecution. Should either fail to appear before the jury a bench warrant will be issued.

VOLCANO THROWING OUT MOLTEN LAVA DISCOVERED IN NEVADA BY RANCHERS

Reno, Nev., Aug. 15—A volcano throwing off molten lava and in active operation has been discovered in Nevada by Messrs. McClue, Wheeler and Sommers, cattlemen of Lovelock.

The volcano is located in Rye Patch, Humboldt county. Although that section has been traversed for years, the crater has just been found for the first time. The men were in search of cattle when they came upon the stream of lava, and tracing it to its source, located the volcano. The rocks for some distance around were so hot that they could not touch them with their bare hands. The volcano is active. This is attested by the fact that distinct rumblings accompany the flow of lava.

BOLT OF LIGHTNING IMPROVES POWER OF SPEECH OF DEAF MUTE TWIRLER

Jersey lightning still holds the honor for queer stunts. Among the many strange things attributed to the agency of the electric bolts Sunday, that of improving the power of speech in Willie Deegan, the deaf mute baseball pitcher of the Plainfield team, carries off the palm. Deegan pitched for the Hobokens Sunday at the St. George Cricket grounds, in that city, against the Philadelphia Colored Giants.

The players were warming up for the game when the bolt came to earth. Several blinding streaks zigzagged across the enclosure, and there was the wildest kind of excitement for a few seconds. Men ran yelling in all directions, and of the 400 spectators on the grounds fully one-half of them beat a retreat from the enclosure. A sergeant of police was rendered unconscious, and a negro spectator had a lot of hair singed off his forearm. Deegan, who is an instructor in a deaf mute institution, said that the lightning improved his power of speech. He has always been able to talk some, but after receiving electrical treatment Sunday he surprised his friends by doing a lot of talking.

The shock, however, had a severe effect upon his skill as pitcher, for in the game afterward his team was beaten by the colored aggregation by the score of 6 to 2.

OCCASIONALLY THE "WHIRLIGIG OF TIME"

Runs amuck, toppling over the little affairs and pet projects of our daily lives—knocking down our "houses of cards"—wrecking the routine of home or office or store or factory.

Now-a-times, when the "Whirligig" kidnaps a servant, a tenant, a partner—when a plan is knocked about our ears—when the "Whirligig" begins its traditional revenges, delivering packages of trouble C. O. D., we pull ourselves out from under the wreckage and begin to write Want Ads.

And after a little time we find that publicity has repaired the breakage, and that all is well. Our plans prosper—our routine is restored—and we are ready for the next visit of the "Whirligig," ready for good fortune or—another smash.

COUNCILMAN SUGGESTS REFORM WITHIN PARTY

Chairman Murphy Asks Citizens to Join With 1st Ward Republican Club

HITS "MACHINE" HARD

Leaders Meet Secretly and Fix Up Slate, He Declares—Tells Why Councilmen Are Turned Down.

As announced some days ago by The Daily Press exclusively, the Republicans of the First ward have organized to fight the "machine" and they are now ready to begin an active campaign. Their purposes are set forth in a letter from Councilman Murphy to this paper which is reproduced below. Mr. Murphy is the temporary chairman and William Simmons the temporary secretary of the organization. Regular officers will be elected at a meeting to be held at Central Hall tomorrow night

Councilman Murphy's letter follows:

Editor The Daily Press:

The independent Republican voters of the First Ward in this city have organized the First Ward Republican Club, and if you will permit me, I will briefly state the reasons why this club was organized and the objects for which it is formed.

The election this year is of great importance to the citizens of Plainfield for the reason that this fall there will be elected seven members of the Common Council, one from each of the four wards, and three Councilmen at Large. As the Common Council consists of eleven members, and six of these constitute a majority for the passing of any resolution or ordinance, the result of the coming election will determine who shall constitute the working majority of the Council for the next two years and what the policy of these representatives will be.

Heretofore the selection of candidates and delegates to the convention has been left to a few men who are commonly known as the leaders or bosses of the local political "machine" and who each year secretly meet together and make up a 'slate" or list of candidates and delegates which contains the names of their particular friends or of those whom they could influence or control when at the convention or holding office.

Voters attending the city primaries have been handed one ticket containing the names of these men and no others, which ticket they could vote or not as they pleased. Whether they voted or not made little or no difference, as the attendance at the primaries was generally small, and, if the primaries were well attended, the leaders of the "machine" took good care to see that a sufficient number of their friends were present to elect their ticket.

The effect of this system has been that very often the men selected for the office of Councilman or delegates have not been representative citizens nor the best that could have been secured, but have been chosen for their friendship to the local leaders or their loyalty to the "machine."

Our city Council is an important body, for it controls the collection and disbursements of all money collected by taxes, fixes the tax rate and assessed valuation of property, grants all local franchises and licenses, and superintends and controls the various departments of this city.

For the last two years the leaders of the local "machine" have lost control of the city Council by reason of the refusal of some of the members who were elected through their influence refusing to comply with unreasonable demands made upon them by the local leaders, who now have openly declared that these Councilmen who have opposed their wishes shall be retired from office at the expiration of their term and that their places shall be filled by men who will more readily accede to their demands.

The issue this fall to be determined by the Republican voters at the primaries is briefly this: Shall the leaders of the local "machine" be supported and be allowed to control the city government, or shall the citizens determine for themselves who shall represent them and thereby shape the policy of the city government for the best interests of all?

That is what the members of this club stand for and are endeavoring to have a full ticket presented to the voters at the First Ward primary which will include the names of the best men who can be prevailed upon to accept the honor of nomination for office or delegates to the city convention. This club is formed in the

140 DELEGATES TO COUNTY CONVENTION

DAYS OF REGISTRY ARE SEPTEMBER 12, OCTOBER 10 AND 34.

The Republican County Committee has announced that there will be 140 delegates to the county committee, sixty-two being accredited to Elizabeth. Particular attention was called to the fact that delegates must have their certificates filed with the county clerk on or before September 2, ten days before the primary on September 12. Wherever there is a contest tickets must be ordered seven days before the primary. The registry days this year will be September 12, October 10 and October 24.

A communication from the Secretary of State, announcing that in the allotment of new voting machines for the purchase of which the last Legislature had appropriated $50,000, five would be sent to Union county.

A request was made in the letter for a report as to the localities in which to place the new machines. It was referred to the executive committee for consideration.

NO VETO FROM MAYOR ON SALOON ORDINANCE

BUT MR. BUCKLE WILL HAVE ONE BEFORE FRIDAY.

Mayor Buckle has two days more in which to prevent the saloon restriction ordinances becoming effective. He has taken no action as yet but informed a representative of The Daily Press today that he will file his objections to the measure, as required by the city charter, on or before Friday.

The veto must be filed with the city clerk and ten days are allowed from the time the measure is passed on third reading by the Common Council. The city fathers passed it on Monday, August 7. As was expected, the Mayor announced that he would veto it. Members of the Common Council, favoring saloon restriction, declare that their ordinance will be passed over his veto. This will require but a majority vote.

QUIETLY WEDDED.

Miss Cora Doty, of Dunellen, Becomes Wife of Lloyd Williams.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Doty at Dunellen this morning, when their daughter, Miss Cora Doty, was made the wife of Lloyd Williams, of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church and was attended only by a few relatives. At its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for Norfolk, Va., the grooms' former home, where they will spend a week. On returning they will reside in Dunellen.

Mr. Williams has been a resident of Plainfield the last three years and is an expert workman at the Rogers Corporation factory on Madison avenue. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and several local social organizations.

MRS. BURTIS DEAD.

Passed Away at the Home of Her Daughter on Fairview Avenue.

Mrs. Laura F. Burtis, widow of William A. Burtis, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ernest A. Lowe, of Fairview avenue. She had been ill but a short time. Mrs. Burtis was in her seventy-seventh year and had lived in this vicinity for the past ten years. She was a native of Maryland.

The funeral will be held from Mrs. Lowe's residence Friday morning at 11 o'clock and the interment will be in Woodlawn cemetery.

Special Service at 'Plains.

Next Sunday morning at 7:30 o'clock, Mr. Fox, of New York, will give an address in the M. E. church on the work of the Union Fresh Air Mission Association, of New York. Special arrangements have been made for this service and it will no doubt prove very interesting as Mr. Fox will also be accompanied by some of the Mission children, who will take part in the service.

Will Be Rockview Park.

The new residential tract now being developed along West End avenue on the former Cadmus property is to be known as Rockview Park. It was originally intended to be known as Rockview Heights but the promotors have been informed that a section of ground below Dunellen has been so designated for several years.

MINISTERS IN SESSION

Convocation of Seventh-Day Baptist Pastors Continues Here.

GENERAL DISCUSSION

Rev. Clayton A. Burdick Conducts Talk on "The Minister in the Pulpit"—A Round Table Every Day.

Discussion of the morning topic, "The Minister in His Study," was continued at the afternoon session yesterday. Rev. Dr. O. U. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I., President V. C. Davis, of Alfred University, President T. L. Gardner, of Salem College, and Rev. Madison Harry, of Rhode Island, spoke.

The discussion revolved about two questions: "What Shall the Minister Read?" and "For What Purpose Shall the Minister Read?" The minister's attitude toward general and religious literature and the various forms of literature, and his attitude from the standpoint of the people's reading were touched upon. It was generally agreed that the minister should be a very wide reader of current literature as well as of religious writings.

The session ended shortly after 4 o'clock. The clerics met again at 7:30 o'clock. An address by Rev. Dr. William Clifton Daland, president of Milton College, on "The Bible and Modern Thought," was the feature of the evening session.

Dr. Daland's discourse was a simple presentation of modern thought as to the Bible, inspiration, revelation, and the correlated subjects. It was not controversial in any degree. In the course of the address Dr. Daland called attention to the fact that modern thought, so-called, was not in essence any newer than ancient thought. The rabbis in the ancient temple discussed the validity and inspiration of various verses of the Talmud and books of the Old Testament. They asked whether Job was fact or fiction; whether Jonah composed his song while in the belly of a great fish or whether some one wrote the song afterward and put it in his mouth; questioned the authenticity of the book of Daniel; debated on the story of the creation, and indulged in other incursions into "higher criticism." Most of the discussions took place before the birth of Christ.

Dr. Daland spoke of the effect modern thought has had on the popular conception of the creation, of miracles, of sin, of the atonement, of the divinity of Christ, of sacrifice, and of the after life. The newer thought regards miracles as unusual manifestations of unknown law, rather than a suspension of natural law; looks on sin, not as the result of a historic fall, but as a falling behind of man to a lower type, and rates the divinity of Christ as different to that of other men only in degree and not in kind.

A round table discussion on the subject followed the address.

Sabbatarian clergymen from all sections of the country are present at the convocation. Several more arrived last night, including Rev. G. W. Hills, of Nortonville, Kan.; Rev. M. G. Stillman, of Walworth, Wis.; Rev. Dr. Daland, Rev. S. R. Wheeler, of Southern New Jersey, and Rev. T. J. Van Horn, of Albion, Wis. Between thirty and forty in all are attending the gathering.

There is talk of permanently organizing a "School of the Prophets," and action along that line is very likely to be taken before the present "school" adjourns.

The second-day session of the pre-conference convocation at the Seventh-Day Baptist church was opened this morning at 9 o'clock by a discussion of "The Minister in the Pulpit." Rev. Clayton A. Burdick was the conductor. A round table followed, in which the clerics present generally joined.

AUGUST RAINFALL.

Heavier Already Than Normal Amount for Whole Month.

August is doing all right as a rain maker. The fifteen days just closing have turned out more rain than the normal fall for the whole month.

The fall, so far, measures 5.65 inches. The normal amount for the month is 5.03 inches.

Prospects for a record fall for the month are bright. In August last year 10.45 inches fell. This month will beat that if the present pace is maintained.

The rainfall yesterday amounted to 2.89 inches. The temperature at noon today was 67 degrees.

PROF'S ODD QUESTIONS

TO TEST EDUCATION

Suggests Series of Queries to be Put to Every Man Before He Is Given His Degree.

Professor F. J. Miller, examiner at the University of Chicago, created a stir before the junior college in chapel yesterday when he presented a list of questions which he declared ought to be asked of every man before he received his bachelor degree. Mr. Miller was principal of the Plainfield High School from 1882 to 1887. At one time he was also president of the local Y. M. C. A.

The professor argued that university education developed the mind and not the heart. In order to test the finer feelings of candidates for collegiate honors he suggested a number of questions, including the following:

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Have you sympathy with all good causes?

Can you look straight in the eye of an honest man or a pure woman?

Will a lonely dog follow you?

Do you believe in lending a helping hand to weaker men?

Do you believe in taking advantage of the law when you can do so?

Can you be high minded and happy in drudgery?

Can you see as much beauty in washing dishes and hoeing corn as in playing golf and the piano?

Do you know the value of time and money?

Are you good friends with yourself?

Do you see anything in life besides dollars and cents?

Can you see sunshine in a mud-puddle?

Can you see beyond the stars?

The questions which the professor propounded had a visible effect on the class and every now and then some student was seen shifting uneasily in his place.

FORGIVES HALLIWELL.

D. M. Kellogg Willing To End Prosecution of Farmhand.

Lee Halliwell, the farm hand who made a murderous assault on Lawyer David M. Kellogg, of Oak Tree, and who is now in the New Brunswick jail awaiting disposition of the charge, wants to be tried. The prosecutor sent Detective Mulvey to Dunellen to try to learn about the case Monday, and Constable Pearce told the detective that the lawyer did not want to prosecute the man further.

Prosecutor Berdine made this statement of the case in court yesterday morning, but added that he did not think that the information at hand was sufficient to warrant the court in disposing of the case in the absence of any statement from the lawyer. The court was of the same opinion and said that if the lawyer does not want to prosecute a letter from him to that end would answer the purpose.

Incidentally the prosecutor criticised Justices of the Peace for not sending in their cases promptly. He said that Justice Von Minden had just sent in the papers in this case, and that the man had been in jail for some time.

Fred H. Andrews, of Central avenue, will occupy the pulpit at Hope Memorial chapel Sunday morning, Rev. L. R. Howard still being upon his vacation.

AUTO INJURIES FATAL

AN ODD ACCIDENT.

Oldest Son Reaches Home From Panama Just In Time To Have Her Bid Him Good Bye.

Despite the efforts of the best medical aid to be obtained, Mrs. John P. Mosher, of West Fifth street, died last night from the effects of injuries she received on June 4, when she was knocked down by an automobile at Seventh street and Spooner avenue. Her right lung was punctured and her system sustained such a severe nervous shock that her condition was critical from the outset. She was at first treated at home until July 13, when she was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital for an operation, but it could not be performed and she was brought back.

Dr. Marcus Clawson was in constant attendance and he was assisted in caring for the patient by Drs. Ellis and B. VanD. Hedges and two New York specialists. She was conscious the greater part of the time until yesterday, when she sank steadily until the end. Her eldest son, J. Stanley Mosher, reached home from Panama Monday night just in time to have his mother recognize him and bid him goodby. By the merest chance he caught an express steamer which brought him north in five days, otherwise he would have had to take a slower boat due in New York tonight.

Mrs. Mosher was in her fifty-fourth year and had been a resident of this city since 1895, coming here with her husband and family from Alfred, N. Y. She became a member of the local Seventh-day Baptist church and was very active in its religious and social affairs. She was superintendent of the Sabbath School primary department, a member of the Woman's Auxiliary, and a member of the Plainfield Primary Union. She enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the city and was greatly liked for her many exceptional qualities.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. George Homan, of West Front street, and four sons, J. Stanley, Wendell, Boardman and Philip Mosher, all of whom reside at home. Stanley Mosher has been engaged in engineering work on the Panama canal.

The funeral will be held from her late home Friday afternoon at 2:30.

BARBER'S STRAIN.

Itinerant Knight of Razor Explains Boozing Among the Craft in Court.

William Zimmerman, a barber was arraigned before Judge Runyon for drunkenness this morning. Zimmerman was frank.

"I was drunk," he said. "I know I am making a fool of myself. I guess a good thing for me would be as big a fine as you can put on me."

"How is it that so many travelling barbers are drinkers?" asked the Judge.

"It's the strain of handling a sharp weapon all day," explained William.

"Oh, if you work under such a strain, I don't see how we can fine you for a harmless jag," said the magistrate. "Sentence suspended."

Open Golf Championship.

The programme of the first open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association, of which Leighton Calkins, of this city, is secretary, has been announced. There will be three events: Open championship competition, four-ball match, and open handicap. The competition will begin on September 14, at the Fox Hills Club, and go three days. Seventeen prizes are offered in the three events. Professionals will receive prizes in money, and amateurs in plate.

Knights of Pythias' Field Day.

The annual field day of the Past Chancellors' Association, Knights of Pythias, will take place September 4 at Hillside Park, Belleville. In the morning there will be a parade in Newark and the line will be reviewed by the grand chancellor, grand lodge officers and others. At Hillside Park there will be competitive drills by companies of the uniformed rank from various parts of the State.

Donohue Committed.

James Donohue, a familiar figure around the city, chiefly notable for having made his home in a tiny shed on Second street until forced to move by the erection of the new Salvation Army building, was sent to the county jail for twenty days this morning by Judge Runyon. He was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Overbaugh Donohue was once a prosperous business man.

Drunk Freed.

Charles Murphy, a laborer, arrested for helpless drunkenness, was released under suspended sentence in the city court this morning.

DETECTIVE DISOBEYED PROSECUTOR'S INSTRUCTIONS

MR. RANDOLPH GETS PROMISES OF SUPPORT

LETTERS AND PERSONAL ASSURANCES OF CO-OPERATION.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph has received a large number of favorable letters to his suggestion that the citizens of Plainfield organize to down the "machine," but has taken no definite steps in the matter as yet. He says that prominent men in various parts of the city have spoken to him personally in commendation of the stand he has taken and that in addition many have written formal letters stating that they would be glad to co-operate with him.

A few days ago Mr. Randolph addressed an open-letter to the citizens of Plainfield decrying the condition of affairs in the municipal government and placed the blame on the "machine." He declared that inefficiency and extravagance characterized the conduct of several departments of the city and that there was a great need for a reform. In this connection he suggested that voters holding the same opinion organize to correct the alleged abuses.

ENGINEER COMPLETES A "FEATURE" CITY MAP

"SALOON QUARANTINE" DISTRICT DESIGNATED IN GREATER PLAINFIELD.

Engineer H. C. VanEmburgh has just completed a map of the city and borough which for detailed information exceeds anything of a similar nature heretofore issued. The city area has been divided into four wards and they can be distinguished at a glance through a tinting process. The borough is also divided into the two voting districts, the first and second. Circles drawn through the map define distances from the center of the city to its boundary lines and a stranger can easily gain an idea of its extent.

An added feature of the map is the designation of the "saloon quarantine" district recently established by the Common Council and which is now awaiting the signature of Mayor Buckle. It catches the eye instantly because of its being in a bright red tint which some people might say is the only appropriate hue. This is the first time the district has been mapped off and it will give residents a clearer understanding of the situation.

The map has been placed in The Daily Press office for public inspection.

JAIL BIDS REJECTED.

Contractors All Exceed Estimated Cost of Proposed County Jail.

All the bids, on the structure complete, three in number, for the proposed new jail in Somerville, were rejected by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at a special meeting yesterday. None of them came within the cost estimated by the committee. The committee and architect were instructed to revise the plans and specifications, and new bids will be advertised for.

The estimated cost was $40,000 The bids were as follows:

VanDoren Iron Works, of Cleveland, O., $27,391 on building complete; $17,750 on cell work complete; plumbing, $2,500; total, $47,641.

Richards & Gaston, Somerville: $28,000, building complete; $17,750 on cell work complete; $2,882, plumbing; total, $48,582.

George Tobin and the W. T. Kirk Company, of this city, informed the Board before the bids were opened that they had desired to file proposals but were unable to do so on account of the limited time allowed them.

Mulvey Should Have Arrested Both Harrison and Stanbery.

PROSECUTOR ANGRY

He Will Insist on Full Process of Law and Not Allow Warrants To Be Held Up—Scores Officers.

Arrests are still likely to be made in the manslaughter case growing out of the Harrison-Stanbery accident, in spite of the amiable attitude taken by County Detective Francis Mulvey, of Prosecutor Berdine's office, at the trial of the civil suit in Dunellen Monday. Prosecutor Berdine is indignant over the detective's failure to arrest both men, and says he disobeyed specific instructions when he allowed Harrison and Stanbery to go free.

Mr. Berdine told a Daily Press reporter this morning that he would insist on the law taking its course, and so instructed the officers.

"Will arrests be made?" he was asked.

"I will have everything possible done," was the reply. "Sometimes we have to take bitter doses, but I don't think we will in this case. They will find they cannot stir up this thing and fix it to suit themselves. I am able to go at one or all of them.

"When these manslaughter warrants were sworn out," continued Mr. Berdine, "the lawyers tried to see me to arrange for some understanding as to the civil suit's procedure. Justice Von Minden did see me, and asked if the civil suit would be allowed to go through without interruption by criminal process, and I told him the law would have to take its course.

"Detective Mulvey was sent to Dunellen with specific instructions to arrest both men. I understand that the constable who had the original warrants and the lawyers fixed up the matter between them, and the men were allowed to go under a simple agreement to appear before the Grand Jury.

"The officers had no right to take such action. An officer with a warrant in his possession has no right to allow the man against whom the warrant is issued to leave his presence without making an attempt to arrest, no matter what his ideas of the situation may be.

"Constable Pierce said yesterday that he did not have the warrants on Monday," the reporter told Mr. Berdine. "He said he gave them up."

"He had no right to surrender those warrants," said Mr. Berdine, emphatically. "The justice himself has no right to withdraw warrants, and Pierce must explain why he gave them up. Who issued the warrants?

"Justice Von Minden issued the Stanbery warrant and Justice Warden issued the one against Harrison," he was told.

"They will hear from me this morning. I have sent for the officers and will go into this thing thoroughly. It is very far from being ended."

Mr. Berdine made no attempt to conceal his anger over the free-and-easy way in which the law had been handled by the officers. He will press the action vigorously, and arrests may be made at any moment. It was said by one of the lawyers this noon that he knew instructions had been issued for the arrest of the accused men.

Inquires for Waif.

Chief of Police Kiely received a letter this morning from the sister of Annie Smalley, a young street waif picked up recently by the local police, asking about the whereabouts of the girl. The sister lives in Cranford. Annie won the sympathy of the officials and she was placed in the Probation Officer's hands with a special request for care. She is now on a farm in the northern part of the State, where it is hoped she will forget the things she learned on the streets.

Costly Error.

Eugene McLaughlin, a borough youth, is coaxing a broken nose back to health as the result of a misjudged fly in a ball game. The sun blinded him as he looked up at the sphere, and the ball struck him on the nose, cracking the cortilage.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Work on the Sanford addition to the waiting room is progressing rapidly. The contractor, who is from Trenton, said today that his part of the work will be finished by Friday and that nothing would prevent Mr. Sanford from starting his lunch counter on Saturday, provided the eatingstuffs and supplies arrive in time. Although Mr. Sanford has said very little on the subject, it is probable that he and his son will look after the place. He did say, however, today, that the company had the lease for only five years and at the end of that term he could do what he wished with the loop. But that is a long time off. A man has been engaged to watch the place during the night. The waiting room, which has been finished a week, is doing good service.

WHY TRAVEL ABROAD.

An American Should Give His First Study to His Own Land.

When Payne wrote "There's No Place Like Home," he gave poetic expression to the love he bore toward the ingle nook more precious than "temples or palaces." What flowers of rhetoric could approach in power of assertion these five little monosyllabic words, "There's No Place Like Home"—to gainsay which were impossible!

It is the great privileges of Americans to be able without hyperbole to apply them to travel, for what is there in any part of the habitable globe more fraught with interest, instruction, education, refreshment of mind and body and uplifting of soul than nature has provided, with hand so lavish, for the delectation of those having the good fortune to dwell in this goodly land?

Would he see a Riviera? We have several on the shores of the azure waters both of the gulf and the Pacific, far distancing that laved by the Mediterranean.

Does he pine for snow capped mountains? Let him repair to the plains whence Pike's Peak, Mount Logan and our other great elevations rear their hoary summits into cloudland.

Would he witness a majestic cataract? There is but one without a rival, the imperial Niagara—in the chain of our great lakes, most turbulent of links.

Neither Nile, Niger nor Ganges, great rivers though they are, are comparable to our own Mississippi well named "The Father of Waters." Our peerless Hudson excels in picturesque effects the vaunted Rhine.

What of the beauties of the Golden Gate, on whose shores sits enthroned queenly San Francisco, pronounced peerless among cities by a much traveled European prince of imperial blood?

Where is there, even in miniature, anything to vie with the earthly paradise, the valley of the Yosemite; what to compare with the deep and rugged gorge through which passes to the sea the impetuous Colorado river?

The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, one of the world's wonders, is as yet but partially explored.

Why, then, travel abroad, while all these and vastly more than can be enumerated remain unseen at home?

"Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?" said Naaman the Syrian of old when ordered by the prophet to betake himself to the Jordan for healing. Who can help admiring his pride of country and robust patriotism? Most worthy are they of emulation.

Be it your health or recreation, there is no grander travel field than that we have at home.—Travel.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS.

Tell Central you want J. W. VanSickle and then give your order for a fresh cut of meat to one of his polite clerks.

Are you suffering from corns on your feet? Thorp's cure has cured many. It will cure you. On sale at all druggists.

I. N. Wyckoff, of West Front street, makes papering a specialty and he does it so that the job is neat and not "botchy."

Want a choice slice of beef and veal? Don't fail to see George Egel, on Somerset street, who treats all of his customers well.

John Herrmann, of Somerset street, is a stair builder whose ability is not to be questioned. He is ready to submit estimates at any time.

William W. Wilson, of West Third street, always has plenty of his special private growth coffee on hand. Everyone who tries it always wants more.

Of course you enjoy a plate of ice cream and the place to get it is at G. Mastondonato's parlor on Liberty street. It is a cool and comfortable place.

Up-to-dateness is the word that characterizes all the doings and the stock of Greer & Greenwood. All kinds and manner of gents' furnishings are kept there.

The Belleview Nursery has on hand always a large stock of trees, shrubs and plants. Orders sent by mail will be promptly attended to and delivered to any part of the city.

No matter how bulky or heavy your baggage may be, William Hand & Sons, expressmen, can devise some means of transportation, and it is always done safely at lowest cost to you.

There are three reasons why you should always drink Lindsay & Sons' cream and milk—because it is pure and rich and it is delivered promptly. Everything they sell comes from their Mountain avenue farm.

You're looking for hardware and tins that will last, and at the same time that may save you money. Griffen is the man that will do this for you and he is situated on East Front street.

Ask your neighbor and he will tell you that those cigars at J. P. Kirch's North avenue smokers' emporium cannot be equalled for quality. They were imported especially for the local trade and are sold at astonishingly low prices.

Now is the time when you see how poor your furniture looks in comparison with other people's. If you are thinking of purchasing new furnishings there are plenty of places right here in town where you can buy them reasonably without spending extra carfare to go out of town. August is and always has been furniture month. Accordingly Woodhull & Martin, of East Front street, are holding their customary sale in this line. Nobody has yet been dissatisfied nor none will be if she looks at the bargains advertised in this paper by Woodhull & Martin. Visit the store and see for yourself.

Woman's Skin Turning Black.

A woman giving the name of Mrs. Lewis, of Skillman, was taken to St. Francis hospital at Trenton last Monday suffering from a disease which as yet the doctors have been unable to diagnose. For some time past the skin of the woman has been continually growing dark, until now it is almost as black as that of a negress. The physician attending her advised her removal to the hospital. She became unconscious Monday afternoon, and at a late hour last night had not recovered. The doctors and sisters at the hospital have never had a case similar, and are unable to account for the strange malady. The woman's relatives accompanied her to Trenton and are much perplexed over the strange character of the disease.

Trap Automobilists.

Complaint has been made regarding the action of some unknown person in laying a trap for the destruction of automobile and bicycle tires. There is a trench about a foot wide, extending from curb to curb on Morris avenue, Elizabeth, midway between the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and the old Noah Parcel place. The trench is filled to the level of the macadamized roadway with broken glass, and every automobile and bicycle which passes over it without coming to grief is fortunate. The trench was dug either last night or early this morning, and several tires have already been put out of business.

Hunterdon Democrats Active.

Posters signed "By Authority of Democratic Citizens" calling a public meeting of the Democratic voters who oppose the stone road plan of the present law, to be held in each township and borough, have been widely circulated and posted in Hunterdon county during the last week. The call states: "These meetings are for the purpose of securing united action in behalf of the public interests involved, such as will make sure a strong representation of each township in the Democratic county convention in favor of an honest road improvement law and a quick stop to the present scheme so far as this county is concerned."

Charles Lyman and son, Ray, of Washington avenue, have returned for a few days from Bayhead, L. I., where they have been spending the summer.

LITERARY.

Tammany and the Odell machine being almost equally corrupt, and the Citizen's Union being as efficient as a perch on land, Mr. Jerome goes over the heads of all of them directly to the voters. If he wins against such odds, the example will be an extending influence for emancipation. It will encourage many a high minded official with the knowledge that not with political grafters alone lies his salvation, and it will occasionally enable some citizen, who is not in office, but is strongly wanted by his fellow men, to enter the public service without the trademark of some Murphy or Odell.—Collier's for August 19, 1905.

Molly Elliott Seawell's novelette, "The Chateau of Montplasir," which opens the September Smart Set, is just the kind of story one wishes to read in the warm weather. It is delightfully humorous from beginning to end, and, while some of the situations are hilariously laughable, the author never oversteps bounds of probability. Those readers who remember Miss Seawell's "Papa Bouchard"—and who does not?—which the same magazine published about four years ago, know what a pleasant hour is in store for them in this last piece of work. Miss Seawell has never given us a more rollicking and genuinely witty story, nor one so full of the very spirit of comedy.

AMUSEMENTS.

Seats are now on sale at the Madison Square theatre for the engagement of Blanche Walsh, who will appear at this theatre for a limited period in Clyde Fitch's greatest play, "The Woman In The Case," beginning next Monday night. There has been already a big demand for seats, and there is every indication that the interest shown in this remarkable play during its long run at the Herald Square theatre, has not in the least abated. Miss Walsh's portrayal of Margaret Rolfe is one of those unique dramatic silhouettes, which is likely to linger in the public memory for many years. The role of Claire Foster, which will be played by Miss Dorothy Dorr, has of course added immensely to the reputation of that eminent artist. But for that matter, there is not a character in "The Woman In The Case" which is not vitally and humanly interesting. It may be of interest to Miss Walsh's large following here that after her forthcoming engagement at the Madison Square, she will not be seen again in New York until after the conclusion of her Australian tour which will be inaugurated in the City of Melbourne early next spring.

ELIHU ROOT ON THE GANG.

"Criminal Combination Masquerading Under the Name of Republicans."

Elihu Root, one of the strong figures of Republicanism, has been elevated to a position of the highest honor and opportunity in the Secretaryship of State. No one who has watched his career can doubt that he will shed lustre upon the office and maintain well the honor of the nation.

His keen insight and his sturdy loyalty to the principles of Republicanism have not been shown to better purpose than in his courageous denunciation of graft among powerful persons in his party. His recent letter to Mayor Weaver, of Philadelphia, startled the country by its vivid language, and won for him the highest praise as a leader. His characterization of the Gang as a "corrupt and criminal combination masquerading under the name of Republicans" will always be remembered.

The utterance is of such wide importance that it has been preserved in permanent form. The letter will appear as a suplement to the Sunday North American of August 20. It is printed on a handsome colored sheet, suitable for framing, decorated with Secretary Root's portrait and the arms of the United States and Philadelphia, the whole making a souvenir which every Pennsylvanian should keep.

The Historic Hudson.

The Hudson River has a renowned reputation in more ways than one. Its business interests are more widely known than any other stream, while for excursions and outings it has no equal. There are sights galore—the palisades—the U. S. Military Academy at West Point—the far famed State Prison at Sing Sing and interesting Newburg. The scenery in every direction is superb and the steamers which convey the excursionists are commodious and comfortable. On August 17, 1905, the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its popular low-rate excursions up the Hudson, the rate for the round trip to be $1, children, 50 cents, and special train leaving Plainfield at 8:16 a. m., will connect at Jersey City station with famous steamer "St. Johns" for the trip. Don't forget date or train time. 8 11 td

PLANS MADE FOR THE MILITARY BALL

LEADING MEN OF THE STATE WILL ATTEND SEA GIRT RECEPTION.

Sea Girt, Aug. 15.—Well known men from all parts of the State are to form the reception committee of the ball to be held here on Saturday night at the clubhouse of the New Jersey State Rifle Association. This is the second affair of the kind, and the thing was prompted by the most successful function of last year. Major Robert I. Hopper, of Paterson, is arranging things here, and will act as chairman of the reception committee. He says everything is coming along all right, and that a big crowd is expected as the invitation list includes all the prominent men of the State, including the Governor and his staff, members of the legislature, the judges, many people prominent in the social life of the cities, and many from Philadelphia, New York and other cities who are sojourning along the shore. In all about a thousand invitations will be sent out.

The reception committee will consist of Governor Edward C. Stokes, United States Senators John Kean and John F. Dryden, Thomas N. McCarter, State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs, former Senator Jonathan H. Blackwell, General Bird W. Spencer, General C. Edward Murray, General Joseph W. Congdon, General E. P. Meany, Colonel J. S. Henry Clark, Colonel Dennis F. Collins, Colonel Edwin W. Hine, Colonel Anthony R. Kuser, Colonel Harry A. Potter, Lieutenant Colonel Richard B. Reading, Lieutenant Colonel Alfred T. Holley, Major Arthur Rowland, Captain Frederick Agens, Jr., Captain Frank L. de Ronde, Lieutenant Mahlon R. Margerum, Lemuel E. Wells, Thomas H. Kellar, Thomas C. Barr, Leroy H. Taylor, Hugo Neuberger and Major Robert I. Hopper, chairman.

BOYS MAY MARRY AT FIFTEEN.

New Jersey Court Refuses to Annul the Marriage of a Lad of 16.

Vice Chancellor Stevens of Jersey City refused yesterday to annul the marriage of Lola Bowker and Percy Williams, of Livingston. They were pupils at the high school in that town and were married when the girl was fourteen and the boy was sixteen. They first went to a clergyman, but he refused to marry them because they were under age. Then they went to a justice of the peace. Williams said he was twenty-one and the girl said she was eighteen. When their parents learned of the marriage Mr. Bowker made no objection, but Mr. Williams sent his son away, and began suit to annul the marriage.

In refusing to set aside the marriage the Vice Chancellor said the statutes of New Jersey were not very clear in cases where the parties were married and he should have to decide the case under common law. This fixed the age for the boy at fifteen and for the girl at fourteen, and as the girl was admittedly two months over that age and Williams sixteen when the marriage was contracted, he could see no legal reason for annuling the marriage.

GIPSY 100 YEARS OLD.

Louise Smith Lives the Outdoor Life of Romany.

Atlantic Highlands, Aug. 12.—Born in England of gipsy parents, and living the life of a gipsy all of her days, Louise Smith celebrated her 100th anniversary Saturday. She, with her son, is tenting on Valley drive here on the spot they have lived for several summers.

For sixty-five years she lived the roving life of Romany under English skies. She then with her family came to this country. Most of the early days here were spent in the States of New York, Connecticut and Pennsylvania. For nine years they have lived in New Jersey. A number of seasons they have spent in Fair Haven, Oceanport, Long Branch and Asbury Park. Many summer residents about this vicinity have visited her tent.

Mrs. Smith has six sons and two daughters. From one son, a builder of railroads in Africa, she has not heard in twenty years. She has a daughter in England. Two sons are in Pennsylvania and two in Newark. They own property in several cities,

Will Not Attend the Shoot.

It is said that President Roosevelt will not attend the country's greatest rifle shooting tournament to be held at Sea Girt from August 24 to September 9. The President, it is said, refrains from coming to New Jersey because of the opposition of the secret service men, who fear some accident might befall him. It was earnestly desired that President Roosevelt should come this year and present the President's cup to the winner.

'Phone Quells the Cook.

The wife of Dr. Augustin Goelet, who lives on the first floor of the Seminole, an apartment house at Broadway and Seventieth street, called up Police Headquarters last night and asked for help. She said that her cook was throwing things. Sergt. Wilson, of the West Sixty-eighth Street station, sent Policeman Walsh around, but cooky had heard Mrs. Goelet call up the police and had departed in a hurry.—N. Y. Sun.

Philadelphia woman choked to death while drinking a glass of water. Another argument for municipal ownership?

An exchange says "If you are advertising for fun be as funny as you like; but if you are advertising for business, be business-like."

Russell Sage says that he expects "to live to be 100 and to see Missouri Pacific sell at 200." If there is another hope coming he might wish to live to see his heart softened.

"The Republicans of New Jersey want no further curbing of their independence," according to Elizabeth's Democratic paper. Does any one believe that such a thing could be possible?

The Standard Oil Company has declared a dividend of six dollars per share, making the total dividend for the year so far thirty dollars a share. This amounts to a total distribution of $6,000,000. Mr. Rockefeller's share is a niggardly $2,400,000.

No, George, John was not on the roof.

A report gained circulation in the borough today that Councilman J. K. Arnold had decided to withdraw as a candidate for the mayoralty. There is nothing in it. Mr. Arnold is in the race.

Clarence Murphy told the tipster today that he will not be a candidate for renomination to the Common Council. "I'm not out for any public office, neither would I accept one," he declared.

Trenton, Aug. 16.—The State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners met in the Governor's room at Trenton yesterday and opened bids for furnishing the State with 100 voting machines. These two bids were received, one from the International Ballot Machine Company, of Chicago, at $500 per machine, and the other from the United States Standard Ballot Machine Company, for $600 per machine. The board took no action on the bids, and it is probable that both will be rejected. The machine of the International Company has not been approved by the commissioners, and the price of the Standard machine is $100 higher than it was last year.

NEWARK NEWS EDITOR, VICTIM.

Home in Summit Entered and Robbed.

The sneak thief who has been operating so successfully in Summit lately Monday afternoon got articles valued at $400 at the home of William M. Scudder, editor and publisher of the Newark Evening News, who lives at 212 Boulevard, Orange. The house was empty at the time, except for the servants, who were eating luncheon in the kitchen, Miss Scudder and Miss Mills, one of the household, having gone to Newark.

The barking of the dogs attracted the attention of John Alexander, the negro butler, who thought he heard some one stirring upstairs. He called out. A door slammed, then one of the servants screamed, but the man had made his escape by the time Alexander could get upstairs. The principal booty consisted of jewelry belonging to Miss Scudder and Miss Mills, and a heavy revolver taken from Mr. Scudder's room.

There are apparently many of these robberies, but, taking their cue from the police of East Orange, the Summit police are suppressing news of them as fast as they occur. It is known that the home of Mrs. Whitlock, on Waldron avenue, was entered yesterday. Mrs. Whitlock is at Lake George for the summer, and the burglary was discovered by John Vyland, a neighbor.

PORT READING GIRL UNDER SIXTEEN APPEALS TO LAW.

Sheriff Carman, of Middlesex county, has served papers in a suit for $10,000 brought by Miss Elsie Hanson, under sixteen years of age, against Joseph de Vita, prominent as the padrone of the Port Reading Italian settlement. The girl charges de Vita with breach of promise.

The suit is brought by her next friend, Marcus Hanson. Hommann & Strickler are counsel for the girl.

It is claimed that the girl lived with the man for two years under promise of marriage, but that de Vita refused to fulfil his promise.

Criminal action was taken first and the case was presented to the Grand Jury, but the Grand Jury failed to hand in any indictment, so the civil proceedings were started.

Under the old law in tort proceedings the defendant would be arrested and required to give bail, but under a new law an attachment can be made against his possessions, which are held pending the result of the trial of the suit.

LIKELY TO CHOOSE GUMMERE.

Consul-General May Watch Interests In Morocco.

Washington, Aug. 16—A prominent government officer expressed the opinion that the Moroccan conference will be held in Tangier early in November. He says, however, that a final decision has not been reached, and a definite announcement will probably not be made for some time.

This government has been approached but once concerning the meeting place. That was when the German Government several weeks ago asked the State Department if the United States desired to express any preference concerning the place of meeting. The department replied that this government had no preferences.

The negotiations looking toward settlement of the question are being conducted between France and Germany, the two governments most interested in Morocco. When these two governments agree on Tangier, as is likely, the matter will be submitted to all of the powers for approval.

Who the representatives of this government will be depends entirely on the place of meeting. If Tangier is selected it is quite likely that Samuel R. Gummere, the United States Consul-General at Tangier will be designated to represent the United States.

Loomis to Resign.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 16—Assistant Secretary of State Loomis will place his resignation in Secretary Root's hands as soon as the latter returns to Washington. It is possible that he has forwarded the resignation to Mr. Root. As subordinate officials resign as a rule, when there is a change at the head of the department, it does not follow that Mr. Loomis leaves by request. Neither does it follow that he leaves of his own volition.

HAD TOO MANY LAWYERS.

Legal Fraternity Grew Too Numerous and King Henry VI. Thinned Their Number.

The dowager empress of China threatens another drastic reform. She insists that the lawyers of her land shall—study law, reports London Black and White.

We all know the boast of Peter the Great—that there was but one lawyer in the whole of Russia, and he was going to have that one executed.

There was once a somewhat similar feeling in England, though as the statute in which it was expressed has been repealed, only lawyers now know anything about it. Henry VI. found that he had too many legal gentlemen in his dominions, especially in Norfolk and Suffolk. He drew a harrowing picture of the conditions as they had been and then were.

Formerly, he declared, when there were but six or eight "attorneys" in these counties great tranquillity prevailed. But now the numbers had increased to fourscore, or more, "which come to every fair, market and other places where is any assembly of people, exhorting, procuring, moving and inciting the people to attempt untrue and foreign suits for small trespasses, little offenses and small sums of debt whereby proceed many suits more of evil will and malice than of truth of the thing, to the manifold vexations and no small damage of the inhabitants."

Therefore it was enacted that there should be henceforth only six common attorneys in Norfolk, and the like number in Suffolk, and two in the city of Norwich.

RIGHTS OF CHORUS GIRLS.

New York Manager Protects Them from Unwelcome Attentions of Men.

The time is past when wealthy young men can sit in the front row of a first-class theater and ogle the young women in the chorus, says the New York Sun. Certain managers used never to make strenuous objections to this sort of fun, providing the young men didn't interfere with the enjoyment of the rest of the audience, but no manager will permit it now.

Five well-known young men about town tried it at a Broadway theater a few nights ago, and the management put up with their nonsense until the first part of the show was over. Then the five left their seats and started out for a drink. When they returned they were allowed to enter the theater, but two ushers barred the aisle leading to their seats. Near the ushers stood the manager of the house. Said he to the five young men:

"The ladies of the chorus have complained of your unwelcome attentions. You have seen half of this show and can get half the price of the face value of your seats at the box office if you desire. You can't return to your seats. If you try to, I'll have you all arrested."

The five young men consulted. Then they apologized for their conduct. The manager said he was sorry, but he couldn't let them return to their seats. They saw the rest of the show standing up in the back of the house.

MOTHS FOND OF PRUNES.

Possible Substitute for Camphor Balls to Protect Winter Clothing.

"I have made a discovery, or, at least, I think it is a discovery," said the housewife, according to the New York Sun. "Moths like prunes.

"I have mentioned that fact to many persons since I found it was true, and they have scoffed at me, all but my grocer. He tells me that he discovered some time ago that moths are very fond of prunes.

"I have noticed for some time an occasional moth flying around my kitchen, and I wondered where they came from. I remembered a few days ago that I had placed a package of prunes on an upper shelf in the kitchen closet, and I went looking for it.

"Now, this was a pound package of prunes, and the package was sealed. I noticed several little holes near the top of the package, and as I cut the top open what was my surprise to find it full of moths!

"If moths like prunes so much, I rather think that some day prunes may take the place of camphor balls when it comes time to pack away the winter clothing."

Man's Nose Supported Him.

There was once a man who was deaf and dumb, and in consequence had difficulty in earning enough to support himself. As often occurs, those who are deprived of one sense have another in an unusual degree. This was the case with this man. He had a sense of smell so remarkable that he became an expert in detecting the presence of oil wells. His nose was purchased by a big company (naturally the man himself went along with his nose) and he managed to eke out an excellent living.—Washington Star.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Sudbury Ave., care Hillier, Ocean Grove, N. J. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

THE GENTLER SEX.

Mrs. Angelina Clementina Smith, ex-assistant superintendent of the department of sociological civics of the American Confederation of Women's Clubs, and assistant general manager of the lingerie exhibit of the woman's amalgamated department of the Topeka State Fair, went to Kansas City today.—Eldorado (Kan.) Republican.

It takes a Kansas woman to think quickly in case of an emergency. Mrs. Cooper, a 19-year-old girl, obtained a divorce from her husband at Ottawa in April. She was given the custody of their only child, a little girl. A few nights later Cooper stole the child and left the country. He was traced to California. Mrs. Cooper went out there and found that the child was in a hospital. She employed a lawyer and went to the hospital. The attorney passed himself off as the child's father and Mrs. Cooper as a trained nurse. They were allowed to take the child out for an airing. Mrs. Cooper boarded the train with the child and they are now back at Ottawa.—Kansas City Journal.

To the quick eye and steady nerve of Miss Florence Rueckheim, of 4226 Vincennes avenue, Edward Olson, 12 years old, owes his life. The boy contracted his indebtedness and the girl won her laurels at Paw Paw, Mich., last Wednesday. Olson was sailing on the lake with his mother. In attempting to handle the sail the boy crawled to the fore part of the boat, but the tossing caused him to lose his hold, and he was thrown into the lake. As he could not swim and his mother could not reach him, his plight was desperate, when Miss Rueckheim saw the accident. With Miss Blanche Williams, of 716 East Fiftieth street, Miss Rueckheim was swimming near the shore, 100 yards away. She at once struck out for the little boat. When she neared it she saw the boy, apparently unconscious, floating near the surface. Seizing him by the hair, she began a long and ardous journey back to shore, which she finally reached after Miss Williams had assisted her.—Chicago Tribune.

"Who is the beautiful girl on the box seat?" is now an obsolete question. Motor cars have ruled it out There are no coaches, consequently no box seats with beautiful girls upon them. When automobiles chug along with beauty it is in disguise. If any curiosity is shown it is to see the car's number and wonder merely who the dickens that bundle on the back seat can be.—Boston Herald.

WOMEN MEN LIKE.

To be brilliant and accomplished would seem to be very much to the advantage of a marriageable young woman. This, however, is not the view taken by a lady with some pretensions to speak with authority on such subjects.

The average man, she considers, is a little afraid of the highly accomplished damsel. She is too apt to be assertive, to have opinions of her own, and to be a little deficient in that deference to and sympathy with masculine opinions which appeal so much to men. As a result it is often the case that the brilliant girl remains on the shelf long after her less gifted but more submissive sisters have provided themselves with husbands.

The moral seems to be that the clever girl mus be clever enough to avoid making too great a display of her accomplishments before her male admirers. She must suppress the tendency to disagree with masculine views of things, however wrong-headed, and remember that men are shy of women whom they suspect to be intellectually superior to themselves. They like best the women who defer to their opinions, and who make them feel pleased with themselves as the wise and strong sex upon which women must rely for support and protection. So at least thinks the authority; and truly it is a pretty lesson in feminine diplomacy.

CHARACTER IN THE NECK.

It is claimed that character, and often the state of health, may be judged from the neck as readily as by features.

A short, thick neck denotes a wilful disposition and a sagacious mind.

The avaricious person is discovered by long, thin neck, stretching forward in an ungainly manner.

The perfectly formed neck is rather long, but gracefully proportioned and rounded denoting a pleasant disposition, while the coquettish neck is of medium length, but allows the head to toss and generally holds it at an angle, while the oversensitive, shy woman generally has a long, thin neck.

The short, rounded neck of the affectionate woman retains its graceful curves longer than any of the others.

All of which goes to prove that, if only the neck were to be considered, a woman would, indeed, have every opportunity to improve her disposition and mold her character. Even a thin neck may be strengthened and rounded by proper exercise and massage—unsightly wrinkles and black lines escaped by avoiding tight high collars and collar-buttons. A pretty well-formed neck and well-poised head go far toward improving a woman's looks and carriage, and, knowing this, it seems strange that the average woman pays so little attention to this important part of her anatomy.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

I suppose I really ought to have left my card—or he wouldn't know who had waked him—but I hadn't intended to go calling when I left home. So I thought I'd look for one of his as a souvenir—and anything else of his I could make use of.

There were shirts I'd liked for Tom, dandy colored ones, and suits with checks in 'em and without. But I wanted something easy and small and flat, made of crackly printed yellow or green paper, with numbers on it.

How did I know he had anything like that? Why, Mag, Mag Monahan, one would think you belonged to the bishop's set, you're so simple!

I had to turn on the electric light after a bit—it got so dark. And I don't like light in other people's houses when they're not at home, and neither am I. But there was nothing in the bedroom except some pearl studs. I got those and then went back to the parlor.

The desk caught my eye. Oh, Mag, it had the loveliest pictures on it—pictures of swell actresses and dancers. It was mahogany, with lots of little drawers and two curvy side boxes. I pulled open all the drawers. They were full of papers all right, but they were printed, cut from newspapers, and all about theaters.

"You can't feed things like this, Nance, to that shark of a lawyer," I said to myself, pushing the box on the side impatiently.

And then I giggled outright.

Why?

Just 'cause—I had pushed that side box till it swung aside on hinges I didn't know about, and there, in a little secret nest, was a pile of those same crisp, crinkly paper things I'd been looking for.

Three hundred and ten dollars, Mag Monahan. Three hundred and ten, and Nance Olden!

"Glory be!" I whispered.

"Glory be damned!" I heard behind me.

I turned. The bills just leaked out of my hand on to the floor.

The Bachelor Beauty had come home, Mag, and nabbed the poor princess, instead of her catching him napping.

He wasn't a beauty, either—a big, stout fellow with a black mustache. His hand on my shoulder held me tight, but the look in his eyes behind his glasses held me tighter. I threw out my arms over the desk and hid my face.

Caught! Nancy Olden, with her hands dripping, and not a lie in her smart mouth!

He picked up the bills I had dropped, counted them and put them in his pocket. Then he unhooked a telephone and lifted the stand from his desk.

"Hello! Spring 3100—please. Hello! Chief's office? This is Obermuller, Standard theater. I want an officer to take charge of a thief I've caught in my apartments here at the Bronsonia. Yes, right on the corner. Hold him till you come? Well—rather!"

He put down the 'phone. I pulled the pearl studs out of my pocket.

"You might as well take these, too," I said.

"So thoughtful of you, seeing that you'd be searched! But I'll take 'em, anyway. You intended them for—him? You didn't get anything else?"

I shook my head as I lay there.

"Hum!" It was half a laugh, and half a sneer. I hated him for it, as he sat leaning back on the back legs of his chair, his thumb in his armholes. I felt his eyes—those smart, keen eyes, burning into my miserable head. I thought of the lawyer and the deal he'd give poor Tom, and all at once—

You'd have sniffed yourself, Mag Monahan. There I was—caught. The cop'd be after me in five minutes. With Tom jugged, and me in stripes—it wasn't very jolly, and I lost my nerve.

"Ashamed—huh?" he said, lightly.

I nodded. I was ashamed.

"Pity you didn't get ashamed before you broke in here."

"What the devil was there to be ashamed of?"

The sting in his voice had cured me. I never was a weeper. I sat up, my face blazing, and stared at him. He'd got me to hand over to the cop, but he hadn't got me to sneer at.

I saw by the look he gave me that he hadn't really seen me till then.

"Well," he answered, "what the devil is there to be ashamed of now?"

"Of being caught—that's what."

"Oh!"

He tilted back again on his chair and laughed softly.

"Then you're not ashamed of your profession?"

"Are you of yours?"

"Well—there's a slight difference."

"Not much, whatever it may be. It's your graft—it's everybody's—to take all he can get, and keep out of jail. That's mine, too."

"But you see I keep out of jail."

"I see you're not there—yet."

"Oh, I think you needn't worry about that. I'll keep out, thank you; imprisonment for debt don't go nowadays."

"Debt!"

"I'm a theatrical manager, my girl, and I'm not on the inside—which is another way of saying that a man who can't swim has fallen overboard."

"And when you do go down—"

"A little less exultation, my dear, or I might suppose you'd be glad when I do."

"Well, when you know yourself going down for the last time, do you mean to tell me you won't grasp at a straw like—like this?" I nodded toward the open window, and the desk with all its papers tumbling out.

"Not much." He shook his head, and bit the end of a cigar with sharp, white teeth. "It's a fool graft. I'm self-respecting. And I don't admire fools." He lit his cigar and puffed a minute, taking out his watch to look at it, as cold-bloodedly as though we were waiting, he and I, to go to supper together. Oh, how I hated him

"Honesty isn't the best policy," he went on; "it's the only one. The vain fool that gets it into his head—or shall I say her head? No? Well, no offense, I assure you—his head, then, that he's smarter than a world full of experience, ought to be put in jail—for his own protection; he's too big a jay to be left out of doors. For 5,000 years, more or less, the world has been putting people like him behind bars, where they can't make asses of themselves. Yet each year, and every day and every hour, a new ninny is born who fancies he's cleverer than all his predecessors put together. Talk about suckers! Why, they're giants of intellect compared to the mentally lopsided that 5,000 years of experience can't teach. When the criminal-clown's turn comes, he hops, skips and jumps into the ring with the old, old gag. He thinks it's new, because he himself is so fresh and green. 'Here I am again,' he yells, 'the fellow that'll do you up. Others have tried it. They're dead, in jail or under jail-yards. But me—just watch me!' We do, and after a little we put him with his mates and a keeper in a barred kindergarten where fools that can't learn, little moral cripples of both sexes, my dear, belong. Bah!" He puffed out the smoke, throwing his head back, in a cloud toward the ceiling.

I sprang from my seat and faced him. I was tingling all through. I didn't care a rap what became of me for just that minute. I forgot about Tom. I prayed that the cop wouldn't come for a minute yet—but only that I might answer him.

"You're mighty smart, ain't you? You can sit back here and sneer at me, can't you? And feel so big and smart and triumphant! What've you done but catch a girl at her first bungling job! It makes you feel awfully cocky, don't it? 'What a big man am I!' Bah!" I blew the smoke up toward the ceiling from my mouth, with just that satisfied gall that he had had; or rather, I pretended to. He let down the front legs of his chair and began to stare at me.

"And you don't know it all, Mr. Manager, not you. Your clown-criminal don't jump into the ring because he's so full of fun he can't stay out. He goes in for the same reason the real clown does—because he gets hungry and thirsty and sleepy and tired like other men, and he's got to fill his stomach and cover his back and get a place to sleep. And it's because your kind gets too much, that my kind gets so little it has to piece it out with this sort of thing. No, you don't know it quite all.

"There's a girl named Nancy Olden that could tell you a lot, smart as you are. She could show you the inside of the Cruelty, where she was put so young she never knew that children had mothers and fathers, till a red-haired girl named Mag Monahan told her; and then she was mighty glad she hadn't any. She thought that all little girls were bloodless and dirty, and all little boys were filthy and had black purple marks where their fathers had tried to gouge out their eyes. She thought all women were like the matron who came with a visitor up to the bare room, where we played without toys—the new, dirty, newly-bruised ones of us, and the old, clean, healing ones of us—and said: 'Here, chicks, is a lady who's come to see you. Tell her how happy you are here.' Then Mag's freckled little face, her finger in her mouth, looked up like this. She was always afraid it might be her mother come for her. And the crippled boy jerked himself this way—I used to mimic him, and he'd laugh with the rest of them—over the bare floor. He always hoped for a penny. Sometimes he even got it.

"And the boy with the gouged eye—he would hold his pants up like this. He had just come in, and there was nothing to fit him. And he'd put his other hand over his bad eye and blink up at her like this. And the littlest boy—oh! ha! ha! ha!—you ought to have seen that littlest boy. He was in skirts, an old dress they'd given me to wear the first day I came; there were no pants small enough for him. He'd back up into the corner and hide his face—like this—and peep over his shoulder; he had a squint that way, that made his face so funny. See, it makes you laugh yourself. But his body—my God!—it was blue with welts! And me—I'd put the baby down that'd been left on the door-steps of the Cruelty, and I'd waltz up to the lady, the nice, patronizing, rich lady, with her handkerchief to her nose and her lorgnette to her eyes—see, like this. I knew just what graft would work her. I knew what she wanted there. I'd learned. So I'd make her a curtsy like this, and in the plousest sing-song I'd—"

There was a heavy step out in the hall—it was the policeman! I'd forgot while I was talking. I was back—back in the empty garret, at the top of the Cruelty. I could smell the smell of the poor, the dirty, weak sick poor. I could taste the porridge in the thick little bowls, like those in the bear story Molly tells her kid. I could hear the stifled sobs that wise, poor children give—quiet ones, so they'll not be beaten again. I could feel the night, when strange, deserted, tortured babies lie for the first time, each in his small white cot, the new ones waking the old with their cries in a nightmare of what had happened before they got to the Cruelty. I could see the world barred over, as I saw it first through the Cruelty's barred windows, and as I must see it again, now that—

"You see, you don't know it quite all—yet, Mr. Manager!" I spat it out at him, and then walked to the cop my hands ready for the bracelets.

"But there's one thing I do know!" He's a big fellow but quick on his feet, and in a minute he was up and between me and the cop. "And there isn't a theatrical man in all America that knows it quicker than Fred Obermuller, that can detect it sooner and develop it better. And you've got it, girl, you've got it! Officer, take this for your trouble. I couldn't hold the fellow, after all. Never mind which way he went; I'll call up the office and explain."

He shut the door after the cop, and came back to me. I had fallen into a chair. My knees were weak, and I was trembling all over.

"Have you seen the playlet Charity at the Vaudeville?" he roared at me.

I shook my head.

"Well, it's a scene in a foundling asylum. Here's a pass. Go up now and see it. If you hurry you'll get there just in time for that act. Then if you come to me at the office in the morning at ten, I'll give you a chance as one of the Charity girls. Do you want it?"

God, Mag! Do I want it!

ABOUT COMPRESSED TEA.

Much Used by Russian Officers in Manchuria—How It Is Prepared.

"Compressed tea is common enough in Siberia, but so far as I know," says a writer, "an unknown commodity in this country. It is an ordinary black tea, which is very widely used by the Buriats of the Transbaikal region, by whom the herb thus prepared is drunk, flavored with salt and sour cream. Sugar would be preferred, of course, but it is either unattainable or too high-priced, costing, as it does, from 75 cents to one dollar a pound. The compressed tea used by the Russian officers in Manchuria is rendered hard by superb modern machinery. Such has been the pressure employed that the formerly soft and yielding leaves assume the appearance of a hard tile, which can with difficulty be cut with a knife. As a general rule, a mallet or hammer is used to break off a piece, very much as if the tablet were of stone.

"Suchong tea is used to make the official compressed tea. It needs no cream because nature has given it a slightly creamy taste, and also one that is feebly saccharine, so that it requires less sugar than other teas. In flavor this compressed tea cannot be compared with the natural herb. It is much flatter in taste, but possesses the same stimulating properties. A piece the size of a thimble is sufficient for a large, strong cup. No teapot is necessary. Scalding water is poured on the nugget in the cup, and in a few minutes the tea is ready.

"No cementing agent whatever is used in compressing high-grade teas—not even sugared water nor artificial heat. A tablet thus compressed may be exposed to soaking rains with little danger of injury. As a general rule, however, compressed tea is kept in worsted bags. The official Russian compressed tea is not obtainable in Europe outside of Russia."

SEATS CHEAP AND HIGH.

Elderly Couple Were Going Up the Fire Escape, But Were Called Down.

Occasionally they develop a sense of humor, even in Canada, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. The manager of the opera house in Ottawa, to the northward, was in his office busy with the sale of seats for the evening performance when a policeman called him out on the sidewalk and, pointing to the fire-escape on the front of the building, asked him to explain the sight that met his astonished gaze. An elderly couple were laboriously mounting the slender ladder leading to the roof, the old man spurring his aged helpmeet to mount a few steps further with the words:: "We'll soon be there, mother, an' you'll fergit all about the climb when you're looking at the show."

"Hello!" shouted the manager, attracting their attention; "what do you want up there?"

"We got gallery seats," shouted back the old man, "an' we're getting there, though it seems to me it's a pretty hard climb fer the old lady. Wish't I'd paid more an' got low down seats."

The manager then shouted that the entrance was below, and the way they had chosen was the fire-escape. The old people began a troublesome descent, assisted by the policeman, who had gone to their aid.

"An' that's what comes of your measly stinginess," snapped the old lady to her spouse, as she wearily backed down the last step of the ladder.

LAW TO PROTECT HUNTERS

As a Result of Many Accidents the State of Michigan Imposes Heavy Penalty.

Michigan recently passed a statute which makes it a criminal offense for one hunting in the woods to kill or injure another accidentally. The law is the result of the many accidents in which human beings were mistaken for animals and were shot. The penalty is ten years' imprisonment or a $1,000 fine, states Youth's Companion.

A chance to test the new law came at once during the last open season. A man shot and killed another sportsman, whom he mistook for a deer. The case was interesting in its outcome.

The offending hunter was acquitted because the victim, clad in garments somewhat resembling a deer's hide, was unconsciously imitating the movements of a fleeing deer as he leaped from log to log in the cedar swamp. Moreover, such is the grim humor of events, it proved that the victim was stalking the man who shot him, under the same delusion; thus it was merely a question which should happen to shoot first.

A similar statute was enacted in Maine in 1901. It is almost impossible to convict anyone under a law which makes a special crime of an accident. The principle at bottom of the law seems to be the old principle of criminal negligence.

Not Guilty.

MURPHY SUGGESTS REFORM

interest of no person or persons and has no candidate for any office except as may be chosen by the majority vote of the members and known by them to be free, unpledged and independent.

The principal objects of this club are to encourage attendance at the caucus or primary meeting in order that honest and capable men may be nominated, and to promote greater interest in the city government by keeping our members in closer touch with the administration of municipal affairs, and to do all we possibly can to prevent dishonesty and corruption at elections.

The members of this club gladly welcome the co-operation of other independent Republican voters who have not already joined this organization. It would be well for the city if such a movement were started in each of the four wards and that all co-operate together for the common welfare.

The proper way to bring about the desired reform is within and not without the Republican party, and this can only be accomplished when all Republicans who desire to see clean politics and the best men in office give their hearty support to this movement.

CLARENCE L. MURPHY,
Chairman of the First Ward Republican Club.

Coyne Resolutions Presented.

Assistant Postmaster James White, of Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon presented to the family of the late Assemblyman Edward S. Coyne, at Elizabeth, a copy of the resolutions of respect and condolence adopted by the Union County Republican Committee on receiving the announcement of his death. The resolutions are a beautiful specimen of artistic engraving and are bound in finest morocco.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, NEGRO, ESCORT FOR JOHN WANAMAKER'S DAUGHTER

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 16—All classes of visitors to the Spa have forgotten for the time being their pet topics of conversation and are discussing the sensation caused by the appearance of Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, in the dining room of the United States hotel as the guest of former Postmaster General John Wanamaker and the escort for Mrs. Barclay Warburton Mr. Wanamaker's daughter.

Behind Mr. Washington and Mr Warburton walked Mr. Wanamaker and J. R. E. Roberts. As they proceeded down the long line every eye was directed upon the distinguished negro and the former cabinet officer.

Comparatively few of those guests recognized either of them, and there was a general buzz of comment and a craning of necks. Mr. Washington preached here three times, first in the Presbyterian church, then in the Baptist church and late in the evening in the African Methodist church.

GOVERNORS OF FIVE STATES ARE NOW ATTENDING THE RECIPROCITY CONFERENCE

Chicago, Aug. 16—Governors of five states will be present at the reciprocity conference which was opened by Governor Deneen at the Illinois theatre this morning at 10. Besides the Illinois executive Governors Mickey, of Nebraska, Hoch, of Kansas, Cummins, of Iowa, and Johnson, of Minnesota, were present when John E. Wilder, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, called the meeting to order.

"The purpose of the conference has been somewhat misunderstood," said Frank G. Hagensbarth, of Spencer, Iowa, president of the National Live Stock Association. "It is not merely the cattle men who want a revision in the present tariff. The convention will include delegates representing every sort of manufactures. Heretofore each manufacturing branch or association has acted separately. Now we shall act together."

Fully 1,200 delegates are in session today, representing various industries and cattle breeding interest in all parts of the United States. Two hundred delegates arrived in the city today.

One of the most interesting features of the conference will be an expression on the tariff question from United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom.

HANGED HIMSELF IN THE HAY MOW

MAN COMMITS SUICIDE IN HIS EMPLOYER'S BARN.

William Matthews, aged about 17 years, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself to a hay mow in the barn of his employer, Medford Runyon, of Stelton.

It was about 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon that the young man's rash deed was discovered and his body was found hanging in the barn. Frank L. Runyon found him. Mr. Runyon had occasion to visit the barn, and on entering the structure he was startled by a sight of the unfortunate young man depending in the air from the hay mow.

Investigation showed that Matthews was quite dead. His tragic attempt upon his own life had proved entirely successful.

Matthews had worked for Mr. Runyon on the latter's farm for about a year. His parents reside on a farm in the same neighborhood.

So far as is known the young man had no reason for suicide. He was a quiet, steady young fellow of good habits, who had always seemed in the best of spirits, and the cause of his self-destruction cannot be surmised.

Coroner Hubbard, of New Brunswick, was notified of the event. He removed the body to the home of the boy's father, Samuel Matthews, who conducts the Buena Vista stock farm on th New Market road. He learned that the last seen of the boy was between 8 and 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when Frank Runyon, son of Medford Runyon, saw him, and the lad apepared to be in good spirits then.

The Matthews family originally came from Freehold. They formerly lived near the Landing, and attracted considerable attention at one time when the father was arrested for assaulting the members of his family.

The funeral of the boy will take place on Thursday afternoon and the interment will be in Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick.

VACATION DAYS.

Misses May and Alice Thompson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, of Rockview terrace, have gone to East Gloucester, Mass., for a part of their vacation.

Warren Chapel Excursion.

About six hundred people went on the Warren Chapel annual excursion to Asbury Park today. The train was composed of eleven coaches. The committee of arrangements consisted of J. W. Gavett, chairman; W. Brokaw, W. Demarest and Thomas Feney.

COMMUTER BARELY ESCAPES TRAIN WHEELS

WILLIAM WALSH THROWN IN ATTEMPT TO BOARD MOVING EXPRESS.

Making a doubly foolish attempt to board the 7:55 train as it was drawing away from the North avenue station this morning, William G. Walsh, of East Second street, narrowly escaped with his life. He was jerked from his feet just as he reached the Watchung avenue bridge and was thrown to the platform between the train and one of the girders. By the merest sort of chance he fell lengthwise and remained in that position until the remaining cars had passed by.

Railroad men and other witnesses rushed to his side and assisted him to the station, after which he started for home alone. He must have turned back and went to New York by another train, as when Dr. Tomlinson, the Jersey Central's surgeon, called at his residence he was not there. His family also said they had seen nothing of him. He was pretty badly bruised and may have been hurt otherwise.

Mr. Walsh arrived at the station after the train had started. He climbed aboard one of the forward cars, but afterward decided to get off and take one more to the rear. By that time the express was well underway and its speed would have deterred an experienced trainman. He caught hold of the rail and was dragged for some distance before he was thrown.

SAYS MAYOR LIED.

Dr. Ballard Declares That Ten Broeck Bought No Liquor.

Ocean Grove, Aug. 16.—"I believe Mayor Ten Broeck's statement is a lie, and I defy him to prove it," said the Rev. A. E. Ballard yesterday. His attention had been directed to the statement made by Mayor Ten Broeck, of Asbury Park, to the effect that he had purchased liquor in Ocean Grove within a stone's throw of the Auditorium. Dr. Ballard is vice-president of the Camp-meeting Association, and that body will investigate the charge.

Roosevelt Luck Again.

Albany, Aug. 16.—One of the laborers in the wreckage of the Myers department store, which collapsed last week, brought out a picture yesterday with the exclamation: "By Gosh! Here's Teddy, and ain't hurt a bit! Just his luck!" The picture was of President Roosevelt, and not even the glass covering it was broken. The men hung it against the wall and continued their work.

NO MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Elizabeth Council Tables Water Supply Scheme.

In connection with its agitation for the municipal ownership of water supply, the Elizabeth Common Council received a report from a committee appointed for that purpose last night. While the members expressed no opinion they stated that in view of the fact that the water company had offered to reduce rates and that the city is at present engaged in several financial matters, they advised that no action be taken. The report was received and by a vote was laid on the table.

The local system is now owned by United States Senator John Kean. The company proposes to allow a special rebate of three per cent on all bills paid in May and October. It will reduce the cost of water to the city for hydrant purposes by $1,000. The present cost to the city is $6,400 a year. The company proposes to contract with the city to supply it for five years at $4,800.

The company will supply water free to the city to sprinkle the streets traversed by the trolley cars which are not compelled by the charter to sprinkle the streets in the summer time. That was the original offer of the company. Last night's offer is thought to have been a slight reduction on the flat rate system for houses and a number of other minor concessions.

NO FRANCHISE BOARD YET.

Voorhees Can Have Judgeship if He Wants It.

It was said at the State House at Trenton yesterday morning that the Governor's "few days" had expired, and that he was prepared to appoint the commission to investigate the subject of the granting of franchises for public utilities and their taxation.

When the Governor reached his office yesterday afternoon he said that that was a mistake, that he had not yet succeeded in completing the list, but that he hoped to do so before long.

He said that he had taken his time in selecting this commission because he desired to get the right kind of men for the work, and he wanted to be sure they would accept before he made their appointment public.

When asked if he was going to appoint former Governor Foster M. Voorhees a circuit judge yesterday, he said, "No. But Voorhees can have the place any time he wants it," he added. There was no immediate hurry for the appointment, the Governor also said.

Ocean City Bath House Keepers to Fight Law.

"I own $50,000 worth of property, and I can afford to spend half of this sum in fighting those who are endeavoring to close us up on Sundays," said one of the Ocean City bath house keepers accused of violating the Sabbath laws by hiring out bathing suits on Sundays.

One proprietor, who terms the proceedings "spite work," declares that he can keep the fight up for years, with the aid of an association of bath house keepers that may be formed with a capital of $10,000.

The hearings in the cases of the accused bath house proprietors and restaurant keepers, are to be held at Cape May Court House at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

It is asserted that if the decision is against them, the cases will be carried to the higher courts.

ODD FAREWELL DINNER.

Each Course Served at a Different Residence.

North Branch, Aug. 16—A dinner consisting of eleven courses was given Monday evening by the members of the H. F. C., a secret society of young women. The occasion was a farewell banquet in honor of Miss Gertrude Harvey, typewriter and stenographer of George W. Field, who has resigned her position to accept one at Syracuse.

A peculiarity of the dinner was that each course was served at a different residence of a member of the club. The consequent walks between the courses stimulated their appetites to a great degree, so that the number of viands consumed was enormous. The viands consisted of soup, fish, chicken, meats, relishes vegetables, fruits, ice cream, cake and the inevitable tea. The festivities lasted from 6 to 12 o'clock, at which time the guests bid farewell to the departing guest.

—The Oak Tree A. A. festival and dance that was to have taken place last night on the Van Court lawn at Oak Tree was postponed until Tuesday, August 22, on account of the weather.

GEO. THATCHER COMING

Former Plainfielder to Appear in Opening Play at New Theatre.

POPULAR COMEDIEN

Made Mark As Member of Thatcher, Primrose & West—A Leading Part in "County Chairman."

When the big audience is seated in the new Plainfield theatre next Thursday night the entrance of one of the actors will call for a storm of applause that will not be accorded any other member of the big cast that will present George Ade's comedy, "The County Chairman." The fact that he will be blackened up will in no wise prevent his being recognized as George Thatcher, without doubt the most popular former Plainfielder who ever followed the stage as a profession. Genial and jocose and with a heart as big as a pumpkin, he has friends in every part of the city, and the announcement that he would be one of the first company to tread the stage of the new playhouse was received with enthusiasm. It will be opening night Thursday and it will also be "Thatcher" night.

Mr. Thatcher has been a comedian nearly all his life and theatregoers of today readily recall when he was the foremost minstrel man in the profession. By dint of hard work and persevering he became the head of the great Thatcher, Primrose and West company, which a little more than fifteen years ago was known from one end of the country to the other and which played engagements in the principal theatres of the United States and Canada. The other members of the trio of blackface stars were George H. Primrose, who is now touring the eastern states with the biggest company in America, and the late William H. West, who died a few years ago worth nearly a million dollars. In the height of his success Mr. Thatcher located in Plainfield in the handsome residence at Seventh street and Central avenue. All his spare time was spent in Plainfield, and he made it his home even after reverses came, as they do in the theatrical profession more frequently than in any other enterprise.

With the partnership dissolved, he financed several other ventures with varying success, and in the late nineties established the hotel at Terrill road and South avenue, which he called "The Maples." He afterward sold it to enter vaudeville, where he remained until Mr. Savage engaged him for "The County Chairman."

Though he has not the principal part in this production, he divides honors with Theodore Babcock in the title role, by his droll interpretation of "Sassafras Livingston, a colored voter." Mr. Thatcher gives to the part certain touches which makes it stand out prominently in every act, and his entrance and exit are occa-

INTRUDER RECEIVED TWO PUNISHMENTS

ROBINSON HIT WITH HAMMER AND LOCKED UP OVERNIGHT.

For sleeping where he did not belong and objecting to the protest of the man who did belong there, William Robinson, a machinist who has been more or less trouble with the police, had his face broken last night and was locked up.

A. F. Marsh is the rightful possessor of the room that led to Robinson's undoing. He is a blacksmith employed by John Stevens, and sleeps over the shop, at Watchung avenue and Second street. Early yesterday evening he found Robinson sleeping in the room.

He woke him up and told him to get out. Robinson insisted on his right to remain, and an argument followed. Robinson struck at the blacksmith, and Marsh, seizing a heavy hammer, struck him full in the face. Robinson, his face cut and bleeding, dropped with all the fight taken out of him.

Marsh went to police headquarters and swore out a warrant against the self-invited boarder and Patrolman Charles Flynn arrested him. Robinson had no excuse that carried any weight with Judge Runyon in the city court this morning, and the magistrate made it sixty days straight. He suspended sentence later, with a sharp warning.

CONTRACTORS START TO MOVE BIG BUILDING

WILL BE TAKEN FROM PARK AVENUE TO NEW SITE ON SECOND STREET.

Contractor Isaac S. Randolph began work this morning excavating on the former Stephen Staats' property on West Second street, adjoining Pruden's alley, for the cellar that is to accommodate the brick building now on Park avenue and recently vacated by Charles Schanz. It was included in the purchase made by Charles McCutchen and is the only one of the structures that he decided to move. The work of getting it to its new location will be undertaken by Mobus Brothers, of the borough, with Henry M. Johns in charge.

The building will be moved along Park avenue to Second street and then down to the alley. It will be strengthened to stand quick work and the men will work night and day in order to get it out of the way as soon as possible. It will be the first time in many years that a building has been moved through the business portion of the city outside of the Sebring house that was taken across Front street to Grove. The contractors started the preliminary work today.

Among the guests registered at the Park Inn, Rockaway Park, L. I., are Miss Ethel Beers and Miss Richardson, of this place.

MINISTERS DELIBERATE

Seventh-day Baptist Church Pastors Continue in Session.

THE PROGRAMME

Prof. Clark Talks on the Ministry As a Vocation—Presidents of Two Colleges Participate.

Fresh impetus to the plan for permanently organizing the "school of the prophets" was given by the committee appointed to consider the proposition in a report handed in at the Pre-conference Convocation at the Seventh-day Baptist church this morning. The committee heartily endorsed the project, and recommended that a committee of three be appointed to nominate officers for a nucleus to the proposed organization.

Rev. Dr. Main, the chairman, appointed Revs. G. W. Hills, W. L. Glenn and C. A. Burdick. Permanent organization may be effected before the conference ends.

The discussion this morning was on "The Minister as Shepherd." It was joined in generally. Rev. Ira Lee Cottrell conducted it.

There was a break in the series of discussions on the various phases and aspects of the minister's work at the afternoon session of the Pre-conference Convocation at the Seventh-day Baptist church yesterday. The afternoon topics are optional with the conference, subject to vote each day, and yesterday the clerics gave the afternoon to an informal consultation on the approaching annual conference of the general church, which will be held in Shiloh, this State, next week. The talk was very general, with little of interest to others aside from the clergy who will take part in the conference.

The paper at the evening session was by Prof. Charles B. Clark, dean of Alfred University, on "The Ministry as a Vocation." It was a strong presentation of the subject and interesting to a high degree. The session was marked by a good-sized attendance of church members. The meetings are all open to the public, and the lay audience was cordially welcomed by Rev. A. H. Lewis, of this city, who is "dean" of the "school for prophets," and in the absence of Prof. Clark, was in the chair.

Prof. Clark found it impossible to be present, but sent his paper in ample time for the session. It was read by Rev. H. N. Jordan, of the New Market church.

The tone of the paper was very hopeful. Changes in society, in economics and in industry have come rapidly, Prof. Clark pointed out, and the ministry is in a process of adjusting itself to the changes, and to the new questions and conditions that have arisen. The readjustment, he held, was working gradually for a better conception of the ministry as a vocation, and developing men along higher lines of training and character for it.

In the discussion that followed the paper it was generally agreed that whatever the ministry might lack financially, it was, as a calling, most desirable; that it was the broadest calling, and one that developed the higher side of men. Among those who took part in the round table were President Davis, of Alfred University; President Gardiner, of Salem College; Dr. O. U. Whitford, of Westerly, R. I.; Rev. S. R. Wheeler, of New Jersey; Rev. Madison Harry, of Rhode Island, and Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, of Westerly, R. I.

OVERCOME AGAIN.

Zimmerman Succumbs to the Tonsorial Strain Soon After Release.

William Zimmerman, an itinerant barber, who explained the drink habit among his craft to Judge Runyon yesterday morning as a result of the strain of handling a sharp weapon all day, must have succumbed to the strain again as soon as he left the court. He was found back of a billboard on Watchung avenue this morning, saturated and oozing.

Patrolman Overbaugh put him to bed in a cell. Yesterday morning he suggested to the magistrate that the heaviest fine allowed by the law be placed on him.

The Judge amiably refused to take Zimmerman's advice, but he will probably act on it when the strain-stricken barber comes before him tomorrow.

Mrs. Burtis' Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Laura F. Burtis will be held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lowe, of Fairview avenue, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock instead of 12 noon, as announced in yesterday's notice.

His Term Ends.

Lawrence Paoli, of 128 North avenue, committed to the county jail for a short term for Sunday selling, will return home tomorrow.

FISK BROTHERS GIFTS IN MOTHER'S MEMORY

PRESENT AGGREGATING $33,000, FOR A TRENTON CHURCH.

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, and his brothers, Pliny Fisk, Alexander G. Fisk, Wilbur C. Fisk and Harvey Fisk, all of New York, have made handsome contributions to the Ewing Presbyterian church, of Trenton. The gifts aggregate $33,000 and are memorials to their mother, who died at her handsome country place, "Wilburtha," near Riverside, on the Delaware, just a few months ago.

At a congregational meeting of the church Tuesday night, these gifts, many of which are very elaborate, were accepted. Resolutions were adopted expressing the thanks of the congregation for the memorials.

CONCERT PROGRAMME FOR TOMORROW NIGHT

FIREWORKS DISPLAY TO BE A FEATURE.

All arrangements have been completed for the band concert and fire works benefit to be given in Concert Park tomorrow night for the benefit of Leader Ben LaVere, and from the length of the programme it should call for the largest attendance of the season.

It will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and the music and pyrotechnics will alternate until the end. In the display of fireworks there are to be fourteen set pieces, a larger number than seen in the city at any time since the first Lady of Mount Carmel celebration. One of them is an immense pinwheel which will revolve for awhile and then ignite twenty smaller ones attached to it. There are also to be a large number of bombs, some of them giving eight successive explosions in the air. In most of the pieces the colors red, white and blue will predominate and an American flag will glow at the conclusion.

Owing to the great expense of the display, an admission fee of fifteen cents will be charged for the stand and a collection will also be taken among those standing. A subscription list started by the committee yesterday secured three $5 donations from Henry Windham, Henry Mehrtens and John Tier.

The musical programme will be as follows:

"Star Spangled Banner;" march—"Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa; selection—"It Happened in Nordland," Herbert; concert-waltz—"Auf Wiedesehn," Waldtenfel; vocal solo—"We'll Be Together When the Clouds Roll By," Mills, William Redmond; medley overture—"When the Frost is on the Pumpkin," Von Tilzer; vocal solo—(a) "You Must Think I'm Santa Claus," Silver, (b) "Happy Go Lucky Is the Way to Be," Silver, Billy Murray; medley—"1863," Calvin; vocal solo—"Down in Blossom Row," Renwick; march—"Yankee Grit," Holzman.

Some new Sea Girt instructions and notices have been received by Company K. Among the announcements is one to the effect that members who have not qualified on the ranges yet, may shoot at their own expense on August 12 and 19 and September 11, 12, 13, 14 and 16.

To enable those interested to prepare for the range Company K's armory will be open for rifle practice tonight and tomorrow night.

Those included in the class named in the circular of June 22 may also complete practice on the dates mentioned above.

The range will be closed on August 21, 22 and 23 to get the butts in shape for the international competition. The Governor's Championship Marksmen's Match will not be on August 21, 22 and 23, but on September 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16.

Choir Boys' Outing.

Eighteen boys, members of St. Joseph's choir, left this morning on the 8:49 train, in charge of four sisters, for a sail up the Hudson. The party will go on a Hudson day line boat as far as West Point, where a stop will be made for observation and lunch.

Robert H. Brenninger, of Brooklyn, was the guest on Thursday of H. A. Bird, of Grandview avenue.

STANBERY UNDER BAIL

Arrested on North Avenue Yesterday Afternoon By Local Cop.

CONSTABLE GETS BUSY

Harrison to Surrender This Afternoon—Judge Strong Holds Himself in Readiness for Fixing Bonds.

Friendly agreements between officers and lawyers in the Harrison and Stanbery manslaughter cases were abruptly abrogated by Prosecutor Berdine yesterday. The Middlesex county Jerome was as good as his word, and the warrants that had sunk to the level of legal feints took a sudden and impressive jump to face value.

Constable Pierce, who surrendered the warrants from his possession last week, got them back yesterday morning after he had heard from the prosecutor, and went after his men with an enthusiasm that was speedily fruitful. He gave the Stanbery warrant to Chief of Police Kiely and asked him to have the automobilist arrested on sight. This was the first time Chief Kiely had received official intimation that Stanbery was wanted.

About three hours later, in the neighborhood of 4 o'clock, Officer Overbaugh ran across Mr. Stanbery on North avenue, and the automobilist was promptly placed under arrest. He had seen the newspapers, in which Mr. Berdine's comments on the case appeared, and he wasn't surprised.

S. S. Swackhamer, counsel for Stanbery, joined his client at the jail a few minutes after the arrest. He had been prepared for the action since morning, and arrangements for fixing and receiving bail in the County Court at New Brunswick were completed before Stanbery was taken.

No time was lost in freeing the prisoner. He was turned over to Constable Pierce at once and taken, accompanied by counsel, to New Brunswick, where Judge Strong was awaiting him. He was held for the Grand Jury under $1,000 bail. Henry Liefke went on the bond. Stanbery was back in town by 7 o'clock.

The second chapter in the rejuvenation of the warrants will take place this afternoon, when Harrison, by arrangement between Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Constable Pierce, will surrender in Dunellen. The bail proceedings will be re-enacted, Judge Strong having agreed to be in his office between 4 and 5 o'clock.

The accused men will appear before the Grand Jury that convenes on September 5.

Mr. Thorn Improving.

MONEY STOLEN, HIT BY BLACKJACK, ARRESTED

INTERVAL OF FREEDOM AND PINCHED AGAIN—KINOSKOS HARD LUCK.

Under a warrant sworn out in Woodbridge, Joseph Kmosko, a Slav, of North avenue, was held for the Grand Jury of Middlesex county by Justice Mosher yesterday afternoon, charged with disorderly conduct.

The charge grew out of a dispute at Boynton Beach Sunday afternoon, following the looting of a bathhouse, in which Kmosko had his clothes, by a thief. When Kmosko discovered that all the change in his pockets had been removed he complained to the beach authorities. In the passage of words that followed, he became engaged in an altercation with Frank Harris, a colored beach attendant. Harris, he alleges, hit him over the head with a blackjack and put him out. Then he was locked up.

His wife retained William Newcorn next day and the lawyer went to Woodbridge, where Kmosko was confined. He discovered that Kmosko was held without a warrant or formal charge, and protested to Judge Whylie, in whose court Kmosko was arraigned. The court retorted brusquely, denying the lawyer's right to interfere.

Mr. Newcorn told his client to take a walk. "Take the first train to Plainfield," he added. Kmosko followed instructions.

In the meantime the Woodbridge officers were busy swearing out a warrant against Kmosko. There was a fuss when it was learned that he had escaped to Plainfield, and Judge Whylie accused M. Newcorn of betraying his confidence.

Determined to carry the matter according to their own plans, the Woodbridge officials sent on officer to this city with the warrant yesterday morning. Detective McCarthy found the man at his home. He waived examination, and Justice Mosher held him under $100 bail. The bond was furnished at once.

JUNIORS TO CELEBRATE.

Benevolent Council Will Observe Its Fifth Anniversary Tonight.

Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., will celebrate its fifth anniversary tonight and incidentally will entertain George H. Adams Council, of Newark. The latter instituted the local organization and has always taken an interest in its welfare. It will come to Plainfield by special trolley, 100 strong, and will march from Watchung avenue to Elks hall, where the celebration is to be held.

The committee from Benevolent Council, which has the affair in charge, comprises Horace G. Adams, J. V. Beekman, R. D. Carver, A. H. Windham and J. H. Adams.

Death of Mrs. McCloskey.

Mrs. Mary McCloskey, a well known resident of lower Fanwood township, died at the home of her daughter near Galvin's Park, yesterday morning. She was seventy years old and was the widow of Hugh McCloskey. The funeral will be held from Holy Trinity church, Westfield, Saturay morning and interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

Big Productions Coming.

Coming attractions at the new Plainfield theatre include Jessie May Hall in "The Street Singer" on August 25 and "Running for Office" on Labor Day night. The latter is the George Cohan musical comedy that has played to standing room all over the country. During September many of last season's biggest Broadway attractions will be seen at the house.

Fireman Dunavan Resigns.

Louis M. Dunavan, one of the most capable men in the Plainfield Fire Department, after serving fourteen years, has tendered his resignation. For the last six years he has been connected with Hose No. 3, of the West End. What business Mr. Dunavan will go into after leaving the department he has as yet not made up his mind.

Servant Fell Down Stairs.

While scrubbing the cellar stairs, yesterday morning, Mary Stechsel, a servant in the family of James T. Kline, of East Seventh street, lost her balance and fell to the concrete floor below. She dislocated her shoulder and sprained her left wrist, and suffered a number of painful bruises. Dr. Cregar attended her.

Borough Officials' Outing.

Lieutenant William Campbell and wife and Chief Marshall Weiss and wife are spending the day at Boynton Beach. This is part of Campbell's vacation and Fred Emmons, of the police force, is acting chief of the fire department. Joseph Flack is acting chief marshal for today.

STONY HILL'S LANDMARK

Catholic Church Where Plainfielders Worshipped 50 Years Ago.

FR. SCHWARTZE'S CURE

On Tuesday the Parish Will Hold Its Annual Picnic and Many From This City Will be Present.

Though the fact is known to but few Plainfielders, the St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Roman Catholic parishes in the city and borough include among their older members quite a number who worshipped in the early part of the last century at the little St. Mary's church at Stony Hill, near Berkeley Heights. It was the first parish established in this vicinity, and those who made the trip from the village of Plainfield to attend mass hold a warm spot in their hearts for it. At the present time it has but a few members, but it is still doing a good work despite many obstacles.

A sketch of St. Mary's church published in 1900 contained the following: "Among such little towns was Plainfield half a century ago. Over the mountain, in what we still call 'the second valley,' stood the little Catholic church of Stony Hill, erected for the benefit of the German farmers tilling the pleasant fields of that smiling spot. The chapel was eight miles away, counting the distance in both directions, from the homes of the little band of Catholics then dwelling in Plainfield, a journey delightful to make in the soft air of May, or when the golden haze of October lay broodingly over the mountains, covered with their autumn tapestries. But it was another matter when the fierce sun of July and August burned down on the shut-in Jersey valley, and on the side of the steep hills, or when the icy winds of midwinter whirled the snow through the ravine, and beat back the zealous souls who braved these terrors to hear mass. For brave them they did; what could they do? Elizabeth was twelve miles distant; Stony Hill was eight, and these Irish emigrants were used to enduring for their faith. So they toiled through heat and cold to the chapel built by their German brethren, nor thought the alternative of staying at home worthy to be entertained.

Time went on, and interpid Plainfield Catholics, who were to be seen fighting their way through the snows, over the ice, out through the Notch to hear mass, increased in numbers, and the possibility of building a church for themselves and getting the Archbishop to appoint to them their own pastor was discussed among them. The discussion ripened into action; one of the members of the congregation, appointed delegate for the rest, went to New York to see Archbishop Hughes, and laid before him the facts of the great distance from Plainfield at which the Stony Hill Chapel stood.

The Archbishop, then living in the episcopal residence in Mott street—for this was the New York of half a century ago, as well as the New Jersey of that time, remember—considered, and soon granted the plea of the Plainfield Catholics. This was in 1851, and the day on which the Archbishop granted this request for a priest for Plainfield was the birthday of the Parish of St. Mary's; it ante-dated by two years the erection of the first New Jersey Diocese.

The present pastor of St. Mary's church at Stony Hill is Linus A. Schwartze, who was born in Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 18, 1878. Father Schwartze is one of the youngest priests in New Jersey. Graduating from the parochial school in Pottsville, he entered St. Charles College, Overbrook, Pa., where he studied philosophy. After a course in theology at St. Vincent's he was ordained, June 6, 1903, in St. Vincent's Abbey chapel by Rt. Rev. Canovan, Bishop of Pittsburg, Pa. Being a subject of the Trenton Diocese, Bishop McFaul stationed Father Schwartze at St. Mary's church, Bordentown, N. J., where he was assistant for fourteen months to Rev. D. Duggan. Father Schwartze was made rector of the little Stony Hill parish October 1, 1904, and ever since his assuming charge the parish has rapidly increased.

To show the esteem in which Father Schwartze is held at his former home—Pottsville, Pa., when it became known how poor his charge was, they got up an entertainment and forwarded nearly two hundred dollars as the proceeds to help smooth out some of the numerous difficulties that he had encountered.

On Tuesday next a parish picnic will be held on the hill just above the paper mills, back of Scotch Plains, where it is expected a large party from this city will join in the festivities and help along the undertakings that Father Schwartze has in contemplation.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

While several of the village boys were gathered about the station yesterday morning at about 9 o'clock, a man unknown here, who was badly intoxicated, approached the group and asked if someone would give him a nickel for carfare. At this the boys became frightened, and one of the fellows, William Vail, produced five cents and gave it to the man. Thereupon the man took out a watch and handed it to young Vail. When the boy went home one of the family took the watch to a Plainfield jeweler, who examined it and estimated its value at twenty-five dollars. No one knows anymore about the whereabouts of the watch than of the man.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

New Jersey in Second Place.

It is more than probable that New Jersey, which now stands at the head of all the states in the matter of improved roads, will be obliged to yield this precedence to New York. It will never be required, however, to relinquish the honor of having been the first State in the Union to pursue the policy of State aid in road building, to such an extent that for years its grand total of macadam and telford roads exceeded those of all the other states put together. This is a record of which it will ever be proud, and an honor which no other State, however great, can wrest from it. New York seems lately to have awakened to the importance and economy of fine roads. It has built a few hundred miles in the past eight or ten years, but now it proposes to literally gridiron the State with them. In November next the people will be asked to vote on a constitutional amendment which will authorize the State to contract a debt not at any time to exceed $50,000,000, for the improvement of highways. Bonds are to be issued to procure the money for this vast enterprise, and a sinking fund will provide for their ultimate redemption.

The State is not to build the roads out and out, but is to pay fifty cents for every dollar voted by towns and cities for road improvement throughout the State. This will make the road fund $100,000,000, and it is not difficult to see what this large amount of money will do in improving the 70,000 miles of main and branch highways within the State. The $6,000,000 appropriated by the Pennsylvania Legislature a few years ago seems meager alongside of New York's scheme, and New Jersey's $250,000 a year seems almost beneath consideration. It is not expected that this vast sum will be expended in one year or in ten years, but rather that the process of road improvement will cover a period of at least twenty-five years. One of the most notable improvements will be the completion of the already famous Riverside Drive, in New York city, and its continuation, in one uninterrupted magnificent roadway, to the capital at Albany. The proposed sea coast drive from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May will, if it is ever perfected, have a rival worthy of the name in the splendid road along the bank of the Hudson River. If New Jersey is not alive to its opportunity New York's great driveway will be the first completed. That automobiles have given this new impetus to extensive road building is as certain as that bicycles helped to initiate road improvement in New Jersey. Much longer and much better roads have been in demand ever since fast-going, self-propelling vehicles have been in use. Distance is largely annihilated, and country sections heretofore out of reach are now connected with city offices and places of business by the speedy—sometimes too speedy—automobiles. New Jersey has no such sum of money as the great Empire State can command to put into improved roads, but New Jersey was the pioneer, the object lesson and the primary success in road building.—Newark Evening News.

DOZEN GOOD BUSINESS MAXIMS.

The president of the London Chamber of Commerce gives these twelve maxims, which he has tested through years of business experience, and which he recommends as tending to insure success:

1—Have a definite aim.
2—Go straight for it.
3—Master all details.
4—Always know more than you are expected to know.
5—Remember that difficulties are only made to be overcome.
6—Treat failures as stepping-stones to further effort.
7—Never put your hand out further than you can draw it back.
8—At times be bold; always be prudent.
9—The minority ofter beats the majority in the end.
10—Make good use of other men's brains.
11—Listen well, answer cautiously, decide promptly.
12—Preserve, by all means in your power, "a sound mind in a sound body."

GIRL ROLLED DOWN THE MOUNTAINSIDE

SLIPPED WHILE GATHERING FLOWERS—SAVED BY BEING CAUGHT IN TREE.

Sadie Devries, seven years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Devries, of Washington, had a narrow escape from death last Sunday when she rolled 150 feet down the precipitous side of the mountain at Bloomsbury, Hunterdon county, and was checked unconscious by a tree.

The family had spent the day at Bellewood Park, and the little girl was gathering wild flowers near the edge of the precipice. She stumbled, fell and rolled down the almost perpendicular side of the mountain until stopped by the tree part way down. Her father and other men got to her, but she remained unconscious for an hour. She was badly cut and bruised about the head and body, and was attended by Dr. Edgar Allen, of Bloomsbury, who first feared a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

The girl was well enough last night to be taken to her home, and it is now believed by Dr. F. J. Larew, who is attending her, that danger has passed.

Had she not been caught by the tree the little girl would probably have been dashed to pieces at the foot of the mountain.

LIKELY TO ASK FOR AN INJUNGTION NOW

WASHINGTON TAKE STEPS TO PREVENT WATER FROM BEING TURNED OFF.

Washington, N. J., Aug. 17—An adjourned meeting of the Common Council was held Monday night and Oscar Jeffery was appointed borough attorney. The Council has not thought it necessary to have a regular attorney for the past two years but consulted Mr. Jeffery and other lawyers when advice was needed. The appointment of Monday night was due to the fact that the borough is about to engage in another lawsuit.

There has been a dispute between the Washington Water Company and the Common Council over the water question. The old contract which expired July 1, 1903, called for $800 per year. The Council refused to pay that sum for fire protection and the company refused to make a contract at a lower rate. The result was that the company has received no money for the water used by the borough for the last two years. At the regular meeting of the Council on August 7, former Prosecutor William A. Stryker informed that body that he had been instructed to acquaint it with the resolution of the Washington Water Company that the water would be shut off from the fire hydrants on August 25, unless the $1,600 was paid by that date. In order to shut off the supply the company would dig down and disconnect each hydrant.

The Council claims that the borough owns the hydrants as well as the pipes leading out to the mains and if there is any disconnecting it will have to be done at the mains.

In accepting the appointment of borough attorney Mr. Jeffery stated that the water company made a mistake in not bringing suit against the borough for the amount it claimed was due. In this way the dispute could have been settled some time ago, as the Council would only be too glad to have the court set the price upon the water used by the borough.

Mr. Jeffery was instructed to protect the town by getting an injunction when the company attempts to shut off the water from the borough hydrants. In this way the dispute will be settled by the courts, which is what both sides state they desire.

SUPREME COURT BIBLE.

Book on Which Distinguished Men Took Oath.

Kept secretly under lock and key in the Supreme Court room at Washington, there is a small Oxford Bible around which cluster many notable and historic incidents. It was printed at Oxford in 1799, first came into court's service in 1808, and is believed to be one of the 20,000 imported by Congress a few years before. During its court career of nearly a century this volume has been called into service every day on which the august tribunal has held session.

The great constitutional lawyers of the formative period of our government, as a prequisite of their admission of practice before this learned body, kissed its material face.

Besides these great legal lights, every associate and chief justice, with the exception of Chief Justice Chase who had a Bible of his own, and every lawyer except Daniel Webster, sworn to practice before the Supreme oCurt bar, has taken his oath of allegiance on this book.

It is a tradition of the court that when Daniel Webster came before this high tribunal in his first argument in the defense of the chartered rights of his alma mater, Dartmouth College, against the legislative attacks of New Hampshire, by some strange inadvertence the oath was not administered. The tradition goes further, intimating that the judges were so impressed by he eloquence of his appeal, which stands out today as a classic in legal lore, that they either forgot or dared not to mention his direliction.

It is no wonder that this little Bible is so carefully preserved, endeared as it is with the memories of America's greatest statesmen and jurists. When a President is to be sworn in the clerk of the court usually purchases a new Bible, and after the certificate has been affixed he presnts it to the first lady of the land.—Leslie's Weekly.

CRIPPLED BY WASHING FEET.

Farmer Used Too Cold Water When Overheated.

Freehold, Aug. 17—Charles S. Hulse, a well known farmer of Page's Corner, near here, is near death, with the chances of being a life-long cripple even if he should live, as the result of bathing his feet in cold water.

About two weeks ago he worked hard fighting a fire which burned his brother's barn, and became much overheated. He experienced no ill effects at the time, and last Thursday he again became overheated at work, and while in this condition bathed his feet in exceedingly cold water.

As a result, Mr. Hulse has since been in a critical condition, his limbs being drawn and useless and his nerves shattered. The doctors have given up hope of his recovery.

FIRST KANSAS PAPER.

Leavenworth Man Has Part of First Press Used in Kansas.

It is perhaps only fitting that Leavenworth, which was the scene of so much of the free State trouble in the early days of Kansas, should be the keeper of many relics of that time, says the Topeka Capitol. Some of these old souvenirs are cherished by white-haired men and women whose memories are filled with incidents of the days when the border ruffian rode down on the little Kansas towns and when a man lived close to his gun and his friends.

There are others of the old relics that little is known of. Many are being used daily, while their owners have little knowledge of the part that they played in history.

A piece of printing press that once printed glowing anti-slavery editorials is now used by the Dodsworth Printing Company as an ink plate. The piece is the platen of a Washington hand press which was used in the office of the Herald of Freedom at Lawrence.

In the year 1861 there came to Kansas a man by the name of G. N. Brown who was a strong Union sympathizer. He brought with him the material for a small printing office and settled at Lawrence, where he erected a cabin 18x30 feet of green cottonwood slabs. In this little building which was put into use before the roof was on, was printed the first issue of what was known as a Kansas paper and the first paper printed at Lawrence. Although the first issue of the Kansas Tribune, which appeared later, was antedated January 5, 1855, the Herald of Freedom was really the first and appeared on January 6. Mr. Brown had previously printed 21,000 copies of this paper in Pennsylvania before coming to Kansas and continued sending out issues of it filled with protests against slavery until May 21, 1856, when his office was destroyed by border ruffians and his materials thrown into the river. These were recovered, however, and the faithful old press was again installed for the purpose of sending forth Northern sentiments.

It is not known at just what time the historic remnant of the press came into the possession of the Dodsworths, although it has been in the office for over twenty years.

John Dodsworth, grandfather of the present member of the company, once owned and operated a bookbindery in Lawrence over the office of the Herald of Freedom.

In the office with the platen are some old type cases which were shipped here from Lawrence three years ago, and it is presumed that the piece of the press came with these. They use it now for an ink plate and to make ready small forms on. Like many other things and people, its prominent part in the State's history has been played, and though retired to a more humble position than in the times when it sent forth eloquent appeals for the Union, its day of usefulness are not yet over.

Mrs. Joseph C. Martin and children, of Duer street, have returned from a visit with relatives at Bangor, Pa.

Union County Common Pleas Court.

In the matter of the application of Ann E. Chapin to have a mortgage cancelled of record.

Order to Show Cause.

It appearing by due proof that the said applicant, Ann E. Chapin, did, on the twenty-eighth day of March, Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-Two acquire by deed of warranty from Elias R. Pope and Hannah E. Pope, his wife, and Carman Parse and Eliza A. Parse, his wife, certain lands in the City of Plainfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey. And it appearing further that said lands had been acquired by the said Elias R. Pope and the said Carman Parse from Charles N. Hildreth, by deed dated May 1, 1876, both of which said deeds are recorded in the Register's office of the County of Union; and it appearing further that the said Charles N. Hildreth on the twelfth day of February, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-Four, executed a mortgage on said premises to Ayres Codington, William Mc Nabb and Augustus Codington, partners as A. Codington, Mc Nabb & Co.; Cora O. Meeker and Robert Anderson, partners as C. O. Meeker & Co.; Morgan Bird, Theodore W. Young and Abraham S. Young partners as T. W. Young & Co.; Alfred D. Cook and Robert Cook, partners as A. D. Cook & Bro. and James S. Carman to secure the sum of Four Thousand and Twenty-Eight Dollars and Forty-Five Cents, which said mortgage is still open upon the records of the County of Union. And it appearing further that the said Ann E. Chapin has been in uninterrupted peaceable possession of said premises since the twenty-eighth day of March, Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-Two, and that no demand has ever been made upon her for payment of any part of the principal or of any interest on said mortgage and that she believes that the said mortgage has been paid and satisfied and should be cancelled of record. It is thereupon, on this twelfth day of July, A. D., Nineteen Hundred and Five, by virtue of an act entitled, "An act providing for the cancelling of record of mortgages by order of a circuit judge or law judge of the County," approved March 10, 1891, ordered, that the said mortgagees show cause before me at the Court House in Elizabeth, on the sixth day of September, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, why the said mortgage should not be cancelled of record; It is further ordered that this order to show cause shall be served on the said Robert H. Cook by leaving a copy at his usual place of abode within five days from the date hereof and that the same be served on the said Ayres Codington, William Mc Nabb and Augustus Codington, partners as A. Codington, Mc Nabb & Co.; Cora O. Meeker and Robert Anderson, partners as C. O. Meeker & Co.; Morgan Bird, Theodore W. Young and Abraham S. Young, partners as T. W. Young & Co.; Alfred D. Cook, partner of R. H. Cook; and James S. Carman, by publishing the same at least once a week for not less than four weeks in the Plainfield Press and in the Plainfield Courier-News.

GOD'S JUSTICE IS LIKE THAT OF JERSEY

REV. DR. O'HANLON DRAWS THIS COMPARISON POINTING WAY OF SALVATION

Rev. Dr. Thomas O'Hanlon, at one time president of Pennington Seminary, occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal church at both services on Sunday at New Brunswick. In the morning, he spoke on the subject of "Spiritual Vision," and in the evening he discussed "The Way of Salvation," basing his remarks on Isaiah, 55:6, 7, "Seek ye the Lord while ye may," etc.

The sermon on both occasions was a notable one, deep in interest and abounding with thought of a profound type. Too many persons, declared the speaker, think only of how to get on in the world when the real question is how to get out of the world. How to live should not concern us so much as how to die. That is the thing we should most consider.

Dr. O'Hanlon told of a young friend who had just been graduated He had his subsequent career all planned. For the next three or four years he proposed to study law. Then he would enter the office of a well-known attorney in New York city and take up the practice of his profession. He would spend, say, twenty-five years therein and ther retire to enjoy in ease the fruits of his labor. And then? What then? Although the young man had so thoroughly mapped out his life, he had not considered his death. And that was the most important of all

People do not give the clergy the full credit to which ministers are entitled. They confide in their lawyer, feeling that he knows more of law than they do. They trust their doctor in the realization that he understands their disease better than they possibly could. But they do not accept their ministers in the same manner. They do not appear to appreciate the fact that the clergy have made a life-long study of the Word of God and must necessarily understand its meaning better than the laymen.

The only way to attain salvation is by seeking pardon through Jesus Christ. No matter how upright one's life may have been, that in itself was not sufficient. Nor would it do to rely upon God as being all merciful. God was just. It was justice that he would administer and not mercy The courts of New Jersey were known and esteemed throughout the land. Why? Because of their absolute justice. Jersey justice had passed into a proverb. It was not mercy but the dealing out of even-handed justice that gave this State its enviable reputation. And if the administration of justice was so commendable in a human court, how much more so must it be in the case of a supreme tribunal. It was therefore justice that we must look for and not mercy.

We must seek God, asking pardon. Salvation can come in no other manner. Dr. O'Hanlon said that he had studied the Word of God for sixty-five years. He had professed faith in the forties. The son of a good Catholic mother he had always lived a correct Christian life. He had labored for God and he had helped others. But all this, he declared, would not weigh as a feather in the scale of salvation without his having given his heart and soul to Christ This was the great thing, the only thing, to do if one would be saved Seek Christ, ask for pardon, and do not rely upon your own self-righteousness.

Dr. O'Hanlon will again preach in the First Methodist church next Sunday, at both services.

Matthew Stanley Quay built up what was probably the greatest and most perfect political "machine" of modern times. Millions were spent by reformers and alleged reformers to overthrow its power but attempt after attempt proved futile. Now Quay, the engineer of the "machine", has passed away and his handiwork presents a sorry spectacle. The first blow was struck by Mayor Weaver, formerly one of his devoted lieutenants, and the effect has been widespread. Even Larry Eyre, the most loyal henchman and at the same time one of the most astute politicians of the day has been driven to accept the reform medicine. A new day is dawning for Pennsylvania for the yoke of bossism is being lifted from it. What Pennsylvania has done can be accomplished by any State, county, city, or village, when once the people realize their might.

One of the silliest stories of hot weather politics has been manufactured in Elizabeth. It is to the effect that a movement is on foot to run former Mayor West against Judge Runyon for the Republican senatorial nomination, and that Ernest R. Ackerman could not win out against Runyon, "as the latter being a temperance man, would, it is claimed, be fought by the saloon element and the brewers." What rot! Everybody who knows anything about the political situation is aware that the county leaders have long ago agreed that the senatorial nomination should come to Plainfield. That eliminates a Roselle man. Again, Mr. Ackerman has never stood on a temperance platform and anyhow so far as Plainfield is concerned the saloon element doesn't cut any ice. It would be a calumy on this city and on Union county to say that the saloon people have enough power to defeat such a man as Mr. Ackerman were he a candidate.

Is a peace conference in order?

Charlie Dixon is not a candidate for Common Council.

The Democratic City Committee meets tomorrow night.

They're fixing the slate "over the brook." But slates can be broken, you know.

Murphy says the machine's demands were too great. Must have been reading about Mayor Weaver.

Major Carl Lentz says he is not worried over Mr. Colby's campaign. Must have a very optimistic nature.

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees can have a judgeship if he wants it, says Governor Stokes. Guess he'll want it, all right.

One William T. West, of Roselle, is now mentioned as an opponent of Judge Runyon for the Republican senatorial nomination. Who's West?

ROYAL ARCANUM'S PLAN

Supreme Council to Give Hearing at Put-in Bay.

ON AUGUST 30.

New Rates Will Be Effective October 1 — Outcry is Not So Great.

William F. McConnell, a member of the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum, admitted yesterday that there was still some disaffection in the order over the proposed new rates, and that the coming session of the council, which is to be held at Put-in-Bay, O., on August 30, would prove of momentous importance to the order itself.

This council is called at the request of representatives from several of the grand council jurisdictions throughout the country. Its purpose is to further consider the new table of rates of assessment which go into effect October 1, and at the same time afford opportunity for representatives of councils to submit their suggestions to the Supreme Council.

Several of the larger grand council jurisdictions and many of the subordinate councils throughout the country have endorsed the recent action of the Supreme Council in adopting rates intended to insure the perpetuity of the order. Notwithstanding this fact, several of these grand councils have also petitioned for this special session of the Supreme Council so as to satisfy the members generally.

"It is safe to say" said Mr. McConnell, "that no plan has been suggested as a substitute for the rates adopted by the Supreme Council that has not already been considered by the Supreme Council and discarded because it lacked the elements of efficiency and permanency.

"An intimate knowledge of the membership justifies me in saying that the mistaken notion that the old man is being overburdened is rapidly disappearing. Members are beginning to realize that the purpose of the Supreme Council is to lay up a fund to meet the advancing mortality cost due to increasing age, and thereby avoid increasing the rate as the member grows older, or by additional assessments. They are also beginning to realize that the young man, under the new rates, is obliged to contribute toward the cost of carrying the man 65 years or older who is now a member of the order. This is easily understood when I tell you that the cost of carrying the man aged 72 for $3,000 is $203.97, and for the man of 82 it is $483.60, whereas the order collects from these old members only $192.96, the order paying the difference between the mortality cost and the amount collected.

"The using of the larger part of the young man's contributions to pay the mortuary obligations of those at the ages of 50 years and upward is becoming better understood, and the policy of the Supreme Council requiring each age to bear its own burden of mortality cost, leaving the excess contributions of the younger men to care for the increasing cost when they advance in years, and thus prevent advancing the rate to the now young man when he becomes an old man, is being accepted and equitable and just."

LECTURED LAWYER.

Matthew J. Ready Sent Clerk to Get Paper Signed.

Chancellor Magie, who sat in Jersey City yesterday, read a lecture by proxy to a Newark lawyer who sent his clerk with an order for the Chancellor to sign. The lawyer was Matthew J. Ready, and he wanted an order signed for the arrest of a wealthy resident of another State, whose wife is about to start suit for divorce and alimony. Fortified with affidavits to the effect that the nonresident is now in Newark, but is about to leave the State with a new wife, who, it is alleged he married before he legally discarded his old one, Mr. Ready thought it would be easy to get an order of arrest.

"It's about time," the Chancellor told the clerk, "that counsellors understand that they cannot send clerks and office boys on important matters like this. Mr. Ready will have to come himself."

The lawyer took the first train for Jersey City, but the Chancellor refused to issue the order of arrest.

AT WOODHULL & MARTIN'S

VISIONS OF VICTORY COME TO MR. COLBY

SAYS HE HAS WON HIS FIGHT FOR SENATORIAL NOMINATION.

"We are going to win," predicted Assemblyman Everett Colby yesterday, in discussing his campaign for the Republican nomination for State Senator on the limited franchise and equal taxation platform. "I was not so confident when we started the fight, but I now feel certain that the machine is routed."

Mr. Colby yesterday spoke as if he believed what he said. Last night he spoke at Dessler's Hall, in the Thirteenth Ward, Newark, and propounded a public question for Major Lentz to answer.

"If taxation of the main stem of the railroads at local rates is fair, why doesn't Major Lentz stand for it?" asked Mr. Colby. "If it isn't fair, why did he report as a member of the Equal Taxation Commission appointed by Governor Murphy, that the Legislature should take it up for consideration?"

Mr. Colby said he courted an answer from the Major to these questions. Mr. Colby spoke at the noon-hour yesterday to workmen in front of the Westinghouse plant.

He was at work disconnecting two pipes when, it is said, the acid was in some manner turned into one of them and Oates was badly burned about the head, neck and hands. He is disfigured for life, he claims.

CAR SHOP FOR ELIZABETH.

Plant and Construction Yards Will Cost $10,000.

Elizabeth, Aug. 17.—The Public Service Corporation is to establish in this city a repair shop and construction yards, at a cost of $10,000, and perhaps more before the plant has been fully equipped with machinery and other appliances. The works are to be located on Port street. Accommodations will be made for many trolley cars, and it is expected that at these yards the summer cars will be repaired and most of the work of transforming the present cars operated in Newark and Elizabeth into single-enders will be done this winter.

An application has been made by H. H. Isham to have Port street closed from Livingston to Broadway, so as to allow this company to establish its yards there. The committee on streets and parks, reporting Tuesday night, stated that this street had never been formally dedicated to the city and was not open for traffic.

An ordinance, however, was passed on third reading, under suspension of rules, vacating this street. The company will begin operations very shortly and will commence to lay its tracks in the yard for storing cars and for repairing them. The company will employ about 100 men at the works, it is said.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Aug. 20: "The Duty of Winsomeness"—Prov. xv, 13-15; xvii, 22; I Cor. ix, 19-22.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

What a difference there is in people! Some have such a sunny way with them that they irresistibly spread good cheer wherever they appear. Others as distinctly depress the spirits of any with whom they come in contact. As every variety of flower has its own peculiar perfume, as animals have their distinctive odor, so people have a personality which they impart to their surroundings, an atmosphere which affects all within the radius of their influence.

Some are more striking than others in their peculiar aroma of character. Some are more susceptible to impressions of this character than others. There are all degrees of receptiveness and all shades of impartiveness. In some degree we all have both characteristics.

What we are in inner nature determines what perfume we exhale. The lily never smells like the rose. If you know the odor you can name the bloom and describe the plant.

Do you know any plant of great usefulness and beauty which has a disgusting odor? In boyhood I found a curious blossom with a penetrating, disagreeable smell. A few breaths produced a violent headache lasting many hours. I have never seen a second specimen, nor have I searched widely for one, believing that if it was of any value its use could be well dispensed with for plants less dangerous.

In life among folks the disagreeable is often the dangerous. Beauty and usefulness are linked indissolubly in this, God's, world. Form, color and perfume all have linked hands in the interest of the good, the right and the true.

In human nature the ugly can never be the admirable. Features may be plain by inheritance or scarred by suffering and seamed by exposure, but beauty can and does often shine through all these masks and reveal the shining soul beneath. There is beauty and winsomeness in a baby's face, but the wrinkled face and bent form of grandmother has a glory far greater.

What then? Must not each one shed forth just what he is? If unattractive, how can one help it? Can all be winsome? Truly we cannot long simulate what we are not. If ugly within, we shall display the same in tone and manner and repel others. But what need of inner deformity? Why not each become beautiful within and breathe out in all activities the cheer and pleasantness of goodness?

Happiness is less, far less, a matter of outward circumstance than one of inner sentiment. If the peace of God abide in us we shall be content in whatever condition we may find ourselves, content to let God lead, confiding in His care, hopeful of better things, but determined in pain and sorrow to learn and do His will. All this inner calm and sweetness must show itself in outward signs. No fretfulness quavers in the voice because none is in the heart. No hardness settles in the lines of the face, for the soul is tender beneath the Father's touch. The mystery of mastery and secret of sweetness thrill in the tones and the touch and win those who suffer to find the same Consoler who has given us His comfort.

Be winsome. It is best for your own soul. It is needed by others. The Master needs your winsomeness to draw the sorrowful and heavy laden ones to His restfulness.

Helping by Prayer.

We really can know but little of the lives about us. It is scarcely safe even to try to help another by changing his condition or circumstances. We may only mar the Master's work in him if we try to make life easier for him. It is better that as we pray we let God do what His wisdom knows best for him. But we should never cease our intercession. We have not a friend who does not need our prayers for something. We do not know how much of the blessing wrought by Christ when He was on earth came through His prayers. He spent whole nights in supplication. On His heart He carried the burden of human sorrow and human sin and went continually with it to His Father. Then we are told that His work now in heaven for His people is continual intercession. All the blessings that come to us these days come in answer to the pleading of our great High Priest. Much of our work as Christians likewise should be intercession. People need our prayers. We are not altogether faithful to the friend for whom we do not pray. "Pray for whom thou lovest," says an old writer. "Thou wilt never have any comfort of his friendship for whom thou dost not pray."—Forward.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 20.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The duty of winsomeness.—Prov. xv, 13-15; xvii, 22; I Cor. ix, 19-22.

We may do well to place especial emphasis upon the word duty in the topic—the duty of winsomeness. Too many people place too much stress upon their feelings and inclinations when it comes to religion. They pray when they feel like it; they attend the public worship in God's house when their personal inclinations lead them to do so; they are full of zeal and service so long as their emotions are aroused. But all the exercises of our religion are duties as well as joyous privileges when we feel like doing them. "Men ought to pray," says Christ. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together" is the injunction of the apostle. Nothing is left to feeling or inclination. Duty is given the supreme place.

Winsomeness or cheerfulness is a Christian duty. Christ Himself commands us to be cheerful even amid the tribulations of life. "In the world ye shall have tribulations, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." And, therefore, so shall we. The Christian has every reason for cheerfulness. Above all men, he should have a cheerful heart, for in Christ he has the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. But Christian cheerfulness does not mean an assumed cheerfulness. It must be a reality. It must begin in the heart. "A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance." The cheerful countenance that has not the merry heart back of it is hypocritical. By real true faith in God and our Saviour we are to keep our hearts cheerful and buoyant amid all circumstances in life, and this is to be manifested in our lives. And even then there are times when the heart is bowed down and a "cheerful countenance" would be unseemly. "To everything there is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven * * * a time to weep and a time to laugh, a time to mourn and a time to dance." Criticise not those who may seem too sad. They may be passing through weeping times and mourning times of which you know nothing. Keep up your own faith, your own courage, your own cheerfulness, but judge not others, for God has made no man a judge of his brother.

Winsomeness is beneficial. "A merry heart doeth good, like a medicine." Nothing is more contagious than cheerfulness. It is a joy to hear a good, ringing laugh that comes honestly from the heart. It is indeed like medicine to the sick, to the downhearted and discouraged. Physicians, having at last learned the wisdom of Solomon, now insist that all in the sickroom shall be cheerful. Let us try, then, for the benefit of others as well as ourselves to cultivate true Christian cheer. The way may be hard, but God will be with you and strengthen you. And, no matter how hard—

Sing as you go.
For your song may cheer one behind you
Whose courage is sinking low.

Christian Endeavor In Scotland.

The report issued in connection with the annual convention held recently in Dundee shows that since the previous meeting fifty new societies, thirty-seven senior and thirteen junior, have been added to the register. Geographically they dot the map of Scotland from Aberdeen to Galashiels and from Dreghorn to Dundee. Denominationally fully 60 per cent belong to the United Free church, the remainder being fairly well distributed among the other churches. Representing altogether six different denominations, they have a total membership of 1,758, of whom 1,232 are active and 526 associate or trial members. The total membership of the senior societies is 10,593 active and 2,070 associate members; total, 12,663. Of the intermediate and junior societies 3,925 are active and 2,806 associate or trial members; total, 6,731. The grand total, therefore, of active and associate members in senior, intermediate and junior societies is 19,394, being an increase of 1,063 over the aggregation of last year.—London Christian.

International Gatherings.

The following is a list of the dates and places of the twenty-two International Christian Endeavor conventions: 1882, Portland Me.; 1883, Portland, Me.; 1884, Lowell, Mass.; 1885, Old Orchard, Me.; 1886, Saratoga, N. Y.; 1887, Saratoga, N. Y.; 1888, Chicago; 1889, Philadelphia; 1890, St. Louis; 1891, Minneapolis; 1892, New York; 1893, Montreal, Canada; 1894, Cleveland, O.; 1895, Boston; 1896, Washington; 1897, San Francisco; 1898, Nashville, Tenn.; 1899, Detroit, Mich.; 1900, London, England; 1901, Cincinnati, O.; 1903, Denver, Colo.; 1905, Baltimore, Md.

Some Chinese Committees.

The Endeavorers of Shikitien, China, have a "pure body committee," which opposes intemperance and all kinds of impurity; a "heavenly foot committee," which advocates unbinding the feet, and a "heavenly union committee," which aims to arrange marriages of Christians with other Christians rather than with the heathen!

With the President In Colorado.

A note from Rev. Horace Mann, secretary of Christian Endeavor work for the Christian church, dated May 4, Rifle, Colo., says, "A glorious religious service at my appointment—Blue Schoolhouse, Divide Creek—last Sunday, with President Roosevelt in attendance."

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

BECAUSE.

He wasn't handsome, hadn't fame,
He bore no proud ancestral name;
Four figures, at the very most,
Could sum the wealth he had to boast.
To culture he made slight pretense,
His wit was rather forced and dense;
His chance for winning her seemed slim,
And yet—she fell in love with him!

By no means, now, was he a fool,
He had a courage calm and cool,
And perseverance of the kind
That shuts its eyes and goes it blind;
But, peace or strife, or sun or snow,
Whate'er occurs, contrives to go!
Not traits that win a heart, you'd say,
And yet—she married him one day.

"He has his faults, as who has not?"
She said when friends her reason sought
For wedding him. "He's plain, 'tis true,
I see all that as well as you!
For while on wedding him, I'm bent,
My love's not blind to such extent
I cannot see his faults and flaws,
And yet, I love him—just because!"

DOMESTIC SERVICE.

Such good work is being done by the Women's National Household Alliance in New York that local women are seriously considering the advisability of establishing a branch. The purposes of the corporation are to ally, through practical co-operation, all feasible means of promoting the higher life of the household, as follows:

First—By affording a medium through which housekeepers may obtain competent servants, and by securing good positions to good help.

Second—To enlist the co-operation of both employer and employee in raising the standard of domestic service and home life.

Third—To foster the interests of all who employ women in occupations other than domestic service, as well as assisting girls and young women to qualify themselves for and to successfully fill such positions.

Fourth—To advance the interests of pure foods, right living, economical buying, rational cookery, the marketing of products made by women in the home, the advancemat of rational education, etc.

The capital stock of the corporation is placed at $100,0.., of which nothing is paid in. The par value of a share is $100.

ON THE MILLIONAIRE.

As a rule the millionaire is a man.

Occasionally, however, it happens that he is a woman.

When he is a woman sometimes it is harder for the tax collector to corner him than it would have been had he remained a man.

It is nice to be a millionaire—much nicer than to peg along on pork and beans.

If you are a millionaire you can wear a butonhole bouquet everyday without all the neighbors making remarks about it.

You can marry your daughter into the nobility and no questions asked.

You can keep a dog kennel and 25 chauffeurs, with automobiles to match.

You can wear a pair of low-necked shoes in season and out of season without taking the advice of anybody.

There are a few things about which a millionaire should be careful.

When he offers to cover the nudeness of the heathen with shirt-waists and four-in-hand neckties he should see that they are of proper style and pattern. A heathen is extremely sensitive as to the cut of his garments.

To be a millionaire once is great, but it is a great deal greater to be a millionaire many times over. You can then give your fellow-countrymen whole gobs of education. In return he will gladly increase his gas bill and burn the midnight oil. In this way things are evened up.

Some people do not appreciate the millionaire. They are blind to his interests. They seem to think he ought to divide his pile with them. They do not realize how hard it would be for the millionaire to return to the hog and hominy that nourished his childhood days. This is an unfeeling world.

The millionaire is a necessity—a prime roast beef necessity. If it wer not for him no calm and collected Trust could come stealing over the land enfolding in its embrace the dealer in barbed wire and tobacco.

It is good to be a millionaire. Much better than to depend on your wife's relations for your bread and butter and blackberry jam.—Chicago News.

BOY, EXTINGUISHER, TROUBLE.

Trenton Lad Turns Chemical Upon Music Boxes.

Trenton, Aug. 17—A small boy created havoc in Barlow's music store Monday by turning on a fire extinguisher mistaking it for a music box The lad entered the store with his parents and wandered aimlessly about listening to the playing music boxes.

Tired of this and seeking new diversion he went over to the fire extinguisher on the wall, and doubtless thinking it was a new kind of instrument, he turned the key and was promptly knocked over by a stream of chemicals. Yelling with terror he rushed from the store, while the extinguisher played on the music boxes, adding curious sounds to their melody.

The proprietor of the store and an assistant, attracted by the boy's cries, discovered the trouble and carried the extinguisher out, much to the profit of their tailors and to the damage of their tempers.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

CHAPTER V.

Do you remember Lady Patronesses' day at the Cruelty, Mag? Remember how the place smelt of cleaning ammonia on the bare floors? Remember the black dresses we all wore, and the white aprons with the little bibs, and the oily sweetness of the matron, and how our faces shone and tingled from the soap and the rubbing? Remember it all?

Well, who'd 'a' thought then that Nance Olden ever would make use of it—on the level, too!

Drop the Cruelty, and tell you about the stage? Why, it's bare boards back there, bare as the Cruelty, but oh, there's something that you don't see, but you feel it—something magic that makes you want to pinch yourself to be sure you're awake. I go round there just doped with it; my face, if you could see it, must look like Molly's kid's when she is telling him fairy stories.

I love it, Mag! I love it!

And what do I do? That's what I was trying to tell you about the Cruelty for. It's in a little act that was made for Lady Gray, that there are four Charity girls on the stage, and I'm one of 'em.

Lady Gray? Why, Mag, how can you ever hope to get on if you don't know who's who? How can you expect me to associate with you if you're so ignorant? Yes—a real Lady, as real as the wife of a Lord can be. Lord Harold Gray's a sure enough Lord, and she's his wife, but—but a chippy, just the same; that's what she is, in spite of the Gray emeralds and that great Gray rose diamond she wears on the tiniest chain around her scraggy neck. Do you know, Mag Monahan, that this Lady Harold Gray was just a chorus girl—and a sweet chorus it must have been if she sang there!—when she nabbed Lord Harold?

You'd better keep your eye on Nancy Olden, or first thing you know she'll marry the czar of Russia—or Tom Dorgan, poor fellow, when he gets out! . . . Well, just the same, Mag, if that white-faced, scrawny little creature can be a lady, a girl with ten times her brains, and at least half a dozen times her good looks—oh, we're not shy on the stage, Mag, about throwing bouquets at ourselves!

Can she act? Don't be silly, Mag! Can't you see that Obermuller's just hiring her title and playing it in big letters on the bills for all it's worth? She acts the Lady Patroness, come to look at us Charity girls. She comes on, though, looking like a fairy princess. Her dress is just blazing with diamonds. There's the lady's coronet in her hair. Her thin little arms are banded with gold and diamonds, and on her neck—O, Mag, Mag, that rose diamond is the color of rose leaves in a fountain's jet through which the sun is shining. It's long—long as my thumb—I swear it is, Mag—nearly, and it blazes oh, it blazes—

Well, it blazes dollars into Obermuller's box all right, for the Gray jewels are advertised in the bill with this one at the head of the list, the star of them all.

You see it's this way: Lord Harold Gray's bankrupt. He's poor as—as Nance Olden. Isn't that funny? But he's got the family jewels all right, to have as long as he lives. Nary a one can he sell, though, for after his death they go to the next Lord Gray. So he makes 'em make a living for him, and as they can't go on and exhibit themselves, Lady Gray sports 'em—and draws down $200 a week.

Yep—two hundred.

But do you know it isn't the two hundred dollars a week that makes me envy her till I'm sick; it's that rose diamond. If you could only see it, Mag, you'd sympathize with me, and understand why my fingers just itched for it the first night I saw her come on.

'Pon my soul, Mag, the sight of it blazing on her neck dazzled me so that it shut out all the staring audience that first night, and I even forgot to have stage fright.

"What's doped you, Olden?" Obermuller asked when the curtain went down, and we all hurried to the wings.

I was in the black dress with the white-bibbed apron, and I looked up at him still dazed by the shine of that diamond and my longing for it. You'd almost kill with your own hands for a diamond like that, Mag!

"Doped? Why—what didn't I do?" I asked him.

"That's just it," he said, looking at me curiously; but I could feel his disappointment in me. "You didn't do anything—not a blasted thing more than you were told to do. The world's full of supers that can do that."

For just a minute I forgot the diamond.

"Then—it's a mistake? You were wrong and—and I can't be an actress?"

He threw back his head before he answered, puffing a mouthful of smoke up at the ceiling, as he did the night he caught me. The gesture itself seemed to remind him of what had made him think in the first place he could make an actress of me. For he laughed down at me, and I saw he remembered.

"Well," he said, "we'll wait and see. . . . I was mistaken, though, sure enough, about one thing that night."

I looked up at him.

"You're a darn sight prettier than I thought you were. The gold brick you sold me isn't all—"

He put out his hand to touch my chin. I sidestepped, and he turned laughing to the stage.

But he called after me.

"Is a beauty success going to content you, Olden?"

"Well, we'll wait and see," I drawled back at him in his own throaty bass.

Oh, I was drunk, Mag, drunk with thinking about that diamond! I didn't care even to please Obermuller. I just wanted the feel of that diamond in my hand. I wanted it lying on my own neck—the lovely, cool, shining, rosy thing. It's like the sunrise, Mag, that beauty stone. It's just a tiny pool of water blushing. It's—

How to get it! How to get away with it! On what we'd get for that diamond, Tom and I—when his time is up—could live for all our lives and whoop it up besides. We could live in Paris, where great grafters live and grafting pays—where, if you've got wit and £50,000, and happen to be a "darn sight prettier," you can just spin the world around your little finger!

But, do you know, even then I couldn't bear to think of selling the pretty thing? It hurt me to think of anybody having it but just Nance Olden.

But I hadn't got it yet.

Gray has a dressing-room to herself. And on her table—which is a big box, open end down—just where the three-sided big mirror can multiply the jewels and make you want 'em three times as bad, her big russia-leather, silver-mounted box lies open, while she's dressing and undressing. Other times it's locked tight, and his lordship himself has it tight in his own right hand, or his lordship's man, Topham, has it just as tight.

How to get that diamond! There was a hard nut for Nance Olden's sharp teeth to crack. I only wanted that—never say I'm greedy, Mag—Gray could keep all the rest of the things—the pigeon in rubies and pearls, the tiara all in diamonds, the chain of pearls, and the blazing rings, and the waist-trimming all of emeralds and diamond stars. But that diamond, that huge rose diamond, I couldn't, I just couldn't let her have it.

And yet I didn't know the first step to take toward getting it, till Beryl Blackburn helped me out. She's one of the Charities, like me—a tall bleached blonde with a pretty, pale face and gold-gray eyes. And, if you'd believe her, there's not a man in the audience, afternoon or evening, that isn't dead-gone on her.

"Guess who's my latest," she said to me this afternoon, while we four Charities stood in the wings waiting. "Topham—old Topham!"

It all got clear to me then in a minute.

"Topham—nothing!" I sneered. "Beryl Bighead, Topham thinks of only one thing—milady's jewel-box. Don't you fool yourself."

"Oh, does he, miss! Well just to prove it, he let me try on the rose diamond last night. There!"

"It's easy to say so, but I don't see the proof. He'd lose his job so quick it'd make his head spin if he did it."

"Not if he did, but if they knew he did. You'll not tell?"

"Not me. Why would I? I don't believe it, and I wouldn't expect anybody else to. I don't believe you could get Topham to budge from his chair in Gray's dressing-room if you'd—"

"What'll you bet?"

"I'll bet you the biggest box of chocolate creams at Huyler's."

"Done! I'll send for him to-night, just before Gray and her lord come, and you'll see—"

"How'll I see? Where'll I be?"

"Well, you be waiting in the little hall right off Gray's dressing-room at 7:30 to-night and—you might as well bring the creams with you."

Catch on, Mag? At 7:30 in the evening I was waiting; but not in the little hall off Gray's dressing-room. I hadn't gone home at all after the afternoon performance—you know we play at three, and again at 8:30. I had just hidden me away till the rest were gone, and as soon as the coast was clear I got into Gray's dressing-room, pushed aside the chintz curtains of the big box that makes her dressing-table—and waited.

Lord, how the hours dragged! I hadn't had anything to eat since lunch, and it got darker and darker in there, and hot and close and cramped. I put in the time, much as I could, thinking of Tom. The very first thing I'd do after cashing in, would be to get up to Sing Sing to see him. I'm crazy to see him. I'd tell him the news and see if he couldn't bribe a guard, or plan some scheme with me to get out soon.

AND OUT OF THE WINDOW.

ROBBING POOR BOXES.

Two Men Held by the Elizabeth Police.

Elizabeth, Aug. 17—The two men who were arrested, charged with robbing the poor boxes in St. Patrick's church here, were brought before the court Tuesday. They gave their names as Louis Bernard and Louis Robel, and said they were Frenchmen. They claimed they reside in Hoboken, and have been in this country only six months.

It was late in the afternoon when a young woman, who was in the church, saw two men with a wire attempting to get coins out of the poor boxes. She immediately left the edifice and, going across the street, notified Patrolman Lawlor. In the meanwhile the two men who had been in the church came out, and when Lawlor started toward them began to run.

Lawlor set after them and finally captured one of them, who proved to be the man who gave his name as Bernard. The other man, who says his name is Robel, was taken by Andrew Pender, a local baseball player, who saw him hiding in the bushes near the Long Branch Railroad, and collared him. Very Rev. Dean Gessner, pastor of the church, appeared against the men Tuesday, and they will probably be held for the Grand Jury.

"Fighting Bob's" Sea Legs.

The Sayville (L. I.) correspondent of a New York paper volunteers the following fragment of personal news: "Society ladies returning to Sayville, Oakdale and Bayport from a two weeks' outing at Bar Harbor report that Admiral "Fighting Bob" Evans may have fine sea legs, but seemed too frequently inclined to attacks of rheumatics during fierce engagements on the ballroom floors."

To Succeed Shaw.

Washington, Aug. 17—Postmaster General Cortelyou, it is said, will succeed Secretary of the Treasury Shaw when Mr. Shaw retires voluntarily in February. The position has been offered to Secretary Cortelyou, and it is said he shows some hesitation about accepting it. Harry S. New, of Indianapolis, it is said, will be appointed to head the Post Office Department.

E. A. Edgar, of Fairview avenue, who has been in Switzerland for the past six months on account of his health, is much improved, and will sail for home on the Republic, of The Boston Line, on August 25th.

FAKED PATERSON CENSUS FIGURES

CITIZENS ALLEGE THAT SOME ENUMERATORS MADE UP LISTS IN SALOONS.

Paterson, Aug. 17—The announcement that the census of Paterson shows but a population of 111,529 has caused a wave of indignation to sweep over the city, and the business interests in particular make angry protests against the figures.

It is the general sentiment throughout the city that the figures are grossly inaccurate, and the residents will not accept the population given in the official census as the population of the city.

From the time the enumerators commenced, it has been reported that the work was being done in a haphazard style. When one of the enumerators was discovered to have submitted a padded roll, no one was surprised. Close on the discovery of this enumerator's wrong doings came startling charges against another.

There are residents of the city who say that the enumerators never came to ask for their names. A prominent lawyer declares that he has heard several residents say they never saw a census enumerator. Remarks of this kind are heard on all sides.

In the court house yesterday morning a county official declared that the returns looked as if some of the enumerators had not done their work in a proper manner. "The trouble is," he said, "that the jobs were handed out as political favors, and taken with the idea that they were soft snaps."

The startling contrasts between the figures of the last federal census and this census is too plain to be overlooked. While the criticism may not be applied to all of the enumerators, it is stated on good authority that some of them spent their time in the rear rooms of saloons making out padded lists, instead of canvassing the districts assigned to them.

The Secretary of State's office expressed some doubt upon the accuracy of the figures in announcing the returns, and it would not at all be surprising if an investigation was started.

LABOR DECISIONS.

Judge Hands Down Verdict in the Child Labor Lawsuits.

Trenton, Aug. 17—Judge MacPherson, of the City District Court, handed down his decision in the child labor suits instituted by the department of labor against the Mercer Pottery Company, of this city, and the United Oilcloth Company, of Yardville. A fine of $50 was imposed upon each company. These cases were tried in the City District Court last week. One of the defenses made by the Mercer Pottery Company was that the Cooney girl was not employed by the company, but by one of its foremen.

Judge MacPherson, in announcing his decision, held that the fact of her employment by the company was shown because she was paid directly from the office. He held, however, during the argument of the case, that even were this not so the present law made the manufacturer liable for any child allowed or permitted to work in a factory, whether employed directly by the owners or by one of their employes. Under the old act, in a suit brought against the Cook Pottery Company, Judge MacPherson held that employment by a foreman did not render the manufacturers liable. The decision is regarded as important by the labor department.

GRIFFITH IS BOUNCED.

Ex-Magnate Has Been "Summarily Removed."

Cincinnati Aug. 17—The National Baseball Commission, comprising Chairman Garry Herrmann, of this city; President Ban Johnson, of the American League, and President Harry Pulliam, of the National League, met here Tuesday to consider Johnson's charges that Howard Griffith, of Jersey City, had conspired to disrupt the American League, one of the parties to the national agreement.

After the commission had been called to order a resolution reciting recent action of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in regard to Griffith was read, in which it was announced that Griffith had been "summarily removed" from all connection with the National Association and from the National Board of Arbitration. In view of this fact, the commission decided that as the individual against whom charges had been made was no longer connected with baseball, the case was not before the commission, and it was therefore formally stricken from the records.

Jupiter's Seventh Satellite.

Late last night Harvard Observatory officials received a telegram from the Lick Observatory at Mount Hamilton, San Jose, California, that a seventh satellite of Jupiter has been observed. On August 8 the satellite was seen at 289.07 degrees distant 54.05 minutes; on August 9, 298.05 degrees; on the 10th, 289.04 degrees. This satellite is a new discovery, as Jupiter was thought to have only six satellites.

GEORGE THATCHER COMING

sions for successions of laughter. He is an impecunious darky who furnishes the "necessary color" in the campaign; always willing to sell his vote and gain a living at the minimum of exertion. He has a large family and the politicians are continually being informed, individually, that there is a new arrival at the house and that it has been named after them. They of course "shell out" under the supposition that it is for a new voter, only to find out later that the newcomer is a girl. Mr. Thatcher plays the part with all its absurdities in a way that merits every commendation and which has proved his ability as a character actor.

NO 8 HOURS FOR PRINTERS.

President of Typothetae Says Employers Will Fight.

Toronto, Aug. 17.—The convention of the International Typographical Union listened Tuesday morning to an address by President George H. Ellis, of the United Typothetae of America, in which they were frankly, and with an apparent feeling of regret, warned that the adoption of the eight-hour law would result in a fight between the employing printers and the employes.

"There is no alternative for us," said President Ellis, candidly. "We are fighting with our all at stake, and we must fight to win."

The delegates received the president of the Typothetae with every evidence of respect, and when he concluded he was liberally applauded.

The salary attached to the office of president was increased from $1,800 to $2,100, this being a compromise by the committee with Delegate Kennedy, of Minneapolis, who wanted the amount fixed at $2,500.

Delegate Dirks, of St. Louis, proposed that the president be requested to appoint a committee of three, who shall thoroughly investigate and report to the next convention a plan for the inauguration of a system of pensions and relief for sick and aged members.

SPORTSMEN MUST OBEY

These New Laws Which Were Revised By Legislature.

SEVERAL CHANGES.

Sportsmen and Fishermen Interested in the Game Laws of the State of New Jersey.

What is and what is not legal this year are fully explained in the new supply of literature that is being sent to the fish and game wardens for distribution. The literature includes a revision of the fish and game laws in pocket form, charts showing the open and closed seasons, and a folder with a small chart, telling when it is always unlawful to do certain things in pursuit of game or fish. Combined, the three make an excellent guide for those interested in game or fish, and should be in the hands of every fresh water fisherman or hunter.

Outside of the chart the things that are unlawful to do constitute perhaps the most interesting of this literature. These are embodied in each of the three different forms of literature and are as follows:

To take or to attempt to take any game except by the use of guns held at arm's length. Fine, $20.

To take or to attempt to take any fish in any manner excepting with hook and line, excepting taking minnows for bait with a seine not more than thirty feet long, excepting in ponds and lakes having an area of over one hundred acres, where seines of fifty feet in length are permitted for bait fishing; taking eels with baskets or weirs between the fifteenth of September and the last of October, and taking eels with wicker baskets anchored on the bottoms of streams and ponds. Fine, $20

To hunt or kill deer at any time. Fine, $20.

To have trapped game in possession. Fine, $100.

To hunt on Sunday or carry firearms in the fields or woods or on the waters on Sunday or to hunt for quail, partridge, pheasant, woodcock or rabbits when there is tracking snow on the ground. Fine, $20.

To pollute streams. Fine, $200.

To use medicated bait or explosives of any kind for taking fish Fine, $100.

To use set lines in waters inhabited by pickerel, pike, pike-perch, bass or trout, or to use any contrivance in fishing having more than three hooks or one burr of three hooks or to have such contrivances in possession. Fine, $20.

To permit the erection or maintenance of unlawful contrivances for taking game and fish; applies to owners and tenants of lands. Fine, $20.

To use carp for bait or in any other way to put carp in fresh water. Fine, $20.

To capture, kill, injure or to have in possession insectivorous and certain other birds and to rob birds' nests. Fine, $20.

To hunt geese, ducks or any water wild fowl, except between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset; to hunt any kind of water wild fowl from boats not propelled by oars or paddles. Fine, $20.

To catch or keep trout less than six inches in length, black or white bass less than nine inches in length, or pike-perch, pickerel and pike less than twelve inches in length. Fine, $20. Does not apply to grass pike, a small pike frequenting brooks.

To take trout, bass, pike, pickerel and pike-perch between 9 a. m. and daylight. Fine, $20.

To permit dogs to run rabbits at night at any time, or to run at large in woods or fields inhabited by rabbits or game birds except between the first day of October and the first of February, or at any time in woods or fields inhabited by deer. Fine, $20.

To remove quail, grouse, woodcock, squirrel, hare, English or ringneck pheasants from the State. Fine, $20.

To kill more than thirty marsh hens or mud hens in one day. Fine, $20.

Farmers and fruit growers have the right to trap rabbits under certain restrictions.

Dealers have fifteen days after the close of the season in which to dispose of game.

To the above may be added the following prohibitions, which, while not the subject of legal enactment, are recognized as binding laws of behavior by all reputable lovers of the pursuit of game and fish:

Never violate the letter or spirit of the game laws.

Never take more fish or game than you have convenient use for.

Never be insolent or impolite to a landowner who orders you off his premises; for although he may not own the game or fish you are after, he has the right to exclusive possession of his property.

Never fail to destroy a net or trap when you find one set.

Never shoot at a game bird except on the wing.

Never kill the last quail in a covey; leave some to breed next year.

Never forget that game laws are intended to improve and increase sport and not to prevent or restrict it.

C. DENMAN'S PIPE WORKING OVERTIME

THE SECRET OF WALLER'S THIRD-RAIL DELIVERY DIVULGED.

In a moment of confidence Manager Denman, of the Westfield baseball aggregation called up The Daily Press office on the telephone this morning and whispered over the wire that he had something to tell that the local baseball fans would certainly like to know.

"To get right down to the point," said the wily manager, "it's the secret of Red Waller's great speed two weeks ago when Plainfield was defeated by Westfield 7 to 2, and it came about in this way: The week before the game I secured a boarding place for Red over near Metuchen, where he could be away from the crowd and ret up. He mentioned to me that if he had a heavier ball to practice with than that used by the teams, that when he took up the regulation sphere he would exert himself just that much more and have greater velocity. I managed to have two balls made for him weighing two pounds each, but no larger than the ordinary affair. They were constructed of lead covered with cork, and held together with a leather cover.

"Well, Red used to stand on a milk pail and throw those balls at another pail with the bottom out, backed up by a hay stack. They would go right through, hit the stack and drop down. Red had to go after them each time, and of course he got just that much more exercise. It certainly gave him training, and when he faced the Daubsters you all know the result. He had speed to burn when it came to handling a smaller ball, and the continual sighting at the milk pail gave him an eye like an eagle.

"Now, I've put you on to this in order to let you know that he is doing the same thing this week in prepa ration for the coming game. He started the practice in the backyard at his home in Hoboken, but unfortunately they have no hay stacks up there, and he put his pail before a fence. The first ball he threw crashed through the boards and went down a sewer catch basin on the corner. He made a second attempt, with exactly the same result, and he sent me a hurry call for two more balls. I sent him the money yesterday, and I imagine if you drop up where Red lives you will see those two-pound lead-cork-leather balls being hurled at a sand bank or a stone wall. That's all I have to say, only if you don't believe me you can ask 'By George,' because I've told him the same thing, and he knows I never say anything that isn't gospel."

The scribe assured him that anything Denmanesque was all the goods, and the conversation was abruptly terminated by the young woman at the telephone exchange breaking the circuit just as the releaser of the secret was saying, "Now next Saturday we—"

REGISTRY MEN CHANGED.

Republicans In Morristown Agog Over List of Officers.

Morristown, Aug. 17—There is disaffection in the Republican ranks in this city, which may result seriously for the party at the coming fall election. It has originated over recommendations of local ward committees for members of the local boards of registry. These recommendations have been approved of by County Chairman McGraw, and the County Board of Registry Tuesday confirmed the list. When it became known that old and faithful party workers had been dropped and young men whose political complexion is uncertain appointed in their place indignant protests were made to ward leaders and State Committeeman Daniel S. Voorhees, who is the recognized dictator in the county.

Mr. Voorhees professed to be indignant too, saying he should have looked after the matter personally. He was inclined to shift the responsibility wholly upon County Chairman McGraw, who, he said, had not advised with him before signing the list. Heretofore the making up of the election officers in Morristown was left in charge of the State Committeeman, but, it is said, he was ignored this year and names taken up personally with the county chairman by ward chairmen. Not until Tuesday night was the list sent Mr. Voorhees. It was too late then, he said, to do anything with it. When the County Board of Registry met in the Freeholders' rooms Tuesday afternoon to receive the list of officers the secretary of the board was obliged to call upon Mr. Voorhees to get it. Piqued at this, the Republican leader handed over the list and said: "Here it is, and you can do as you please with it."

Hotel Incorporated.

The Hotel Sterling, Trenton, will be run by a stock company. Articles of incorporation were filed at the county clerk's office yesterday. The new concern will be known as the Hotel Sterling Company. The incorporators are Edward J. Mahoney, Charles J. Fury and Eugene R. Clark, of Trenton. Messrs. Fury and Mahoney have 45 shares each and Mr. Clark has 10 shares. The capital stock of the company is placed at $25,000. The incorporation papers call for the purchasing and managing of hotel properties.

CHINESE RAILWAY IS BONE OF CONTENTION

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 17.—All signs point to a speedy test of the great question as to whether there shall be peace or war. The conference today spent nearly all its time considering the railroad question in Manchuria. This had to do with the future of the Eastern Chinese Railway, running from Niu-Chwang and Port Arthur to Harbin. This was known in the list of propositions as clause 7. This clause was virtually completed, with some matters yet to be determined, and the conference took up clause 8 and disposed of it unanimously. Adjournment was taken until today, and M. Witte, principal envoy for Russian, made this statement:

"We have practically completed clause 7 and have agreed to clause 8."

Terms to Be Contested Today.

Delivery to Japan of the interned warships of Russia.

Limitation of Russia's naval strength in the Pacific.

Payment to Japan by Russia of the expenses of the war—indemnity.

M. Witte, who was tired out with his day's work, last night said: "I am doing all I can for peace. Of the eight articles we have already considered I have yielded seven. No other statesman in Russia would have dared to do so much, and I have done what I have done upon my own responsibility."

FINDS THE SLAYER OF HIS FATHER IN NEW YORK AFTER A SEARCH OF TEN YEARS

New York, Aug. 17—Grown from boyhood to manhood in the years he has searched the Western hemisphere for his father's murderer, Antonio Carraciolo, an Italian, yesterday found the man in Blackwell's Island penitentiary, New York. The murder occurred in 1896, when Antonio was a boy of fourteen, and his father was a prominent Liberal politician of the province of Benevento, Italy. Politics were responsible for the crime, and although Giorgio Marchette, the suspected murderer, escaped from Italy, he was tried and condemned to life imprisonment, according to Italian laws, in his absence. After the sentence the boy Antonio sailed for South America in search of the convicted man. From Buenos Ayres he worked up through the Western hemisphere into Canada in long years of vain search. Antonio then went back to Italy to college, where he learned the profession of engineering, so that he might live in the United States, the hiding place, as he firmly believed, of his father's murderer. Lately he has been living in Allentown, Pa. Yesterday he identified a man who is serving a one-year sentence here as Giorgio Marchette and cabled to Italy for extradition papers and to his mother that his long search was ended.

NEW FRANCHISE BOARD.

Chooses Voorhees, Murphy, Payne, Budd and Lloyd.

Governor Stokes yesterday appointed as members of the commission to investigate the existing franchise laws and report to the next Legislature, the following:

Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth; Franklin M. Murphy, Newark; John C. Payne, Jersey City; Eckard P. Budd, Burlington; Frank T. Lloyd, Camden.

The appointments were made under the provisions of what is known as the second committee substitute for Mr. Colby's Assembly bill No. 148. The substitute bill authorizes the commission to report some means for fixing the values of franchises and for assessing them at local rates.

The bill was the outcome of Mr. Colby's fight in the Assembly last winter for limited franchises. The original bill introduced by Mr. Colby provided for the limiting of all public utility franchises to fifty years.

This bill was referred to the Judiciary committee, which in a short time thereafter reported the first committee substitute. This defined the duties of the commission to be "to investigate the entire subject of the granting of franchises by municipalities to public utility companies, permitting the use and occupation of the public streets and highways, and to report to the next session of the Legislature the result of such investigation, together with such recommendations in connection therewith as to the said commission shall seem proper, including a recommendation as to what legislation, if any, regulating, controling and limiting the power of municipalities in making such grants ought to be enacted."

The motion to accept the substitute was debated at some length and with considerable warmth.

Mr. Hamill, of Hudson, offered an amendment, which provided:

"That the said commission investigate and report upon the advisability of having the value of franchises of corporations for using the public streets for trolley, gas, telephone, telegraph or water purposes annually assessed by some appropriate taxing authority at local rates of taxation."

This is the bill which became a law early last June.

ELIZABETH'S FEW MOSQUITOES.

Small Number There In Comparison With Past Years.

Elizabeth, Aug. 17—Health Inspector Louis J. Richards, who has been working in conjunction with State Entomologist Smith, to the end of exterminating the mosquito here, Tuesday made a statement concerning the swarms which have been pestering this end of Jersey during the past week. He said the recent visitation was due to the unfinished draining on the meadows. The recent rains have also had much to do with the trouble, he said.

Health Inspector Richards has made a careful study of the mosquito plague in this vicinity. He has been entrusted with the work of ridding this city of the pest and he has been meeting with success. The draining which is now going on in the meadows is about one-fifth completed and only about $900 of the $2,500 appropriated has been used.

This city has been freer from mosquitoes this year than at any time in forty years. Old residents verify that statement. Many who invariably place screens about their front porches have not done so this year. The mosquitoes' present visitation is really the first of the season.

THIS IS A THRILLER!

Our Special Correspondent Tells It in His Own Way.

Thinking that he was on the wrong train, because his father had not yet joined him, a young boy excursionist deserted two young ladies who were with him and got off the 8:46 train at the Plainfield depot. By that time the train had started, and the boy was apparently unused to getting on a train in motion, and in spite of his father's efforts to pull the lad along, the boy only ran along with the train, dropping a number of packages, one of these dropping and showing it to be a bunch of bananas. Seeing his son could not get on, the man jumped off and joined the boy, leaving the ladies on the train alone.

Congressman Has Typhoid.

Congressman Henry C. Loudenslager, of the First New Jersey District, is seriously ill at his home at Paulsboro. He returned from a trip with some fellow representatives to the Pacific coast and Alaska a few weeks ago, and has since been engrossed in the political contest over the Senatorship in his own county of Gloucester. Last Saturday he was taken ill with symptoms of typhoid fever. This morning his temperature was reoprted to be at 104 degrees, and his condition causes serious apprehension. Two physicians are in attendance at the Congressman's bedside.

Keeping It Out of Print.

Newspapers throughout the State have been discussing editorially, the question of suppressing names and news at the request of influential and other readers. Few will refuse to affirm as a principle that nothing should be kept out of the columns of a newspaper that is of sufficient interest to merit a place there. At the same time, it often happens that the use of a name adds nothing to the value of the paper for that day, but does cause immeasurable suffering to those in no way responsible for that which is reported for the edification of subscribers.—Paterson Post Telegram.

FISH TOOK HIM OVERBOARD.

But He Landed Big Bass With Broken Pole.

Bound Brook, Aug. 17.—"I'll get that or I'll drown," cried Dave Ross to his companions in the boat at Lake Hoptacong Monday, his fellow fishers being Louis Weber and Louis Davis. Ross had a big strike and his expensive pole snapped in two, so overboard he went. Being a good swimmer, he soon reached the bobbing pole, and grabbed it, while his companions rowed the boat to his assistance. Ross hung on to the pole and finding the fish about exhausted, landed a seven-pound bass in the boat with his broken pole. Then he was satisfied to row ashore and hunt for a change of clothing. He is going up to the lake again in a few days.

Mt. Tabor, Aug. 17—The usual good attendance which has rewarded the efforts of the Campmeeting Association thus far this year was continued yesterday. The 10:30 o'clock session was a discussion on "How Can the Home and Church Help the Pastor in Evangelistic Work?" Four brief addresses were made by Mrs. C. S. Woodruff, Rev. B. Brittan, Rev. H. A. Chamberlain and Rev. C. E. Scudder.

The meeting yesterday afternoon was addressed by Rev. Wilbur Westcott, of Verona, and the speaker last evening was Rev. W. S. McCowan, of Woodbridge. Rev. Thomas O'Hanlan, formerly of Pennington Seminary, will preach this afternoon.

ORGANIZE TO CRUSH POWER OF THE MACHINE

First Ward Republican Voters Gather At Central Hall.

OFFICERS CHOSEN.

Councilmen Murphy and Bullock Flay the Leaders—Fifty Members Enrolled.

Formal organization of the First Ward Republican Club was made last night at a largely attended meeting in the Taylor building. The gathering included some of the best known men residing in the First ward and the spirit with which they settled down to business showed that their movement is not a spasmodic effort but a determined effort to secure control of their particular district.

The meeting was called to order by Councilman Clarence Murphy, whose open letter a few days ago added spice to the local political situation, and he was made chairman, with William Symons as secretary. The former announced that the gathering had been called specifically for the election of officers and it resulted as follows: President, Dr. A. W. Anderson, recording secretary, William Symons; corresponding secretary, Clarence L. Murphy; vice presidents, Edward Caldwell, John M. Lewis, William E. Dunn, Charles H. Russell, C. W. Griffin and George W. Taylor. Six more vice presidents are to be elected at a further meeting to be held next week.

In a discussion which followed the election there were numerous remarks made on the situation as it exists in the First ward and the city also and it was declared that the club would do everything possible to elect its full ticket to both the city and county conventions. The ward is entitled to six delegates in each instance.

Councilman Murphy and Councilman William S. Bullock addressed the gathering in which they referred to the objects of the club as outlined at a previous meeting and their views in the matter met with unanimous approval. They also spoke at length on the methods heretofore pursued by the Council in disposing of matters that called for more than the usual amount of attention on the part of the citizens. In the main their remarks corresponded with Mr. Murphy's public letter.

During Mr. Bullock's remarks he made the assertion that the rule in Plainfield is like "a little Tammany" and he declared that the time had arrived when the people "should smash the machine to smithereens."

Afterward a large number of new names were added to the enrollment list and the membership has now reached the fifty mark. It is thought that it will be 200 within a short time.

Miss Florede Not to Appear.

Miss Nellie Florede will not appear at the LaVere band oncert benefit tonight, as was at first intended. Though an excellent vocalist, it was found on trial at Hoboken last night that her voice is not strong enough to carry in the open air. The remainder of the programme will be just the same as given out and will commence promptly at 8 o'clock.

FANS AWAIT FIFTH GAME OF SERIES

LINEUP OF WESTFIELD AND PLAINFIELD TOMORROW.

Westfield will lineup against Plainfield tomorrow afternoon at Recreation Park in the fifth game of the series. That Westfield will endeavor to make it two straight goes almost without saying. But to take no chances, Manager Charlie Denman has sent his standby, "Red" Waller, to the country to rest up for the trial. There, it is said, "Red" is in daily practice and has speed to burn.

The Westfield lineup will remain the same as in the last game with Plainfield, unless Mr. Denman decides to make a change at the last moment. However, the team which he now has is making a good showing and there seems no need for change. Joe Wall, the old reliable, will again hold down first for Westfield and Harry McCormick, formerly with the Giants, will be seen in right garden.

Plainfield, too, will linuep the same as in the last game except as to the pitcher. As announced after last Saturday's game, Deegan will pitch here for the rest of the season and he will oppose Westfield tomorrow. Dalton, who played so well in the first Westfield-Plainfield contest and who has been out of the game since then with a badly cut ankle, will again be seen at second for the Daabsters. His hitting and fast fielding will be a big help.

The teams will lineup: Plainfield—Kiernan, ss; Cosgrave, cf; Dalton, 2b; Connolly, rf; Cregan, lf; Leonard, 3b; Driscoll, 1b; O'Neill, c; Deegan, p.

MINER AND GAVETT PLAY TO A STANDSTILL

PLAY FAST IN SEMI-FINAL OF Y. M. C. A TOURNAMENT.

T. O. Gavett met V. B. Miner last night on the Cedar Brook court in the semi-final round of the Y. M. C. A. tournament. During the first set Gavett seemed extremely frightened and did not show any of the good strokes of which he was capable. Miner won this set 6—1. In the next set Gavett improved in his form and made some strokes along Miner's side lines that brought the large gallery to its feet. Miner was completely outclassed and lost this set 2—6.

After a few minutes rest the third and deciding set was begun. By the time the game stood 2—2, it grew too dark for good tennis and by mutual consent, is was agreed to begin the set over again this afternoon on the same court. The winner of this match will have a right to play in the finals.

Rockwell will meet Spicer tonight on the Second street court in the last preliminary round. Collier will meet the winner of this match in the semi-finals.

Mr. Gates Gives Reception.

In honor of the Misses Montrose, Chase and Fanny Holmes, who recently came to Plainfield from Hampton Institute, John R. Gates, of East Third street, gave a reception at his home last night. It was attended by twenty young friends from this city and other places. Music and dancing with supper at midnight were the features of the gathering.

Getting Fireworks Ready.

The fireworks for the LaVere benefit in Concert Park tonight arrived this morning and employes of the exhibition company have been busy all day getting the set pieces in position. The statement has been made that the display will be one of the best ever seen in the city. There will be fourteen set pieces and a very large number of bombs.

Funeral of Hazel M. Rickert.

The funeral of Hazel M. Rickert, daughter of Mrs. Mabel Rickert, of Somerset street, was held at her late home yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Mr. Sneegas, pastor of the German Reformed church, officiated. Interment was made in the cemetery in North Plainfield.

Special B. R. Cars.

Special trolley cars will be run from this city to Recreation Park tomorrow for the accommodation of baseball patrons. The service will be ample and crowding will be eliminated.

HARRISON SURRENDERS

Gives Himself Up to Constable Pierce According to Agreement.

IS QUICKLY BAILED.

Lawyer and Bondsman Accompany Him Directly To Judge's House, and He Is Freed In Jig Time.

Keeping the agreement entered into by his counsel with Constable Robert Pierce, who held the warrant for his arrest, Oscar Harrison surrendered himself yesterday afternoon. He was released under bail after proceedings identical with those followed after the arrest of W. R. Stanbery the day before.

Accompanied by his lawyer, W. L. Hetfield, Jr., and his bondsman, Thomas Rutledge, Harrison drove to Dunellen shortly after 2 o'clock. They were met there by appointment by Constable Pierce, who had the papers in the case, and Justice Von Minden. Harrison formally surrendered; the constable and the justice took seats in the carriage and the party drove immediately to New Brunswick. They went directly to Judge Strong's house, where the jurist, by appointment, awaited them.

Within three minutes after reaching the house the bail proceedings were ended. Harrison, like Stanbery, was held for the Grand Jury under a $1,000 bond. Rutledge qualified as bondsman at once.

This ends the preliminaries to the criminal actions. The next chapter in the prosecution of the accused men will be enacted before the Middlesex County Grand Jury, which meets on September 5. It is the general impression, supported by the opinion of several lawyers, that the chapter will be brief and final. It is not believed that the charge of wilful negligence can be proven against either party, and it is regarded as extremely unlikely that the jury will bring in indictments.

The civil suit brought by Harrison against Stanbery for the value of his horse and carriage, which ended in a disagreement of the jury in Justice Von Minden's court last Monday, will be tried over again in the same court on August 24. Lawyer Hetfield has been busy strengthening his case and is confident of securing a verdict.

The object of the company is to deal in stocks and bonds and other securities. The authorized capital is $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares, at $100 each.

ELECTION PAMPHLET ISSUED.

Book of Instructions Completed by State.

The Secretary of State has issued the annual pamphlet on "Instructions Relative to the Duties of Officers and Voters," to be used in connection with the preparation for the election November 7. The publication of the book is required by the general election law.

The book contains a chronological index of the duties relating to the preparation for the election, and then gives in full the duties of every officer in connection with the election from the Governor down to the members of the district election boards. Each paragraph gives the proper references to the election laws, which have also been published in pamphlet form by the Secretary of State. These references make it easy to consult the full text of the election regulations.

The latter portion of the book gives samples of all the forms and documents necessary to be used in connection with the election. It will be a valuable aid to those interested in balloting.

BRIGHT YOUNG MAN DEAD

Irving Hand Succumbs to Diptheria After Week's Illness.

BUILT UP BUSINESS

Was Half Owner of Netherwood Brickyard Established by His Father—Funeral Private.

After less than a week's illness from malignant diphtheria, Irving Hand, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hand, of Berkeley avenue, died at his parents' home at 5 o'clock this morning. His death came as a great shock to his many friends, as until a week ago Tuesday he was enjoying the best of health. At that time he went to Asbury Park to visit his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ernest Hand, and was taken with a sore throat. A local physician declared it would soon pass away, but it continued to grow worse, and he returned home Thursday. Diphtheria soon manifested itself, and he grew rapidly worse despite the efforts of his physician, Dr. Endicott.

The young man was but twenty-four years old, but was known throughout the county as half owner of one of the largest and best equipped brickyards in the State. It was originally started by his father, but in recent years had been conducted by himself and his brother, Ernest T. Hand. Largely through Irving's business ability and knowledge of brick making the plant was the best known in this section.

Through his pleasing personality and modest disposition he had made hosts of friends in the city and borough, by all of whom he will be greatly missed. He was a member of the Fanwood Suburban Club and other social and athletic organizations. Surviving him are one brother, Ernest, and three sisters, Mrs. F. I. Smith, Mrs. William Scriven and Mrs. Herbert Henry, all of this city.

The funeral will be held from the parents' home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and will be private. The interment will be at Hillside cemetery and the casket will be opened at the grave, so that friends may view the features.

Politicians at Theatre Opening.

Colonel Joseph T. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville, has invited the members of the Somerset County Republican Committee to be his guests at the opening of the new Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. All have accepted and he has procured the necessary number of seats in the orchestra. The committee will leave Somerville on the 6:45 train.

What Rum Will Do.

A hired man on the farm of John Cooper, at Warrenville, whose name could not be ascertained this morning, was arrested last night by Marshal Joseph Flack, on Somerset street, for being drunk. The man had just received his month's pay and had spent most of it on rum. He will be given a hearing tonight before Recorder Doud.

Mrs. Burtis' Funeral.

Funeral services over the body of Mrs. Laura F. Burtis were held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ernest A. Lowe, of Fairview avenue, this morning. They were in charge of Rev. A. C. Nickerson and were attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The body will be interred in Woodlawn cemetery this afternoon.

1904's Unpaid Tax List.

The tax collector is now making up a list of all real estate upon which the taxes of 1904 remain unpaid, and as soon as it is completed it will be published. The law under which the collector is now working compels a sale of all delinquent real estate on the first day of July in the year following the levy itself.

Arranging for Lawn Fete.

Arrangements are now being perfected by local people to conduct a lawn fete on O. T. Waring's grounds at Ninth street and Park avenue, for the benefit of Miss Curry's baby camp. Members of every church in the city are to be asked to assist in order to make it a big success.

Funeral of Infant.

The funeral of Helen Faulks Tappen, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tappen, of Lyman place, was held from the parents' home this morning. It was conducted by Rev. George Mooney, of the Monroe Avenue church, and interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

Cook Got Drunk.

Mary Welch, 36 years old, was locked up yesterday for drunkenness. Mary had a day off yesterday, and succumbed to the spirit of celebration. She was released under suspended sentence this morning.

LODGE HAS A BIRTHDAY

Benevolent Council Celebrates Anniversary With Reception to Godmother

SUPPER AND SPEECHES

Big Newark Delegation As Guests of Honor—Past Councilor's Jewel Presented to Harry C. Runyon.

On August 14 Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., was four years old. Last night the lodge celebrated the anniversary with a session devoted to speechmaking followed by a collation.

The feature of the observance was the presence of a large delegation from George H. Adams Council, No. 36, of Newark, which instituted Benevolent on August 14, 1901. Adams Council was represented by fifty members.

Aside from a welcoming speech by Past Councilor H. C. Runyon, the speeches were all made by members of Adams Council. The celebration was a "closed" affair, only members of the order participating.

The address of Past Councilor Runyon was largely a review of the history of Benevolent Council. He sketched the progress of the lodge from its organization four years ago to the present, during which time it has more than doubled in membership. His words of welcome to the visiting brethren were cordial and happily phrased.

The programme of entertainment was wholly composed, with one exception, of short speeches by the members of Adams Council. Among the speakers were Past National Counselor Kibbe, of New Brunswick; Councilor Axtell, and Brothers E. Struble Buchanan, J. E. Campbell, J. D. Conover, a former Plainfielder, and William Umbsheiden, of Adams Council.

All the speakers united in complimenting Benevolent Council upon its progress and the large measure of success that has attended it. Past National Councilor Kibbe was particularly warm in his expressions of commendation.

The collation that followed the speechmaking was a most tempting one. It was catered by Thomas Timbo.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Horace G. Adams, chairman; J. V. Beekman, J. Henry Adams, Peter Jonas, J. Clark Lowrie, S. C. Terry and Frank Milligan. Councilor Raymond Carver presided.

A feature of the affair was the presentation of a past councilor's jewel to Harry C. Runyon. It took place near the close of the programme and came as a surprise to the recipient. Robert M. Clark, of Adams Council, made the presentation. Mr. Clark is a former Plainfielder and a charter member of Benevolent Council.

Benevolent Council started with forty-seven members. Since its organization two members have died, six have been suspended and one has withdrawn, leaving thirty-eight charter members. Its total membership is now 105. The present officers are as follows:

Past councilor, Harry C. Runyon; councilor, Raymond D. Carver; vice-councilor, Harry Hann; recording secretary, H. G. Adams; assistant recording secretary, J. V. Beekman; treasurer, J. Henry Adams; financial secretary, T. A. Kurzhals, Jr.; conductor, Clarence Pope; warden, Clark Lowrie; chaplain, J. B. Conklin; inside sentinel, Herbert Ayers; outside sentinel, Gilbert Martin.

ASK FOR A CHANGE IN CHURCH GOVERNMENT

Sabbatarian Minister Recommends Organization of Advisory Board.

AN IMPORTANT STEP

Recommendation to be Submitted to Conference at Shiloh and Favorable Action Expected—Session Details.

Evangelistic work in the ministry was the subject of the discussion at the Pre-conference Convocation at the Seventh-day Baptist church this morning. The conductor was Rev. L. C. Randolph. Among those who spoke were Revs. Eugene Davis, A. C. Davis, Wilbert Davis, E. A. Witter and W. L. Burdick.

A prayer service preceded the session, in which the Revs. S. R. Wheeler, E. A. Witter, A. C. Davis, T. J. Van Horn and O. U. Whitford took part. Outline sketches of the work of former pastors of the local church were presented by several of the clerics. Dr. A. H. Lewis, himself a former pastor, spoke on Revs. John Greene and Charles M. Lewis.

Before adjournment was taken the conference voted to hold no afternoon session, in order to afford the members an opportunity to attend Mrs. J. P. Mosher's funeral. So many of them announced their intention of going to the funeral that the vote was taken as a matter of course.

Out of a brief afternoon session yesterday a movement was launched for a notable and important change in denominational government. If the plan formulated is adopted by the conference at Shiloh next week, a permanent, all-the-year-'round central body will become part of the executive work of the church.

The conference adopted a recommendation to the general conference for the appointment of a general advisory board, which would work for the general upbuilding of the church and extension of the doctrine along systematized lines. The body would be expected to seek the best ways for increasing the unity and strength in all departments of denominational work. It is believed that the recommendation will be adopted.

The meeting lasted not much longer than an hour and a half. After adjournment the clerics scattered for sightseeing and social diversions. Trolley trips were taken by several parties.

The qualifications of a good minister was the subject discussed at the evening session. It was introduced by Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardiner, president of Salem College, under the head of "Who Shall Enter the Ministry?" It called forth a long discussion, in which pretty nearly all the ministers present, ond one prominent layman, joined.

Dr. Gardiner held that candidates for the ministry should conform to the very highest standards of excellence, character, ability and education. He placed education last, because, while he regarded education as of great and decided importance, the lack of it would not, of itself, disqualify a man for strong and fruitful work in the ministry. In the case of men approaching middle life who felt impelled to enter the field, but lacked in education, he believed they should be encouraged to take up the work. Possessed of the prerequisites of character and ability, such men would be stronly equipped with a knowledge of men and affairs and the lessons of practical experience.

Among the attributes which the best candidate for the ministry should possess Dr. Gardiner named tact, patience and wisdom. Training, of course, he rated highly. Of the personal qualifications, he placed tactfulness first, because the minister is first of all a leader. Training was the next most important qualification for the would-be minister, because he would be the teacher of his people.

Dr. Gardiner ranked preaching as the most important and powerful side of the minister's work. Everything else was secondary to that.

"The pulpit is the minister's throne of power," he said. "If he is weak there, he is weak in all departments of his work."

COLBY REFORMED LEADER, IS TO SPEAK HERE

"MACHINE" SMASHER SOUGHT AFTER BY LOCAL REPUBLICANS.

At the meeting of the First Ward Republican Club last night it was stated by one of the members that an attempt would be made to have Assemblyman Everett Colby, who is heading an independent movement in Essex county for the Senatorial nomination, come to Plainfield and address a political gathering under the auspices of the organization. He has already been written, and though extremely busy with his fight against Major Carl Lentz, of Newark, he has signified his intention of accepting an invitation when all arrangements are completed.

Mr. Colby is well known in Plainfield, having married Miss Edith Hyde, of East Front street. He is a young Republican who has been active in the Assembly, and his campaign at present is directed against bossism in the State as well as in his county. His movement was at first ignored by the machine leaders, but it has reached such proportions that they are now directing every energy to offset him. In some respects the aim of the First Ward Republican Club is akin to his campaign, and his remarks on the subject would undoubtedly be of interest to the city at large.

TANGLE DISCOVERED IN ELECTION LAW

ACT ABOLISHING SPRING ELECTIONS MAKES NO NOMINATION PROVISION.

A tangle has been discovered in chapter 3 of the laws passed by the last Legislature and approved by Governor Stokes February 15, abolishing spring elections in townships and boroughs and combining them with the general election in November. The mix-up is giving the county and municipal political committees considerable trouble and the local Democratic committee has referred the matter to Attorney General McCarter for an opinion to set the matter straight.

The bill was Assembly No. 7, introduced by Mr. Gibbs, of Camden county, and affects all officers except members of school boards or school trustees. Under its provisions the terms of all officers except justices of the peace hereafter elected in any township or borough shall commence at noon January 1, succeeding their election, and continue for the respective terms already fixed by law. This law makes it necessary to nominate and elect November 7 all the officers in the townships and boroughs that would have been elected last spring under the old law.

The hitch in the arrangement is that the new law is absolutely silent as to the manner of nominating the candidates outside the cities. This leaves it an open question whether the primary election law as applied to cities should govern and the candidates be chosen September 12, or whether the candidates for township and borough officers be named in caucus, as under the old law.

The situation is complicated by the fact that on or before September 2 all petitions endorsing candidates must be filed with the township or municipal clerk, and the committees have no authority as to how to proceed to meet this requirement.

Zimmerman Got 40 Days.

William Zimmerman, arrested yesterday for drunkenness for the second time within two days, was sentenced to forty days in the county jail this morning by Judge Runyon. When William was arraigned the first time he was chipper and amusing. He didn't have a chance to brighten the court room this morning. Judge Runyon doesn't like two doses of chipperness when the first display has won a suspended sentence.

New Signs on Cars.

The trolley cars on the local and through divisions have been equipped with large signs in front which are illuminated at night. Those running between Dunellen and Newark are marked "Main line." The change is beneficial to passengers as the signs are to be distinguished a block away.

Will Have Great Weight.

The Philadelphia jury having convicted of involuntary manslaughter the chauffeur who ran down and killed a young child, Judge Audenried sentenced him to eighteen months imprisonment. The force of this result is that it was based on the charge of the judge, that the owner or driver of an automobile is not exempted from a full responsibility for a lack of care, even though he keep within the legal rate of speed. The great possibilities of an automobile has created among owners a contempt for the rights of others and a mania for utilizing the strength and solidity of the machine by imposing on other vehicles and foot passengers. To such people this action of Judge Audenried, himself quite an enthusiastic automobilist, will have great weight.—Trenton True American.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

If you want an accident or sickness insurance policy, stop in to see B. F. Dorman, Park avenue.

Now is the time to put in your supply of coal for the winter. 'Phone to Rugg & Cline, East Third street, for it.

A. H. Enander, tinsmith, on Watchung avenue, will put that roof of your's in good condition, which the recent rain made leaky.

Charles L. Stanley, the North avenue florist, will arrange the floral decorations at the opening of the new Plainfield theatre. He makes a specialty of decorative work.

Brokaw keeps a creamery on the corner of East Front street, and Watchung avenue, which is the essence of neatness. Everything he keeps comes from his own farm.

Herman Hansen, of the borough, has recently commenced the erection of several new houses in different parts of the city. He is a practical builder with many years' experience.

J. P. Powers' pharmacy at Somerset street and Craig place is the place to go for drugs, medicines and toilet articles. It is also headquarters for delicious soda water made from pure fruit juices.

Kindling wood in any lengths is delivered in Plainfield by John Mobus, the well known Watchung dealer. Orders may be sent to him by mail and will receive prompt attention.

When you are thinking of building something, whether it be a house or a stable, the first requirement is to secure good lumber. Boice, Runyon & Co. have the largest and best grade of this material in town.

The fact that Herman Weber's grocery is located on Liberty street does not signify that he cannot compete with "up town" prices. His goods are always of the very best and yet his bargains equal any in the city. He delivers all orders free.

Carriage riding is still popular and the man who owns his vehicle is indeed fortunate. They are not so high-priced after all, that is if you look at the stock of W. J. Conroy, the Somerset street dealer. He has vehicles for either business or pleasure.

Are you a shrewd housewife? If you are and are looking to be economical, drop in to Hill & Shupp's store some day soon and visit the bargain counters of the special sale now going on. In connection with the special retiring sale, a ten day sale opened this morning, including broken lots of merchandise which resulted from the active selling this month. Cuts will be made in every case to close out.

HUSBAND IN FIFTEEN DAYS.

Hoboken Girl Vowed She Would Secure One and Did It.

Hoboken, Aug. 18—"I kept my word, didn't I?" exclaimed the happy bride, triumphantly, to Justice of the Peace O'Keefe, in his office, 61 First street, Tuesday evening.

Squire O'Keefe had just married Miss Cora Wilson, 234 Monroe street, to Julius Steinhilber, a clerk in a New York drug store.

On the second day of this month Justice O'Keefe made one, for better or worse, Miss Helena Oelschegel, of Hoboken, and Gustave Fischer, employed in the Union Square Hotel, this city. Next day the then Miss Wilson, her pretty face flushed, flounced into O'Keefe's office and asked if it was true that Fischer had wed the day before. The justice solemnly assured her he had made the plunge.

"Well, wouldn't that rattle a girl's young affections?" cried Miss Wilson. "Fischer asked me to marry him, and now he's gone and married another. But, depend on it, I'll have a husband inside of a month."

So she had, and to let the squire know she is a woman of her word she went to him to tie the knot.

Steinhilber was in the mood becoming a bridegroom.

"I was in love with Cora long before she met Fischer," he declared, "and I do not believe she ever really cared for him."

GOVERNOR ISSUES A CALL.

Commission to Arrange Presentation of Silver Service to Meet.

Trenton, Aug. 18 — Governor Stokes has called a meeting for Tuesday next at the State House of the commission which was appointed by act of Legislature of 1902, to arrange for the presentation of a silver service to the battleship New Jersey, of the United States Navy. At the meeting Tuesday it is likely that definite arrangements will be made for the awarding of the contract for the silver service to Tiffany & Co., of New York. This firm submitted a bid of $10,000 some time ago, and this amount having been appropriated by the Legislature, is now available for use.

The commission comprises Governor Stokes, Senator Bradley, as president of the Senate; Assemblyman John Boyd Avis, as Speaker of the House; Secretary of State Samuel M. Dickinson, and Adjutant-General R. Heber Breintnall. The commission has already recommended that the design submitted by Tiffany be adopted and the matter of awarding the bid has been reduced to more or less formality.

FOR INSURANCE LAW.

In Interview President Tells Dryden He Favors It.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 18.—Senator John F. Dryden, of New Jersey, who saw President Roosevelt Wednesday in regard to federal insurance legislation, said at the station before returning to Bernardsville: "We have had a satisfactory conference." Senator Dryden, who is president of the Prudential Insurance Company, had a bill before the last Congress for the establishment of federal control of insurance. The bill was in committee when Congress adjourned.

After his conference with the President Wednesday the Senator decided that he would reintroduce the bill at the next session in somewhat altered form, though essentially the same.

He believes the bill will have the administration's support. The constitutional obstacles to such a law are not expected to be insurmountable.

The President went over the bill with the Senator and James M. Beck, of the Equitable, and gave his full assent to its provisions.

In his last message to Congress the President said:

"The business of insurance vitally affects the great mass of the people of the United States, and is national and not local in its application. It involves a multitude of transactions among the people of different States and between American companies and foreign governments. I urge that the Congress carefully consider whether the power of the bureau of corporations cannot constitutionally be extended to cover interstate transactions in insurance."

The bill Senator Dryden will father carries out fully the President's idea.

SPECULATION AS TO NEW FRANCHISE BOARD

VOORHEES UNABLE TO SAY WHEN AND WHERE COMMISSION WILL MEET.

Elizabeth, Aug. 18.—Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, who has been named as a member of the franchise commission by Governor Stokes, has said that it would be impossible to say when or where the commission would meet until its members have received their commissions.

"The duty of calling the commission together for business," Mr. Voorhees said, "would then devolve upon its chairman, whoever he might be. The Governor may designate on the commission certificate who he desired should act as its president. In the case of the Governor's failure to do this, then the first commissioner named in the list of appointments would very probably take it upon himself to communicate with his colleagues, call them together, and let them select a presiding officer. In this latter contingency this would be the duty of myself, I suppose, from the fact that I am first on the list.

"Possibly the Governor may see fit on his part to designate a time and place for the commissioners to meet. All I can say at present, however, is that so far as I am concerned I shall advocate the commission beginning its labors as speedily as possible."

OUTING OF DEMOCRATS.

All Getting Ready for the Annual Excursion.

The Democrats of Elizabeth are talking of an outing that is to take place at Duer's Grove, Whitestone, Long Island, under the auspices of the Democratic City Committee, next Wednesday. It will really be the biggest kind of an inning that ever was known, they say, for the rank and file of the voters, as well as the big guns of the party, if the plans of the committee of arrangements go through without a hitch. A number of Plainfielders will be present.

At 9 o'clock on the morning of August 23, from 800 to 1,000 are expected to be aboard the iron steamboat Cypress, and the sail will be to Duer's Grove, Whitestone, L. I.

A grand dinner will be served. There will be speechmaking, slate-making, slate-smashing, and a gathering of the remnants for dissection and possible reconstruction—the whole to wind up in the construction of a grand plan of campaign that will be expected to upset things generally.

Then there will be games and games. A 100-yard dash, an obstacle race, sack race, potato race, a race for the men of abnormal avoirdupois, a three-legged race and a baseball game which the whole human race would enjoy if there were tickets enough to go 'round. But the supply is nearly exhausted now. Beautiful and unique will be the prizes for the winners.

There will be all kinds of great people there, and a sprinkling of Republicans as a sort of counter-irritant. Among the more largely known lights of Democracy will be Uncle Dan Hatfield, Abe Narr, sergeant-at-arms of the Democratic State Committee; Chairman W. B. Gourley, of the Democratic Committee; Joseph A. Hammill, of Jersey City; D. W. C. Flanagan, Colonel E. A. Stevens, Leon Abbott, Mayor Thomas Brady, of Bayonne; James E. Martine, S. S. Swackhamer, John T. Dunn, and from Rahway, in full force and under the guidance of Uncle Dan Hatfield, the famous Peanut Club.

GOT TWO DEATH MESSAGES.

Elizabeth Man Heard of Mother's and Father's Deaths.

New Brunswick, Aug. 18.—William Thompson, of Elizabeth, has been visiting friends in New Brunswick for several days. Wednesday he was called to the telephone.

"Some one in Elizabeth wants to talk to you," he was told.

"Your mother is dead," was the message which came to him over the wire.

Mrs. Thompson had been ill for some time and was under treatment in an Elizabeth hospital.

Thompson had hardly commenced preparations for returning home when there was another ring at the telephone, another call for him. It was another message of death. His father, John S. Thompson, the message said, had been killed on the Central Railroad between Bayonne and Elizabeth.

He had been to Bayonne and had missed his train. Being anxious to keep an appointment with a friend he decided to walk. He stepped out of the way of a freight train directly in front of a passenger train.

Firemen to Hold Clambake.

Elizabeth, Aug. 18.—The Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association of this city will hold its second annual clambake next Sunday at Bartell's Grove, near Rahway. Former Fire Chief Nathinel H. Astfalk, of Elizabeth, will be the caterer, and it is expected fully 200 old vamps will partake of the feast. A number of leading politicians from both political parties will also attend.

Miss Edna Thompson, of Westervelt avenue, will go to Naragansett Pier next week to spend a month.

Plainfield, N. J., August 18, 1905.

Plainfield will take still another game from Westfield at Recreation Park tomorrow.

Is your name on the list of contributors to the baby camp fund published in another column?

The machine may have received some hard hits during the last few weeks but still there is no noise coming from it.

Illinois has enacted a law exempting newspaper men from jury duty. It is explained that the legislators believe that men working on a paper familiarize themselves with the facts surrounding a case before it comes to trial and have a fixed opinion as a result. An exchange very sensibly remarks that this may be true in exceptional instances but that men without newspaper experience are less ready to change their opinions when justice requires it.

When Everett Colby told the people of Bloomfield last night that United States Senatorships are put up at auction he did not depart very far from the whole truth. To show the calibre of men that steal into the highest legislative body of the Federal government, he cited the fact that senators in thirty-five States are either in prison or under serious charges. The fact is honest and able United States senators are almost as scarce as hen's teeth. The big majority get into the halls of Congress by the corrupt use of thousands and sometimes millions of dollars and soon become known as the representative of some gigantic trust.

HELD FOR MURDER YET BAILED OUT

JUDGE STRONG RELEASES HIM IN $3,000 BAIL.

Ludwig Goveyca, the South Amboy saloonkeeper held in jail on the charge of wilfully murdering Michael Stefal, who died at St. Michael's Hospital in Newark Tuesday, was released on bail last night by Judge Strong, at New Brunswick. Bail in $3,000 was given by Andrew Kanosky, a merchant at South Amboy, and three other property holders of that borough. Lawyers G. S. Silzer and John Coan represent the saloonkeeper.

Constable McCabe yesterday at South Amboy re-arrested James Bailey and Thomas Delaney, who were released from jail Tuesday on bail given by relatives. The warrants served upon them yesterday charged them with murder and were issued by Justice Sedam. In addition to these two men John F. Bailey and John Smith were also arrested upon the same charge, and a warrant of the same sort was served on Michael Cronin in jail.

The men were all brought to jail at New Brunswick, and all but Cronin were bailed out yesterday in $700 each, the bail being taken by Judge Strong upon a charge of manslaughter. The warrants fix the crime as murder, the complaint in each case being made by Thomas Gleason, of South Amboy. Cronin is still in jail.

FIERCE FIGHT IN SALOON.

Three Men in Hospital and Seven Arrested as Their Assailants.

Seven men are in jail at Somerville as the result of a murderous attack Wednesday night on three others in a saloon. The three are badly injured and may not recover.

The trouble occurred in Charles Kiszouak's saloon at Raritan. George and John Duffy, brothers, and Paul Mellon were in the place drinking when a quarrel arose between them and a gang who were under the influence of liquor. Words grew heated, and soon the place was ringing with the sound of knives and razors.

When the trouble was over the place resembled a slaughter house and the three men were on the floor terribly cut and bruised. The police were notified, and they arrested yesterday the seven men. The injured men are in the hospital at Somerville.

"Definition of a Christian."

Mt. Tabor, Aug. 18.—The attendance at the campmeeting service here Wednesday night, while not up to the average, was fairly large. The meeting was conducted by Rev. C. E. Scudder, of Deckertown, Sussex county, and was addressed by Rev. W. S. McGowan, of Woodbridge. Mr. McGowan chose for his topic "The Definition of a Christian," and for his text "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me," Matt. xvi:24.

25 PROVERBS FOR GOD'S FOLLOWERS

LEADER YATMAN GIVES PORTION OF HOLY WRIT THAT WILL BENEFIT ALL.

Evangelist Yatman at Ocean Grove the other day presented 25 proverbs for the righteous. In introducing them he said, "Here are grains of gold and pearls of truth, fit treasures for kings." The proverbs were:

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

"Better is little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble therewith."

"A man hath joy for the answer of his mouth: and a word spoken in season, how good is it."

"The preparation of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord."

"When a man's way please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."

"How much better is it to get wisdom than gold: and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver."

"Better is it to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud."

"Pleasant words are as honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones."

"The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it is found in the way of righteousness."

"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

"A friend loveth at all times and a brother is born for adversity."

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine; but a broken spirit drieth the bones."

"He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord: and that which he hath given will pay him again."

"Seeth thou a man diligent in his business, he will stand before kings."

"For hy wise counsel thus shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counselors there is safety."

"Ointment and perfume rejoice the body; so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel,"

"He that rebuketh a man afterwards shall find more favor than he that flattered with the tongue."

"The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame."

"The fruit of righteousness is the tree of life: and he that winneth souls is wise."

"A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast: but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel."

"The lip of truth shall be established forever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment."

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick: but when desire cometh, it is a tree of life."

"The ear that heareth the reproof of life abideth among the wise."

"It is an honor for a man to cease from strife: but every fool will be meddling."

"There is a gold, and a multitude of roches: but the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel."

LEARN TO LET GO.

If you want to be healthy, morally, mentally and physically, just let go.

Let go of the little bothers of every-day life, the irritations and the petty vexations that cross your path daily. Don't take them up and nurse them, pet them and brood over them. They are not worth while. Let them go.

That little difference that exists between you and your neighbor, that you argue over every time you meet, drop it, let it go. You cannot afford to lose a good neighbor or a friend by simply hanging on to some difference of opinion and spending your time quarreling over it instead of enjoying each other and talking about things on which you do agree.

That little hurt that you got from a friend, perhaps it wasn't intended, perhaps it was, but never mind, let it go. Refuse to think about it, says E. P. in Medical Talk.

Let go of that feeling of hatred you have for another, the jealousy, the envy, the malice, let go all such thoughts. Sweep them out of your mind and you will be surprised what a cleaning up and rejuvenating effect it will have upon you, both physically and mentally. Let them all go, you house them at deadly risk.

But the big troubles, the bitter disappointments, the deep wrongs and heartbreaking sorrows, the tragedies of life, what about them? Why, just let them go, too. Drop them, softly, may be, but surely. Put away all regret and bitterness and let sorrow be only a softening influence. Yes, let them go, too, and make the most of the future.

Then that little pet ailment that you have been hanging on to and talking about these many years, let it go. It will be a good riddance. You have treated it royally, but abandon it, let it go. Talk about health instead, and health will come. Quit nursing that pet ailment and let it go.

It is not so hard after once you get used to the habit of it—letting go of these things. You will find it such an easy way to get rid of the things that mar and embitter life that you will enjoy letting them go. You will find the world such a beautiful place. You will find it beautiful because you will be free to enjoy it—free in mind and body.

Learn to let go. As you value health of body and peace of mind, let go—just simply let go.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin. I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure, in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES.

She had been married three weeks, and the world was beginning to look terribly and monotonously natural again.

She ran into her father's house one night about 6 o'clock, and as soon as she got a whiff of the coffee preparing in the kitchen she had much ado not to sit down on the steps and weep.

Somehow this was home, after all, and being married a horrid, horrid device to get girls away from their mothers.

However, she heard Sue pounding around upstairs just as she always did, and so she tarried no longer for dismal reflections, but trotted on up.

"I want my old red silk pongee," she said. "I think I will make some curtains for the bookcase out of it."

Sue took the hairpins out of her mouth long enough to say: "Mom gave it to Mary last week," and then clapped them in again.

The bride sat down on the edge of the bed, and her eye glowed with inner fire.

"Where are you going?" said she, looking at Sue's white slippers and gown spread out seductively.

"Out to Willow Grove," said Sue, with Tom. Maud and Bert are going, too."

"You've got on my corset cover!" she cried.

"Oh," said Sue, arily, "I didn't think you would want it any more."

The bride swallowed hard and said nothing, but somehow right now she loved that corset cover more dearly than any other corset cover on earth. She felt sour and mean, and so concluded to go downstairs.

So in the sitting room she found her mother, and as she kissed her the lump in her throat again grew troublesome. She controlled it and sat down by the desk where she used to write a love letter a day.

"Look at that!" she exclaimed so suddenly that her mother turned in dismay.

"What is it?"

"Why, if Sue hasn't gone and changed every photograph in that case," said she, her face very red.

"Mm, yes," said the mother, apologetically; "Sue said she wanted to look at her own friends now."

"Sue is mean and selfish," said the bride, and flew from the room to hide her emotion, leaving an astonished and shocked old lady.

When the young benedict got home that night he beheld a bride with red cheeks and bright eyes, who laughed loudly at all of his remarks, and then burst into tears when he said the iced tea was too strong.

"Women are certainly queer," he said aloud when she had run upstairs to wash her face. But the bride knew what she knew.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

CUPID'S POOR SHOT.

Sixty thousand wives are deserted every year in New York City.

Prodigious must be the number of those annually abandoned throughout the country.

Men are devising new laws to curb this tremendous and growing evil.

The problem is one of the darkest and most complex ever forced upon the American public.

Legislation is only a partial remedy and therefore won't cure the disease.

The only panacea is one slow in compounding, and which can only be administered in a deliberate manner.

There must be inaugurated a radical and thorough system of education in regard to the meaning, responsibilities and duties of marriage.

Unless we can compass this, we shall soon have a nation without homes.

More liberal ideas about marriage prevail in the United States than in any other country.

Praise and blame have been freely visited on America because of this fact.

Both the praise and the blame are deserved.

In giving fair scope to youthful attachment and to natural inclination we are right.

In neglecting to provide romance with pilot or compass we are wrong.

Let it never be forgotten that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty in marriage as of other liberty.

Men marry without understanding that marriage is the most serious contract that can be made.

Women marry without realizing that marriage is a contract at all.

Yet people wonder that marriage so often spells ruin.

The real marvel is that the big majority of American marriages are happy.—Buffalo Inquirer.

Stale and Unprofitable.

The "twenty-eighth" annual report of the State Board of Health, for the year ending October 31st, 1904, is just being distributed, less than three months before another report is due. It includes the report of the Bureau of Vital Statistics for the year ending December 31st, 1903. Health statistics, to be of use, should be promptly disseminated, and there seems little sense in now printing these figures, that are nearly two years old, when the 1904 statistics would be stale. That is worse than promulgating laws in September that the people are supposed to have been observing since March.—Trenton Times.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

Afraid—me? What of? If they found me under that box I'd just give 'em the Beryl story about the bet. How do you know they wouldn't believe it? . . . Oh, I don't care, you've got to take chances, Mag Monahan, if you go in for big things. And this was big—huge. Do you know how much that diamond's worth? And do you know how to spend £50,000?

I spent it all there—in the box—every penny of it. When I got tired spending money I dozed a bit and, in my dream, spent it over again. And then I waked and tried to fancy new ways of getting rid of it, but my head ached, and my back ached, and my whole body was so strained and cramped that I was on the point of giving it all up when—that blessed old Topham came in.

He set the big box down with a bang that nearly cracked my head. He turned on the lights, and stood whistling "Tommy Atkins." And then suddenly there came a soft call: "Topham! Topham!"

I leaned back and bit my fingers till I knew I wouldn't shriek. The Englishman listened a minute. Then the call came again, and Topham creaked to the door and out.

In a twinkling I was out, too, you bet.

Mag! He hadn't opened the box at all! There it stood in the middle of the space framed by the three glasses. I pulled at the lid. Locked! I could have screamed with rage. But the sound of his step outside the door sobered me. He was coming back. In a frantic hurry I turned toward the window which I had unlocked when I came in four hours ago. But I hadn't time to make it. I heard the old fellow's hand on the door, and I tumbled back into the box in such a rush that the curtains were still waving when he came in.

Slowly he began to place the jewels, one by one, in the order her ladyship puts them on. We Charity girls had often watched him from the door—he never let one of us put a foot inside. He was method and order itself. He never changed the order in which he lifted the glittering things out, nor the places he put them back in. I put my hand up against the top of the box, tracing the spot where each piece would be lying. Think, Mag, just half an inch between me and quarter of a million!

Oh, I was sore as I lay there! And I wasn't so cock-sure either that I'd get out of it straight. I tried the Beryl story lots of ways on myself, but somehow, every time I fancied myself telling it to Obermuller, it got tangled up and lay dumb and heavy inside of me.

But at least it would be better to appear of my own will before the old Englishman than be discovered by Lord Gray and his lady. I had my fingers on the curtains, and in another second I'd been out when—

"Miss Beryl Blackburn's compliments, Mr. Topham, and would you step to the door, as there's something most important she wants to tell you."

Oh, I loved every syllable that call-boy spoke! The kid was a giggle behind his voice, too; old Topham was the butt of every joke. The first call, which had fooled me, must have been from some giddy girl who wanted to guy the old fellow. She had fooled me all right. But this—this one was the real article.

There was a pause—Topham must be looking about to be sure things were safe. Then he creaked to the door and shut it carefully behind him.

It only took a minute, but in that minute—in that minute, Mag, I had the rose diamond clutched safe in my fingers; I was on the top of the big trunk and out of the window.

Oh, the feel of that beautiful thing in my hand! I'd 'a' loved it if it hadn't been worth a penny, but as it was I adored it. I slipped the chain under my collar, and the diamond slid down my neck, and I felt its kiss on my skin. I flew down the black corridor, bumping into scenery and nearly tripping two stage carpenters. I heard Ginger, the call-boy, ahead of me and dodged behind some properties just in time. He went whistling past and I got to the stage door.

I pulled it open tenderly, cautiously, and turned to shut it after me.

And—

And something held it open in spite of me.

No—no, Mag, it wasn't a man. It was a memory. It rose up there and hit me right over the heart—the memory of Nancy Olden's happiness the first time she'd come in this very door, feeling that she actually had a right to use a stage entrance, feeling that she belonged, she—Nancy—to this wonderland of the stage!

You must never tell Tom, Mag, promise! He wouldn't see. He couldn't understand. I couldn't make him know what I felt any more than I'd dare tell him I did.

I shut the door.

But not behind me. I shut it on the street and—Mag, I shut forever another door, too; the old door that opens out on Crooked Street. With my hand on my heart, that was beating as though it would burst, I flew back again through the black corridor, through the wings and out to Obermuller's office. With both my hands I rinsed open the neck of my dress and pulling the chain with that great diamond hanging to it. I broke it with a tug, and threw the whole thing down on the desk in front of him.

"For God's sake!" I yelled. "Don't make it so easy for me to steal!"

I don't know what happened for a minute. I could see his face change half a dozen ways in as many seconds. He took it up in his fingers at last. It swung there at the end of the slender little broken chain like a great drop of shining water, blushing and sparkling and trembling.

His hands trembled, too, and he looked up at last from the diamond to my face.

"It's worth at least £50,000, you know—valued at that."

I didn't answer.

He got up and came over to where I had thrown myself on a bench.

"What's the matter, Olden? Don't I pay you enough?"

"I want to see Tom." I begged. "It's so long since he— He's up at—at—in the country."

"Sing Sing?"

I nodded.

"You poor little devil!"

That finished me. I'm not used to being pitied. I sobbed and sobbed as though some dam had broken inside of me. You see, Mag, I knew in that minute I'd been afraid, deathly afraid of Fred Obermuller's face, when it's scornful and sarcastic, and of his voice, when it cuts the flesh of self-conceit off your very bones. And the contrast—well, it was too much for me.

But something came quick to sober me.

It was Gray. She stormed in, followed by Lord Harold and Topham, and half the company.

"The diamond, the rose diamond!" she shrieked. "It's gone! And the carpenters say that new girl Olden came flying from the direction of my dressing-room. I'll hold you responsible—"

"Hush-sh!" Obermuller lifted his hands and nodded over toward me.

"Olden!" she squealed. "Grab her, Topham. I'll bet she stole that diamond, and she can't have got rid of it yet."

Topham jumped toward me, but Obermuller stopped him.

"You'd win only half your bet, my lady," Obermuller said, softly. "She did get hold of the Gray rose, worth £50,000, in spite of all your precautions—"

The world seemed to fall away from me. I looked up at him. I couldn't believe he'd go back on me.

"—And she brought it straight to me, as I had asked her to, and promised to raise her salary if she'd win out. For I knew that unless I proved to you it could be stolen, you'd never agree to hire a detective to watch those things, which will get us all into trouble some day. Here! Scoot out o' this. It's nearly time to your number."

He passed the diamond over to her, and they all left the office.

So did I; but he held out his hand as I passed. "It goes—but about a raise for you, Olden. Now earn it."

Isn't he white, Mag—white clean through, that big fellow Obermuller?

HE RAISES DUCKS BY THE THOUSANDS

MAN HAS GOLD MINE IN LINE OF FARMING IN WHICH HE IS THE ORIGINAL.

Readington township, Hunterdon county, with its many historic buildings within its borders, also boasts of the largest duck farm in this section, if not in the State. The farm is owned by Andrew T. Connet, of Flemington, a wholesale produce merchant, who is not only a veteran of the Civil War, but a veteran of the duck raising enterprise.

The farm is located between Centreville and Readington, and is managed by Charles Elmer Sutphin, whose experience has been of long standing. There are 5,000 ducks, the ages of which run from five days to ten weeks, which can now be seen in the different yards.

Most people think ducks cannot thrive without having large ponds on which to swim and stand upon their heads while they burrow in the mud beneath the surface of the water. But this is not so, for not a single one of these 5,000 waddlers have been allowed to take a swim, and they will not.

But troughs are so arranged that they can get pure water to drink continuously. They are hard drinkers, and keep the large wind wheels working overtime pumping from the 150-foot wells on the premises. The farm has a capacity of 10,000 ducks annually, but the largest number dressed for market in any one year has been 7,000.

The farm consists of 110 acres, and large fields of corn are planted, which is furnished the ducks as greens. Other diets consist of meat, broken crackers, sand, corn and wheat, which is prepared to suit their duckships' appetites.

After the meal is prepared in the feed room the diet is placed upon an improvised railroad, which runs to the different pens. So ravenous are the appetites of the ducks when the meal is served that they stand upon their heads to eat, so eager is their endeavor to get to the troughs. Another antic of the duck is that when one starts in the direction of another point he gives a succession of "quacks" and all the rest follow.

Ducks are ready for market when from nine to ten weeks old, at which time they weigh from nine to ten pounds per pair. About 1,000 have already been placed upon the Newark and New York markets, and now hundreds of others are so fat that they can scarcely waddle about the enclosure.

Mr. Connet also raises chickens upon an enlarged scale, having about 1,000 laying hens, and sells annually $2,000 worth of eggs, which go largely to the families of Newark and the Oranges. A large dairy is also run in connection with the farm. Asked as to what his specialties were, Mr. Connet said: "Ducks, eggs, milk, pork and hay."

That time-honored subject that "farming doesn't pay," which is continually harped on by thousands of farmers, resulting in driving the sturdy sons from tilling the soil to seek employment in the cities, is tabooed by Mr. Connet.

AMUSEMENTS.

The sports of the day at Washington Park and Casino, Maspeth, L. I., on Labor Day, the occasion of the Forty-ninth Annual Scottish Games of the New York Caledonian Club, will commence with an old fashioned Scotch reel at 11:30 o'clock. These games furnish an exceptionally favorable opportunity for a reunion of the Scottish folk of New York and adjacent States, and are usually well attended, attracting on one occasion in old Jones' Wood no less than 40,000 people. The grounds being splendidly equipped and easy of access, Chief James M. Congalton expects that the attendance this year will furnish another proof of the loyalty of Scottish Americans to the customs and sports of "auld Scotia." It is expected that many organizations from neighboring cities will attend in their picturesque national costume. Two bands will furnish the music, assisted by the club's pipers.

When it was first announced that arrangements had been closed to bring "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," the big Drury Lane pantomime, to New York, many wise and sagacious theatrical managers shook their heads doubtingly, and observed that English spectacular productions would never do in this country, and that the risk was altogether too great. But this firm went serenely on about its business, and "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" took hold of the public from the outset. As soon as patrons of the Broadway Theatre commenced to tell their friends of the great attraction the house was filled from orchestra rail to back wall and remained in that condition until the close of the engagement, without so much as a momentary cessation. This season the big spectacle has continued to draw capacity audiences in all the cities in which it has been presented.

FORESTERS FOR BUFFALO.

Supreme Court, F. of A., to Hold Its Convention There.

Preparations are being made by the New Jersey representatives to attend the biennial supreme convention of the Foresters of America, which will be held in Convention Hall, Buffalo, Aug. 21.

New Jersey will send fifteen delegates, representing 10,000 Foresters, and altogether 255 delegates, representing 250,000 members of the order, will be in attendance. The representatives from New Jersey will leave by special train on the Erie Railroad. They are: M. M. Cronin, James F. O'Mealia, Thomas W. Robinson, E. R. Wessells, August J. Concord, William J. Menchen, Joseph Mason, F. C. La Pointe, James Curran, F. W. Gray, M. F. Ryan.

Foresters in the Bison City are making elaborate arrangements for the reception of the visiting delegates. The day preceding the convention there will be a big excursion and parade, and every effort is being made to have both these events outdo the visit of the Elks this year.

FATALLY INJURED.

First Accident on Rahway Valley Road Yesterday Morning.

A car in which dirt was being hauled on the recently-opened Rahway Valley Railroad, toppled off the tracks at noon yesterday in Springfield, burying three Italian workmen underneath the debris. One of them had his skull fractured and several ribs broken. He was conveyed in a wagon from Springfield to Elizabeth and thence in a carriage to the Elizabeth General Hospital. His two companions accompanied him. The surgeons were operating on the man at 1:30 o'clock, which was almost as soon as he reached the hospital. There is little possibility of his recovery.

When the car overturned the Italian who was injured jumped, but did not go clear of the car. It fell on him.

This is the first accident to happen on the Rahway Valley Railroad.

REFORMER LA FOLETTE READY TO TAKE HIS SEAT IN U. S. SENATE IN THE FALL

After an uphill fight for several years, Governor Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, has succeeded in having his reform ideas incorporated in the laws of Wisconsin and is now ready to retire as governor and occupy the seat in the United States Senate to which he was elected in January. He has not said publicly that he intends to leave the governor's office. It is contrary to his policy to announce his plans in advance, but his associates in the capitol understand that he is now preparing to quit the governor's office in time to take his seat in the Senate when Congress meets, either in special session in November or in regular session in December.

The Governor is now dividing his time between Chautauqua assemblies and his office. When he is in Madison he is busy putting the new law into effect.

Much of the new machinery is already in motion, although it is only a month since the most important laws went into effect. By fall the Governor will have things going so smoothing that he can safely turn the State helm over to the lieutenant governor. It is well understood that La Follette will continue to have a hand on State affairs after he becomes a Senator. The State is his first love, and in the enforcement of the reform laws he will continue to be the "power behind the throne" after he goes to Washington. His organization is supreme in the State, and he proposes to see that it holds on.

The man nominated for Governor next year by the "halfbreeds" will be picked by him. District Attorney McGovern, of Milwaukee, will probably be the man. The "stalwarts" are complaining because they are not getting any representation in the La Follette appointments, but their complaint does not move La Follette. He believes in putting friends on guard, and will follow that policy to the end.

The so-called "La Follette laws," enacted at the recent session of the Legislature, form a long list. The most noteworthy are:

1. The railroad commission rate act.
2. The anti-pass act.
3. An act introducing the merit system into the State government.
4. An act strengthening the railroad taxation laws.
5. A new ballot law.
6. Amendments to the primary election law.
7. Bonus acts regarding incorporations.
8. A law to prohibit corporations from influencing elections.
9. A law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of cigarettes in the State.

FEAR THAT GIRL IS ALIVE IN GRAVE ANGRY CROWD IS DRIVEN TO OPEN IT

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 18.—Two excitable Slavonian women, Mrs. Julia Palsac and a companion, passing through St. Augustine's cemetery Wednesday night thought they heard a muffled cry. They ran shrieking into the city and spread the story that Annie Bednar, whose funeral they had attended Tuesday afternoon, had been buried alive.

Soon more than a thousand persons were clamoring at the grave and demanding that the body be disinterred. The grave was opened and the body was found to be just as it had been buried. Annie, a young Slav, who had recently come to this country, had blown out the gas in her room on Sunday night.

In the throng that went to the grave was George Pistey, an undertaker, who had buried the girl. When the crowd saw him it howled with indignation and ordered him to exhume the body at once. He tried to explain that there could not possibly be life in it, but the excited throng, urged by the dead girl's sister, who was crying hysterically, grew so threatening that Pitsey, without waiting for a permit, got his men together. By torchlight they feverishly tore open the grave, while a corps of policemen kept the crowd from the trench.

With flickering kerosene torches casting shadows upon its features, the body again lay in state until the crowd was convinced the girl was really dead. It was then buried again.

Lee Escapes from Ward's Island and Probably Swam to Astoria.

William J. Lee, a mechanical engineer, contractor and estimator, of Trenton, who was committed to the Manhattan State Hospital, on Ward's Island, several months ago, has escaped. A thorough search of the island has been made, but Lee has not been found. He is an expert swimmer, and it is thought he swam to the mainland. It is supposed he went to Astoria, which is the shortest distance.

Lee was committed for writing threatening letters to Judge Garrett D. W. Vroom, of the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals, and to Franklin Murphy, then Governor of New Jersey, and officials of the New Jersey State Asylum for the Insane, in Trenton.

Lee came into prominence four or five years ago by a verbal attack on Judge Vroom and other officials, charging that they had defrauded him out of the Phoenix Iron Works, for which he had paid $10,000. He was committed to the Trenton Insane Asylum, and after a time discharged. He renewed his attacks and was again committed. He escaped.

Nothing more was heard of Lee until March, when Judge Vroom, Mr. Murphy, then Governor, and officials of the asylum received letters. In them Lee threatened to kill them within five days, some by shooting and some by poison. The letters were written from the Mount Morris Hotel, New York City. Lee was found there and District Attorney Jerome had him arrested.

On May 13 Lee was committed to the Manhattan State Hospital. Largely instrumental in having Lee committed was Assistant Corporation Counsel George H. Cowie, and Lee threatened him with bodily harm. Mr. Cowie is today on his guard for fear Lee will find him.

Lee, it is thought, escaped at 7 o'clock Wednesday night.

EX-CONVICTS MURDER GIRL.

Six Hours After Release From Jail They Commit a Double Crime.

Augusta, Me., Aug. 18—Less than six hours after their release from jail three ex-convicts last night assaulted and murdered Mattie Hackett, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Levi J. Hackett, a farmer at Kent Hills, fifteen miles north of this city.

While the girl wos cooking supper for the men, who had begged food at her father's home, she was dragged from the kitchen into the woods, beaten into insensibility with a stone, assaulted and strangled to death by a cord drawn tightly around her throat.

Posses of mounted men are searching the woods for the trio of murderous ex-convicts. very approach to this city is guarded, and news of the murder has been sent broadcast through the countryside. There is little likelihood of the miscreants' escape.

TRAIN DIVES INTO RIVER

Negro Excursion Dashes into Open Draw Near Norfolk, and Two Cars Sink.

Norfolk Va., Aug. 18—Fifty persons were killed and about as many more seriously injured yesterday when an excursion train on the Atlantic Coast line dashed at high speed into an open draw and rolled into the Elizabeth river at Bruce station, seven miles from here. The train was the second section of the excursion and was composed of the locomotive, tender and two passenger coaches. The excursion was made up almost wholly of negroes.

As the locomotive plunged through the draw the engineer and fireman jumped into the river and saved their lives by swimming out into the stream before the cars had time to topple over on them. Edward Jolly, the promoter of the excursion, is among the missing and it is supposed that he perished in one of the cars. He was one of the three or four white men on the train.

Supt. Wooten, of the Atlantic Coast line, left here less than an hour after receiving news of the disaster to superintend the work of rescue. He went in a tug together with other officials of the road and a corps of physicians.

There were about 240 excursionists in the two cars, both of which are nearly submerged in the swift current of the river.

A large crowd of relatives and friends of the excursionists was gathered at the Norfolk and Western depot here last night, awaiting news from the scene. They were in the greatest excitement and all the police of the city are there to keep them from storming the station offices.

The first tugboat arrived last yesterday afternoon from the scene of the disaster, bringing in about fifty of the passengers, more than half of whom were suffering from injuries and shock. Among the number was Frank Mabrey, a young negro, who saw his mother perish almost within his reach as the car sank in the river. He was in the forward car and thinks that nearly all of those in it must have perished.

Mabrey said the second car tore a big hole in the roof of the first, and it was through this rent that he was able to make his escape and swim, injured as he was, to the shore.

Another tugboat arrived late last night with about thirty of the excursionists, who were nearly all suffering from some kind of injuries. They reported that bodies were fast being taken out of the wrecked cars by divers working from the decks of tugboats.

GAS BILLS START SUIT FOR DIVORCE

WIFE SUSPICIOUS WHEN HUSBAND PROPOSED TO PROVIDE LIGHT.

Mrs. Catharine T. Burtt, of 149 New street, Newark, has instituted proceedings in the Court of Chancery for alimony and separate maintenance against her husband, Robert H. Burtt, who is a well known electrical engineer and automobile expert. He, until recently, was chief engineer of the electrical plant of the Public Service Corporation.

In her bill Mrs. Burtt relates that she was married to the defendant at Bloomfield in 1894. They lived together happily, and two children were born to them prior to May, 1904, when trouble entered their home.

Through her counsel, Charles O'Connor, Mrs. Burtt alleges that on May 13, 1904, after she had recovered from a lingering illness, by which she was confined as a patient in St. Michael's Hospital, a representative of the Essex and Hudson Gas Company called at her home to inquire whether her husband possessed real estate. She was informed, she alleges, that the inquiry was made because her husband had agreed to become surety for the gas bills of a woman residing in Grant street, Newark.

When she asked her husband concerning his interest in the Grant street woman, the petitioner avers, he told her he had agreed to become surety for the other woman at the request of a man friend. He asserted, she says, that he was not acquainted with the woman.

The incident of the gas bill caused Mrs. Burtt to become suspicious and to watch her husband's movements. She claims to have interrupted a visit he was making to a woman who, the petitioner believes, was a relative of the one whose gas bills he proposed to guarantee.

A promise on her husband's part to discontinue his conduct, the petitioner relates, was broken by Burtt, and an unhappy period of several months ensued until last December 7, when, Mrs. Burtt declares, her husband deserted her and her two children, eight and two years old, and took his personal effects to No. 15 Marshall street, where he has since resided.

The petitioner claims to be in such poor physical condition that she is unable to support herself and the children. She asserts that her husband's income is at least $250 a month.

DEADLOCK MAY END THE PEACE PARLEY

UNLESS RUSSIA OR JAPAN YIELDS VITAL POINT, CONFERENCE MUST END.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 18.—Unless Russia or Japan yields on a vital point today, the discussion of the peace conditions submitted by Japan will end in disagreement on four points, and the conference will adjourn forever, if war is to continue, or until Monday if outside interference can bring either the Czar or the Mikado to concede sufficient ground for compromise.

That today's meeting will end in a deadlock is frankly admitted by the Russians. The Japanese are saying nothing. The Orientals grow more impassive as the crisis approaches. The Russians make no attempt to conceal their disappointment and irritation that, after yielding to Japan on every point demanded by her before the war was declared, their enemy now persists on punitive terms before agreeing to make peace.

If outside pressure brings instructions today from Tokio to Baron Komura to waive the demand for indemnity and the possession of Russia's interned warships the making of peace will pass into the final stage of treaty drafting, for Russia is willing to let Japan retain Sakhalin as a spoil of war and cede her the fishing rights demanded along the Siberian litoral. But if Japan stands pat on the question of indemnity, there is no possibility of a favorable outcome to the negotiations.

WRECK BLAME FIXED.

Bayonne Man Reported Responsible for Bridge Accident.

Bayonne, Aug. 18.—Before a coroner's jury in the City Hall an inquest was held Wednesday night into the death of William Mooney, engineer of the Atlantic City express. The engine had plunged from the long trestle over Newark Bay on August 4 and Mooney was drowned in the cab.

The jury reported that the accident was caused by an open switch which, in the jury's opinion, Hurley J. Gerard, of 23 Linden street, this place, was responsible for. Gerard was testing the switch, and the train was thrown to a siding, the tracks of which were not completed.

MAYOR FILES HIS VETO

Tells His Reasons at Length in Message Accompanying It.

UP TO THE COUNCIL

Prompt Re-passage of Ordinance Expected—Not Much Likelihood That Councilmen Have Changed Their Minds.

Before the saloon districting ordinance becomes a law it will have to be passed over Mayor Buckle's head. As The Daily Press announced he would, the day after the ordinance was sent to him, the executive has put his veto to the measure.

Mr. Buckle filed his veto with the city clerk just within the limit allowed him for that action, which expired yesterday. The veto message states his reasons for opposing the ordinance with detail enough to make his position on the whole subject clear.

What the exact tenor or contents of the message are the Mayor refuses to make public in advance of the Council meeting to be held Monday, September 5. He will merely consent to state that he has freed his mind on the subject, and makes a full statement of his opinion.

There was never any doubt before or after the ordinance was passed on its final reading that the Mayor would refuse to sanction the proposed law. Mr. Tyler did not press it for passage until he had made sure that he had votes enough to make his pet bit of legislation independent of executive opinion.

There is scarcely any doubt that the veto will be promptly overridden. It is, of course, possible that the Mayor and his councilmanic supporters may have brought convincing arguments to bear on some one of the councilmen who voted against them on the ordinance, but this is so extremely unlikely that it is hardly to be considered.

As a matter of fact, it is doubtful whether the party leaders, now being disrespectfully referred to as "the ring," whose advice and friendship Mr. Buckle frankly rates very highly, would change a single vote among the members who arrayed themselves for the districting idea. They have held all along that the ordinance is so odious to the common people, especially in the wards where the leaders are strongest personally, that its enactment will play directly into their hands, and strengthen them almost immeasurably in the battle for which the reform element is now sounding the alarm.

The supporters of the ordinance are not believed to put much stock in this line of reasoning. They are apparently convinced that the church and temperance sentiment is powerful enough in this city to make a restriction of the liquor traffic popular, and give the men who work for it a backing strong enough, at least, to enable them to fight their party battles unhandicapped.

DOING GOOD WORK.

Commissioner Gavett Pleased With Progress on Sewer Bed Extension.

The work of enlarging the city sewage disposal works is now being vigorously pushed by Contractors Richards & Gaston. The office of the firm is in New York, but the members are residents of Raritan and Somerville and are favorably known in this vicinity.

Street Commissioner Gavett is well satisfied with their work so far, as it is being well and rapidly done; their plant includes two steam hoisting engines and a steam concrete mixer. The water company has completed the main to the works, and the use of city water is proving of great advantage in expediating the work.

Purchase Bib Peach Crop.

Lovers of fine Jersey peaches will be pleased to know that they will have an opportunity to secure some of the choicest fruit grown in this State. Neuman Brothers, of Watchung avenue, have just purchased the crop of a fine new orchard in Washington Valley, to be delivered as they desire them. The orchard will yield about 5,000 baskets, and the fruit is especially choice.

Engineer Bennett Promoted.

William Bennett, of Park place, the borough, for several years one of the engineers at the Public Service Corporation electric light works on Madison avenue, has been offered a much better position with the same company at its Metuchen plant and has accepted the offer. He will remove his family to the latter place about September 1.

Sails for Cuba.

Vincent Rittenhouse, of Sandford avenue, who represents Emerson & Co., of New York, promoters, sailed today for Havana, Cuba, where he will look after the interests of a large number of stockholders who have property holdings in the island. He will be away several weeks.

PRE-ELECTION MATTERS FIXED BY REPUBLICANS

CITY COMMITTEE GIVES SECOND REPORT OF ITS SESSION.

One or two pre-election matters were arranged by the Republican City Committee at its regular meeting last night. A naturalization committee was appointed, and Secretary Newcorn was authorized to issue the call for the primaries, which are to be held on September 12. All the members of the committee, excepting J. W. Murray, Jr., and Charles Foster, of the Third ward, were present.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins, the chairman, appointed the following on the naturalization committee: Horace G. Adams, First ward; William Townsend, Second ward; Charles Foster, Third ward, Andrew McCardell, Fourth ward. Foreigners who desire to become citizens may apply to any member of the committee or to Secretary Newcorn.

There was considerable talk over the local outlook, the tenor of which was agitated at times, but none of this was allowed to leak beyond the confines of the meeting room. Secretary Newcorn was delegated to give out a carefully censored report on the session, and the other members became as clams in the presence of reporters.

At the primaries for which the committee prepared a councilman, justice of the peace, and constable will be nominated in each ward. At the city convention to follow three councilmen-at-large, one member of the Board of Education, tax collector and a freeholder to serve one year will be named.

LARGE GATHERING AT MRS. MOSHER'S FUNERAL

TWO PASTORS OFFICIATE AND PAY TRIBUTE TO HER MEMORY.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral services of Mrs. John P. Mosher held yesterday afternoon from the home in West Fifth street. The sad circumstances attending the death of Mrs. Mosher called forth deep sympathy for the bereaved ones. There was a large display of floral tributes from relatives and neighbors of the departed attesting the high esteem in which she was held.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of which Mrs. Mosher was an active member, read appropriate Scripture selections, offered prayer and made a short address, dwelling on the exemplary life and character of Mrs. Mosher and her unselfishness.

At the conclusion of Mr. Shaw's remarks, William N. Runyon sang Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," after which Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, an intimate friend of the family, spoke at some length, recounting the incidents which led up to the death of Mrs. Mosher. He referred to the fact that it was while she was on her way to attend his golden wedding anniversary that she received injuries which caused her death. He also paid a tribute to the character of Mrs. Mosher and her devotion to her church and home, offering sincere words of sympathy for the bereaved family. He concluded his words with a prayer.

The interment was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearer were Boardman and Arlee Cottrell, of Alfred, N. Y., brothers of Mrs. Mosher, her three sons, Stanley, Wendell and Boardman Mosher, and her son-in-law, George Homan.

BITS OF STREET WORK.

Commissioner Gavett's Men Busy in Various Parts of the City.

The contract work on macadamizing is not proceeding to the satisfaction of the officials and steps will be taken to hurry this work. Carlton avenue will be the next street to be started, to be followed by New street.

The street department is now repairing the track along Watchung avenue, the cost being charged to the street railway company. The work will be continued along West Front street, where the macadamizing along the track is in bad shape.

Grant avenue from Eighth street to Sherman avenue is being staked out, with the idea of putting the street to the proper grade during the work of resurfacing.

BIG CROWD AT BENEFIT

Over 5,000 People Attended Ben La Vere's Own Pyrotechnic Concert

THREE VOCALISTS

Affair Was a Great Success and Pleased the Beneficiary—He Makes An Unheard But Appreciated Speech.

There was no room for pessimism in Bandmaster Ben LaVere's heart after his benefit concert last night. LaVere, being an artist, is inclined to a melancholic tendency to regard the dark side of things but he couldn't help cheering up last night. Concert Park and all the adjacent open spaces were jammed with people, and the way in which the programme went off marked a new degree in the enjoyment of Concert Park audiences.

It was the biggest crowd that has come out to a concert this season by a good deal. Exact figures are hard to get, because the music lovers and admirers of LaVere were scattered all over the neighborhood of the Park, but it is certain that considerably over 5,000 people came out to hear the music and see the fireworks—and pay a tribute to LaVere. It is not known how much the unusual programme and not a desire to gather in the bandmaster's honor figured in drawing the crowd, but LaVere doesn't care. No matter what moved the crowd its money was good and there was enough of that to make the artistic soul indifferent to the public's estimate as between personal worth and fireworks.

There were fully 1,000 people inside the stand enclosure. Every seat was taken and an overflow that filled the space in front of the seats as much as the management could allow was content to pay for the privilege for standing within the ropes. And the price was five cents more than usual, too. The space outside the enclosure was a solid mass of humanity, and the crowd on Watchung avenue was so thick that progress from Front street to the Park was a matter of fighting inch by inch.

Fireworks and all, the programme was one of the most enjoyable the public has had a chance to enjoy here for some time. The music was "pop" from first to last, and the pyrotechnic display was even better than that shown by the Italians in their feast-day celebration.

Most of the fireworks were reserved for exhibition by themselves after the music, but some of the pieces were set off between the musical numbers, making the programme a no-stop one. The fireworks included rockets, bombs and large set-pieces. The piece de resistance or at least the piece that struck the crowd's fancy was the figure of a woman, which burned away with sudden and unexpected touches of humor.

Three vocal soloists enlivened the musical programme. William Redmond sang "We'll Be Together When the Clouds Roll By;" Billy Murray sang "Happy Go Lucky Is the Way To Be" and "I Wonder If You Miss Me As I Miss You;" and Lew Leever sang "Down in Blossom Row."

Halfway through the programme Bandmaster LaVere arose to make a speech of appreciation. The hubbub and the soft quality of his tones made it impossible for anybody in the crowd to hear a word of what he was saying, but they took his eloquence for granted and cheered whenever the agitation in his face ceased. After a time Mr. LaVere stopped talking. An enthusiastic burst of handclapping and cheering came from the audience, for while it was impossible to tell what the speaker was saying it was very plain that he was pleased. The incident closed with palpable relief on both sides.

HERZIG & CO. INSOLVENT

Unexpected State of Affairs Revealed By Senior Members's Death.

CREDITORS MEET

Counsel for Partner Asks That He Be Given Charge But No Action Taken.

Before the death last week of Samuel Herzig, senior partner, the firm of S. Herzig & Co., whose factory for the manufacture of petticoats and women's underwear is in this city, was supposed to be in prosperous circumstances. Mr. Herzig made a statement only four days before he died to Bradstreet's representing the firm to have assets of $251,395 and liabilities of $99,353. Yesterday at a meeting of creditors it was announced that the firm was insolvent.

The firm was organized July 1, 1905, succeeding the firm of Herzig & Kapp, which had been in business five years. On the reorganization Nathaniel Levy, who had been a salesman for the firm of Herzig & Kapp, succeeded Edward Kapp.

George W. Gallinger, counsel for Mr. Levy, told the creditors that the two firms owed $96,000, of which $58,000 is for loans from banks as follows: Importers and Traders', $25,000; Chemical National, $15,000; Corn Exchange, $5,000; a private banker, $3,000. The assets, Mr. Gallinger said, were but $46,012. Of the liabilities Mr. Levy is responsible for but $12,000, the amount owed by Herzig & Co. Mr. Gallinger proposed that Mr. Levy be allowed to continue the business, but no action was taken on the suggestion.

In the event of the creditors refusing to allow Mr. Levy to assume charge and close the firm's affairs, the loss of the local factory would be greatly felt by Plainfield people. It employs about 200 women and girls and is the most important industry of its kind in this vicinity. It has always paid its employes good wages and many of them have been earning weekly amounts equal to those paid men in various departments of the city's machine shops.

The factory was moved to Plainfield from Dover in 1900, taking possession of the big Rink building on Watchung avenue. Mr. Kapp personally supervised affairs from the start until his withdrawal from the firm a few weeks ago.

The factory was running today and the foreman in charge said he had received no word from the New York offices in regard to the meeting yesterday.

He Must Apologize.

Thomas C. Harding, fifteen years old, arrested early in the week for throwing a stone at the daughter of Joseph Streyer, of Plainfield avenue, was arraigned in the city court this morning. He acknowledged the throwing, but Streyer failed to appear against him and sentence was suspended. Judge Runyon ordered him to apologize to the girl and her father.

Quinn's Reduced Rate Fine.

Peter Quinn, a farm hand employed at Warrenville, who was arrested Thursday night on Somerset street by Marshal Flack, for intoxication, was given a hearing last night before Recorder Doud. As it was the prisoner's first offense, the Recorder gave him the choice of five days in jail or a fine of two dollars. He produced the two-spot.

Makes Souvenir Cards.

Paul F. Collier, a high school boy, is making up a number of picture postal cards with local scenes. He takes the photos, develops them, and prints them on the cards himself. The scenes are all of spots and buildings in and around this city. The work is excellent and the young man has received a number of orders from collectors.

Hangs Out His Shingle.

J. Henry Crane, Esq., son of Rev. Arthur Crane, who was formerly employed by the Equitable Life Assurance Company, has opened law offices in the Jeffery building, 134 Park avenue, where he will practice law. Mr. Crane was admitted to the New Jersey bar two years ago.

Last Symphony Concert.

The Plainfield Symphony orchestra will give the last concert of the summer season at the Hill & Shupp department store this afternoon and evening. A special feature will be selections on the wonderful "Humanatini."

Plainfielders in Canoe Races.

Fred Martin and G. Harold Whitney, of this city, will represent the Wanamassa Boat Club in the two paddle canoe race this afternoon at Deal Lake. This combination won the race for the club last year.

Albert V. Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, is spending his vacation at Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y.

ENDS WAR WITH EXEMPTS

Ex-Secretary Murray Finally Delivers up Records and Money.

BY COURT'S ORDER

President Littell's Action In Replevin Completely Successful—A Warrant for Murray's Arrest Was Out.

Firemen here and in other parts of the State have found a topic of conversation of more than usual interest, in the replevin suit which the New Jersey State Exempt Firemen's Association recently instituted against Peter J. Murray, of Hoboken.

Mr. Murray is prominent in political circles in Hudson county, being for many years clerk of the Board of Assessors, of Hoboken, and for the past two years secretary of the State Exempt's Association. So it is a relief that he is no longer compelled to keep in hiding in order to evade service of legal papers, demanding of him the delivery of the Exempt Association's books, records, minutes, money and seals. He has at last made peace with the old volunteers, giving up all the records which he had and $14 in money, by order of a writ of replevin from the Hoboken District Court.

As it is, the litigation has covered many months, the first procedure being started early in March of this year, when a committee composed of Joseph G. Burns, of Perth Amoby; D. W. Littell, of this city, and H. W. Hughes, of Orange, called on Murray and demanded that he attend to the duties of his office and prepare the notices and reports for the convention to be held at Trenton in May. This he failed to do, complaining that he had several grievances against the association and declaring he would not attend to the office, nor attend the convention and deliver up the records and money to his successor, E. T. Humphrey, of Nutley, until "he got good and ready."

After assuming the office of president, Mr. Littell decided that for the best interests of the association and its members negotiations should be severed with Murray, and legal proceedings instituted.

V. W. Nash, Jr., of this city, attorney for the State Association, was sought, and at once made application for a writ of replevin to Judge Frederick Frambach, of the Hoboken District Court, ordering Murray to appear and show cause why he had failed to comply with the legal demand made by E. T. Humphrey, the new secretary, at the request of John I. Spittell, chairman of the State Executive Committee. At the same time complaint was also made to Justice of the Peace John Duffy, of Jersey City, charging Murray with embezzlement of $14 of the association's money, alleged to have been collected as dues from the Tenafly and Red Bank associations.

Upon this complaint a warrant was issued and placed in the hands of a constable for service.

On Tuesday, after many delays, the cases were called for trial, and with the approval of the court possession was given to the association of the records and papers, money and costs of court.

SAT ON DEAD LIMB TO VIEW FIREWORKS

IN CONSEQUENCE RALPH RUNYAN TOOK A SUDDEN TUMBLE.

While viewing the fireworks display at Concert Park last night, the limb of a tree upon which Ralph Runyan, of Manning avenue, was sitting broke and threw him to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet, severely bruising and spraining his left leg from the hip to the foot. As he fell he gave a cry and this attracted the attention of neighbors, who rushed to his assistance. He was helped home, where proper treatment was given. An examination disclosed the fact that no bones were broken. Although he is able to walk about, Mr. Runyan suffers intense pain, and it will be some time before he will be able to return to work.

He intended to take his family and go to Concert Park, but it being late when he finished work, he afterward decided to climb a tree in the Babcock property, adjoining his residence, where he had an excellent view of the pyrotechnic display. It was afterward learned that the limb upon which he was sitting was partially dead.

GAVETT DEFEATS MINER IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND

BY WINNING, HE SECURES A PLACE IN THE FINALS.

The third set of the Gavett-Miner match in the semi-final round of the Y. M. C. A. tournament, which was left as the deciding set of the match on Thursday because of darkness when each player had a set to his credit, was finished yesterday afternoon on the Cedar Brook court. As in the second set on Thursday, which Gavett won easily, 6—2, he again completely outclassed Miner on the whole, winning by a score of 6—1.

Although the score would indicate that the match was one-sided, still Gavett was forced to work hard to win, most of the games going to deuce. Gavett gave some excellent exhibitions of stroke play, placing the ball as a rule along Miner's side line. By winning yesterday Gavett earned his right to play in the final round of the tournament. The final scores of the match were 1—6, 6—2, 6—1.

Spicer played his match off last night with Rockwell also, the last match in the preliminary rounds. Rockwell won in two hard fought sets, 7—5, 6—4.

Collier will meet Rockwell in the semi-final round sometime today. T. O. Gavett will then meet the winner of this match in the final round some day during the next week, probably on the Bronx Club court, on Albert street.

Sewer for South Section of City.

In connection with the investigations which the committee on streets and sewers are making for a sewer for the part of Plainfield not reached by the gravity sewers, Street Commissioner Gavett is having some test pits dug to ascertain the character of the ground. This work is to verify some borings made two years ago, and indicates considerable water and quicksand. The section under consideration reaches around the south and southeast portions of the city.

Charged Wrong Boys.

Howard Laury and Irving Cassett, both colored, one eleven years old and the other sixteen, were arraigned in the city court this morning, charged by M. Kadesh, of West Third street, with breaking a window in his house. The complainant said the boys smashed the glass at six o'clock in the morning, but the mothers of both swore that the lads were in bed at the time. Judge Runyon dismissed the complaint.

Married at Flemington.

Richard A. Hahr and Miss Annie May Drake, both of this city, were married in the Hotel Hunterdon, Flemington, last Saturday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Buckle, of Clover Hill, in the presence of a few witnesses. At its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Hahr returned to Plainfield.

FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

A MARRIED MAN

Has a Wife and Four Children Residing on West Front Street—Former Suspected Perfidy.

Charged with breach of promise by Miss Annie Hubbell, of Metuchen, Lambert Edmunds, who has a wife and four children at 680 West Front street, was arrested in Jersey City this morning. Until last night Edmunds lived with his family here. He fled from them after his wife had confronted him in company with Miss Hubbell in Metuchen.

Mrs. Edmunds was told of her husband's arrest by a Daily Press reporter. She expressed no surprise.

"I have known that this thing was gong on for two months," she said. "I tried to lead my husband from the course he was following, but without avail.

"Six months ago he started to come home later than was his habit and I suspected something was wrong. Two months ago in cleaning his clothes I found a letter from this Hubbell girl that confirmed my suspicions. At that time I did not know her address, and it was not until yesterday that I discovered it. As soon as I learned where she lived I went to the house.

"I learned there that my husband had engaged himself to Miss Hubbell under the guise of a single man. The girl's father was astounded when he learned that her fiancee was a married man with four children, but the girl herself told me that she had learned it from his own lips two weeks ago. She said they became engaged a year ago, my husband posing as an unmarried man. Two weeks ago the girl said he told her the truth, but said it need make no difference in their plans for marriage. He proposed that they go South, where he said they could be married quietly without fear of interference. My husband began to throw out hints some time ago that his health would require a change to a Southern climate, and I suppose this plan had been in his mind for months. He refused to promise to take me and the children with him, and the talk strengthened my suspicion that something was wrong.

"I returned home yesterday afternoon but went back to Metuchen in the evening. I met my husband and the girl on the street. He refused to speak to me and hurried back to this city. When I reached home I learned from his mother, who lives with us, that he had been here, packed up his clothes and fled. Mother pleaded with him to give up his wicked plan but he refused to listen to her.

"My husband has always treated me well except for this one thing, but I will not seek to shield him from the consequences of his act unless he makes it plain that he will reform completely. I am ready to appear against him in court."

Edmunds met Miss Hubbell in this city. Until two months ago she was employed as a domestic in a fashionable Crescent avenue boarding house. She drew her money from the bank and returned to her home in Metuchen in expectation of getting married.

Edmunds is a boss plumber in the employ of the Central Railroad. He was arrested while at work. He came here ten years ago from Bound Brook. He has been married for seventeen years. The eldest of the four children is eleven years old; the youngest is only three months old. He is a member of a local council of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

After a three weeks' delay occasioned by several adjournments granted by the court, Peter Nolan, Michael Rivington and Harry Gulick, three Plainfield men, were found guilty in Recorder Clark's court of being drunk and disorderly on Sunday night, July 30, and were fined $10 and costs. The fines were paid and the long-drawn out case was closed. Counselor Swackhamer represented the township at the hearing, while the prisoners' interests were looked out for by Charles Ball, counsel engaged by them failing to appear. Mr. Swackhamer asked the court to uphold the officers in their endeavors to keep the streets of the village safe, that the womanhood of the town might not be shocked by the obscene language heard and the disorderly scenes witnessed. On the other side, Mr. Ball said Officer Shackleton and Gurnier had made the arrest simply to show the police board that they wanted to hold their jobs good. The court, after hearing the evidence, found the trio guilty, and the township treasury has $30 more for the good cause.

A dog poisoner, one of the meanest kind of miscreants, has made his appearance in town. Several days ago a valuable skye terrier belonging to Lynus Walpole was found to have been mysteriously poisoned. The following day the family pet of Mrs. Robert Jahn died under the same circumstances. Several cats have passed to eat heaven by the same mysterious hand, and the owners of dogs are up in arms and it would go hard with the poisoner if he is caught.

AMUSEMENTS.

Laughter is in vogue wherever "The County Chairman" is given and George Ade has caught and pictured with a facile pen the foibles of a country community and shed the gentle light of satire upon them. It is in his "types" that Ade is seen to advantage and in "The County Chairman," which will be presented at the new Plainfield theatre Thursday night, abounds with them. Characters from everyday life and those we know from association are vividly drawn with just enough of caricature to make them stand out boldly from the canvas. Here we have the bluff, rugged personality of Jim Hackler, the county chairman. He is an easy going, open hearted spender but one whose every energy is aroused when upon a set purpose. The sort of a man who would stay up all night to defeat an enemy. Jim Hackler is a curious composite of easy good heartedness, sentiment and fierce hate. His frequent allusions to what "Bill Says" (referring to the immortal bard) are extremely amusing.

The village ne'er do well, Sassafras Livingston, a "gentleman of color" with a large family and with a strong disinclination for work is the cause of considerable merriment. He is depicted with strongly marked absurdities and while the character often approaches the farcial yet there are just such derelicts in every village community. Then there is the fat, slothful husband of the energetic boarding house keeper; the elderly candidate for office, flint hearted, bent of back and strong of hate; the editor of the country paper, unscrupulous, tall, lean and fierce; the smart, scrappy youth of the grocery store; Uncle Eck, the town Methusaleh, who "remembers" distinctly events that happened before his birth; and the two lovers, Lucy and Wheeler, who prevade the comedy with the telling of the old sweet story. Henry W. Savage has given "The County Chairman" a stage presentation of rare pictorial excellence. The cast includes that fine character actor, Theodore Babcock, George Thatcher, Cyril Raymond, R. J. Dillon, George R. Caine, Edward Gorman, Jas. H. Bradbury, Charles Burke, Will Phillips, Ruby Bridges, Laura Ayres, Zenalde Williams and Florida Kingsley.

Is it Right?

Is it right that a property owner should lose $4 20 to let a dealer make 50 cents? A dealer makes 50 cents more on fourteen gallons of ready-for-use paint, at $1 50 per gallon, than our agent does on eight gallons of L. & M. Paint and six gallons of linseed oil, which makes fourteen gallons of the best paint in the world, at $1 20 per gallon; the property owner loses just $4 20. Is it right?

It only requires 4 gallons of L. & M. and 3 gallons linseed oil to paint a moderate sized house.

SENATORSHIPS AT AUCTION.

Colby Tells Bloomfield They're Sold to Highest Bidder.

Bloomfield, Aug. 19—Assemblyman Everett Colby opened his campaign in Bloomfield Wednesday night and again paid his respects to Major Carl Lentz. In the course of his speech he declared that United States Senators are put up at legislative auction, and the man prepared to pay the most money always lands the job. "This accounts for the fact," Mr. Colby concluded, "that Senators in thirty-five States are either in prison or under serious charges."

LITERARY.

Although the August edition of The Century was largely increased, to meet the anticipated demand for the magazine containing Rudyard Kipling's "'An Habitation Enforced,'" the edition was virtually exhausted in less than a fortnight from the date of issue. Within a week the main office of the American News Co. had not a copy left; and the publishers have not sufficient reserve supply to meet the demands coming from the news companies throughout the country.

Picturesque and Reasonable Outing.

The most picturesque town in America is only a hundred and twenty miles from New York. Mauch Chunk, in a narrow pass between the Lehigh River and the overhanging mountains, rises on the slopes like a quaint Swiss village. Historically the locality is known in connection with the discovery of anthracite coal. This discovery led to the construction of a bit of railroad which is the oldest in the country. Originally the track was laid to convey the coal to the river, but now it is maintained solely for recreation purposes. The cars are first hauled up a high hill, and from that point they travel by their own gravity around a circuit of nearly eighteen miles. As one ascends the steep slope the buildings below, the town and the nearer landmarks drop away in perspective with kaleidescopic suddenness, and the doubling valley of the Lehigh spreads out in a thrilling panorama. Sights of great interest abound along the route. Old Indian trails over the hills are pointed out, the primeval forest envelopes the track for long stretches, and glimpses of old mining settlements are caught in the valleys. At Summit Mountain a halt is made and opportunity is given to visit the mines. The burning mine which is situated here has been smouldering since 1832 in spite of elaborate and costly undertakings to extinguish the fire. Returning from Summit Mountain the car attains great speed, and, as the visitor always thinks, the inspiring ride is over all too soon. The New Jersey Central will operate one of its popular excursions to Mauch Chunk on August 20, 1905. Round trip $1.50, and special train leaves Plainfield at 9:20 a. m.

Illegal Form of Advertising.

A common form of trademark graft is that of deceptively employing the phrase "late with" or "successor to." A case of this kind was before Judge Lacombe in the United States Circuit Court recently. A manufacturer in Paris and the United States of perfumery and toilet preparations had adopted, in 1844, a trademark which has become widely known. One who has been in the employ of this manufacturer, began, in this city, to manufacture and sell toilet preparations. On his labels and boxes he arranged his devices and inscriptions in such a manner as to make them almost indistinguishable from those of the original firm. The name of the old firm was displayed in conspicuous letters, while in minute characters over it were the imitator's own name and the inscription "late with." Judge Lacombe decided that it was a clear case of trying to palm off goods as those of the old-established firm, and issued an injunction.—New York Evening Post.

If You Had a Billion.

If you had a billion dollars have you any idea how long it would take to count it? Next Sunday's New York World makes some interesting computations based on Uncle Sam's counting of the money of the Treasury. Anna Steese Richardson has a bright article on "Some Little New York Bluffs." There are stories by Conan Doyle and O. Henry, and a timely practical article on "How Six Girls Camped Out at $2 a Week Each." Don't fail to order next Sunday's New York World.

AMUSEMENTS.

This evening at the Majestic theatre, New York, will be a notable occasion, it being the opening of the regular season, and it will also be the first presentation in New York City of that best of all pastoral plays, "York State Folks," with a most elaborate production and a cast that has seldom been equalled. Of course James Lackaye will be seen in his original creation of the part of Simon Peter Martin; Mr. Ray L. Royce, as the old organist; Myron Cooper, Miss Lilla McIntyre, who was the original in the part of Jennie has been engaged for this engagement. "York State Folks" is a delightful departure from the conventional rural drama. There are no "hayseeds" or exhibits of farming machinery, and there is not even a mortgage, neither is there a villain, nor a woman with a story of wrong. There are no thrills, save those that stir the heart when love is winning its wonted triumphs over less worthy passions. There is no horse play or buffoonery artificially contrived through caricature of rustic characters. One laughs with these villagers, rather than laugh at them. The absence of straining for theatrical effects is one of the chief charms of the play.

Colonel Frank E. Fillis, who is one of the leading attractions of the Boer War spectacle at Brighton Beach, has received during the last two weeks not less than five hundred offers from booking agents in every part of the country. At the close of the season at Brighton Beach Park he has an eight weeks' engagement in New York City, where he will be seen on the stage of one of the big theatres, accompanied by his "High School" horse Povero. At each performance of the Boer War spectacle this horse and his trainer receive round after round of applause, which is amply appreciated by both horse and rider, which fact is attested by Povero's graceful bowing in acknowledgment. The Boer War spectacle has added many features during the last two weeks, among them being the airship, the California Arrow, which is on exhibition just outside of the Boer War area. This ship is the only one in the United States that has made successful flights around New York, and it is the only one of the many at the Worlds Fair at St. Louis last year that made a completely successful flight over the fair grounds. Captain Arthur W. Lewes, manager of the Boer War spectacle, has secured the ship and it will be sailed at the Boer War show until the close of the season, when it will be sailed across country by the successful aeronaut, Leo Stevens, to a State fair in a nearby State, where it will again be on exhibition and where daily flights will be made, principally in the interest of science and a demonstration of the possibilities of the construction of vessels that may eventually be used for the navigation of the air for both pleasure and pastime, and even for commercial purposes.

NERVOUS ENERGY.

Don't Overdraw Your Account in the Bank of Nature.

You have a deposit of nervous energy placed to your account in the bank of your body. It may be large, in which happy case you are a millionaire in strength and accomplishing power, or it may be so microscopic as to need careful husbanding and little expenditure to keep it from dwindling out altogether.

But many millionaires become paupers, and some "dime savings" swell into millions. It depends upon the way the capital is managed. You may think you have so much that there is no need to be economical. You get up in the morning and feel the blood bounding through your veins like mountain cataracts, and you think you can turn the mill wheels of the world.

You work day and night or you play day and night, which is sometimes more exhausting, and go at the limit of your speed all the time. You are overdrawing your bank account of energy, and that needlessly, for you probably have enough to last a long and useful lifetime. It pays to sit down and sharpen your tools, and it adds cent per cent to your body bank deposit.

Another with not half your brains or bustle will get ahead of you in the end, for he makes every act, every thought, go straight to the mark. He wastes no effort. Everything he does means something. It helps toward some given end. You spend a great deal of ammunition on your quarry because you are overanxious. He keeps cool, takes steady aim and wings his bird.

You get wrinkles and frost tipped temples and become a bankrupt in vitality when you should be in your prime. You have overdrawn the best and most valuable bank account the Lord ever placed on the books of life—the ability "to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars."

NEGROES ADVISED.

Washington Tells Them Not to Inflame Southern Whites.

New York, Aug. 19—The sixth annual session of the National Negro Business League began Wednesday at the Palm Garden, Fifty-eighth street and Lexington avenue. There were about 300 negro business men present. The object of the league is to bring together for mutual help and support negroes who are engaged in business for themselves.

Booker T. Washington has been president of the organization since its inception.

At the meeting in the evening letters from President Roosevelt, Governor Higgins and other distinguished men were read. President Fornes, of the Board of Aldermen, delivered the address of welcome.

Booker T. Washington, in his address to the delegates, said in part:

"We must pay the price for everything we get. One tangible achievement in creative effort will go further in bringing to us protection and respect than any recital of wrongs we may make. Instead of blaming somebody for not providing decent surroundings and decent houses for us to occupy let us turn our attention to acquiring some of the millions of unoccupied acres of land in this country and to creating for ourselves decent surroundings and comfortable homes.

"We should let no influence turn our eyes from the fact that while wrong and injustice often touch our lives, the masses of our people are dependent upon the white people of the South, in a large degree, for employment, education and protection of life and property. We should see that no fire of racial hostility is lighted. Ten million members of our race, the great masses, are in the South, and there, in my opinion, they will remain. There is a group of white men in the South, however little we may hear of them at a distance, who are constantly exerting themselves to help forward our cause, and we should see that no action on our part embarresses them or makes their task more difficult."

VAIN SEARCH FOR MAYOR.

One Passenger Arriving at Honolulu Answers Description.

Honolulu, Aug. 19—If William H. Belcher, the absconding Mayor of Paterson, N. J., was aboard the steamship Sonoma which arrived here Wednesday, the authorities who searched the ship did not make an arrest. According to the searchers but one of its passengers partly answers the description of Belcher, as cabled by Governor Stokes, of New Jersey, to the Hawaiian police.

Sheriff Brown says he is satisfied that this man is not Belcher, but is a through passenger for Sydney.

Belcher was supposed to have sailed from San Francisco on August 5, the date the Sonoma left that port.

The police will overhaul all vessels making this port.

Paterson, Aug. 19—City Counsel Stalter, in an opinion given, said that William H. Belcher was the only person entitled to draw the salary of Mayor of this city, and therefore, Acting Mayor Young wil have to be content with the salary of an alderman. Belcher is legally entitled to his seat as Mayor and the charter does not provide for any remuneration to his temporary successor.

FARMERS' HOLIDAY.

Hunterdon County Fair Grounds Is the Mecca.

Flemington, Aug. 19—The old Hunterdon County fair grounds, on the outskirts of this place, was the Mecca toward which the farmers of Hunterdon county turned their faces Thursday. The occasion was the sixth annual picnic of the Hunterdon County Pomona Grange.

For many reasons the farmers generally look forward to these gatherings for a considerable length of time. Everybody is permitted to wander about the spacious grounds at will, without the remotest possibility of being fleeced by sharpers, who frequently invade rural picnic grounds with all sorts of schemes to fleece the tillers of the soil after persuading them in taking a hand in their games of chance. The ban on politics afforded another relief. They congregate annually on the grounds for a social good time, and they have it.

Veterans to Hold a Reunion.

Morristown, Aug. 19—The sixteenth reunion of the Society of the Thirty-fifth New Jersey Veteran Volunteers will be held here September 4. A number of members will attend from Newark, and it is expected that the veterans will reach Morristown in time to begin the business meeting at noon. The Mayor of Morristown will welcome the visitors, and a chance will be given to them to view the town, including Washington's headquarters. Governor Stokes, Mayor Doremus and a number of military men of the State are expected to attend. The annual banquet will be served at 1 o'clock.

Want Election Law Interpretation.

Mt. Holly, Aug. 19—So much uncertainty has arisen over the proper mode of procedure in the nomination of candidates for township offices under the new law abolishing spring elections, that the county board of registry has framed a letter to the Secretary of State requesting that official to secure from the attorney general an opinion as to his interpretation of the election law upon this point.

Plainfield, N. J., August 19, 1905.

Several more explosions occurred at Canfield's Saratoga place yesterday. It's a sure sign that somebody must be winning.

A train carrying 600 lunatics will steam out of the Grand Central station Monday, bound for upper New York State asylums. Unfortunately, the reports from the lake regions show that the fool who rocks the boat will not be among them.

Apropos of the controversy over the division of the reward for the capture of Murderer Long by the Plainfield police, the Trenton State Gazette spoke editorially as follows in today's issue:

"The controversy that has arisen over the payment of the reward offered for the capture of Murderer Long, is apt to lessen interest in rewards that may be offered for the capture of criminals in the future.

"The police authorities of this city and Plainfield say that Van Nuis was guilty of harboring Long until the time when the reward had reached proportions great enough to induce him to turn the man over to the authorities.

"It would seem that a portion of the reward had been earned by Van Nuis, who gave the information that led to Long's capture after he had kept the police of this city and Plainfield on the hunt for ten days.

"If Van Nuis was guilty of harboring the criminal and keeping him informed of the whereabouts of the detectives so that he was able to escape apprehension, there may be provision for his punishment in the statutes and it would appear to be the duty of the authorities to prosecute him with that end in view.

"Van Nuis is certainly innocent until he is proven guilty, and no matter what the opinion of the police authorities may be as to his disposition to shield Long, they have not the right to undertake to punish him by withholding from him a part of the reward which was clearly earned by him.

"Van Nuis, it is said, will institute proceedings against the city of Trenton and the Board of Freeholders of the county of Mercer, not so much to get possession of the reward offered for the capture of Long as to get an opportunity to prove in the courts that he is not guilty of the charges made to the effect that he aided and abetted Long in eluding the police.

"Before the reward is entirely disposed of, it would seem to be only fair to give a portion of it to detectives Pilger and Clancey, since it was from them that the Plainfield police received the "tip" that Long was on the Van Nuis farm, and that information came to Trenton from Van Nuis himself.

"If a man is obliged to fight for the possession of a reward after he believes he has earned it, he is not apt to put himself out of the way to assist the police authorities in their efforts to apprehend escaping criminals.

"The question has been asked the State Gazette why the Plainfield police should expect to be rewarded for performing a duty that was clearly theirs, when they qualified for membership of the police force?"

After Bogus 'Phone Inspectors.

Because of the many complaints that have been coming from various parts of the State, the New York & New Jersey Telephone Company is making a determined effort to break up the practice of sneak thieves gaining entrance to homes by representing themselves as telephone inspectors. Every attache of the company's various offices is provided with a badge, and it will be shown whenever a call is made at the home of a subscriber for any purpose. The company offers a reward for the apprehension of any one posing as a 'phone employe.

—The 10 day special sale at the Hill & Shupp department store opened yesterday with a rush. There must be something interesting to cause such crowds as visited the store yesterday.

ROOSEVELT INTERVENES

Sends Messenger to Portsmouth Summoning One of Russian Envoys.

WANTS NO BREAK.

Determined to Do All Possible to Bring About the End of the War.

Portsmouth, Aug. 19.—President Roosevelt does not intend to allow the peace conference to fail if it is in his power to bring the negotiations to a successful end.

Last night he sent a confidential man to Portsmouth with a message to Mr. Witte.

That messenger, who will arrive in Portsmouth today, will say to Mr. Witte that it is the President's earnest desire that Mr. Witte shall send Baron Rosen, or somebody in the confidence of Mr. Witte and of equal powers, to Oyster Bay at once to see the President.

The President has made his message most urgent. He almost demands that Mr. Witte shall send a representative to Oyster Bay at once.

The President is determined that the peace conference shall not end in a break if he can bring about peace, and it is understood here that he has a most pressing communication for Mr. Witte and the peace conferees.

The President has been in constant receipt of reports from the peace conference. He knows that tonight, as matters stand, there can be no peace. He will urge on the Russians that they shall ask the Czar to recede from the postition they have taken on the four points in dispute, and thus give the Mikado a way to make concessions, also, and end the war.

A reply from Mr. Witte is expected early today, as soon as the messenger reaches Portsmouth. It is expected that Mr. Witte will grant the request of the President and send either Baron Rosen or some other influential member of his suite.

A LIBRARY COURTSHIP.

Young Couple Carried It On at Princeton.

Kingston, Aug. 19.—A romance of Princeton library, where both the bride and bridegroom have been employed for some time, culminated Wednesday in a wedding, when Miss Reba Harris, one of the most popular young ladies of this place, was married to Walter Duffield, a well known Princeton man.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Harris. The wedding march was played by Miss Ada Harris, oldest sister of the bride; and her youngest sister, Miss Mabel Harris, was the maid of honor. The bride received many handsome presents.

After a trip to the mountains Mr. and Mrs. Duffield will live in Princeton.

HOTEL MEN DEFEATED

Asbury Park to Remain Prohibition Resort By Yesterday's Referendum.

A CLOSE VOTE.

Victors Had But Eight Majority—Speculation As To What The Officials Will Do.

Asbury Park, Aug. 19.—By the narrow majority of eight votes Asbury Park is to continue to try to be a prohibition resort. This was decided by yesterday's referendum. Over 800 votes were cast in the two wards, 364 votes in the First Ward and 448 in the Second. Several defective ballots were rejected. The result showed that the First Ward voted "wet" by 12 majority, but the Second Ward, which includes all of North Asbury Park, declared for the "dry" ticket by 20 majority. This gave the prohibitionists a majority of 8 votes in the city.

Many of the owners of the small hotels and all the "speak-easies" voted against the high license proposition. They believed that the proposed excise board would limit the licenses granted to the larger houses and prevent the little hotels from making an extra dollar on the side, as they have been doing for years. Well known topers marched to the polls and voted an open ballot against high license. They did this, they explained, because it had been given out semi-officially that in case the "wet" faction triumphed there would be no corner saloons for the natives. The leaders of the high license movement were surprised at the result. They had been led to believe that all was harmony in their ranks.

T. Frank Appleby, the leader of the "dry" contingent, predicted early in the day that his ticket would win in the Second Ward by at least 20 majority. He was gratified over the result. He said: "I am against the open bar in Asbury Park, but I believe that the hotels should be permitted to sell liquor to their guests."

Mayor Frank A. Tenbroeck, who flocked with the "wet" element, was not pleased with the downfall of his faction. He intimated that it was not a fair test, because other than legal voters were permitted to record their views. Charles A. Atkins, councilman for the Second Ward and part owner of the Ocean Hotel, was satisfied with the vote. "It was a fair test of public sentiment," he said, "and the majority decided for the 'water wagon.'" It was Mr. Atkins who, as a councilman, insisted that a vote be taken before the Common Council act finally on the Excise Board ordinance.

In Ocean Grove today there is much speculation as to what the county officials will do now that the high license proposition is sidetracked. It is asserted that there are 130 individuals in Asbury Park paying a government liquor tax.

The county officials, led by Prosecutor Henry M. Nevius, threatened recently to raid every hotel and boarding house found breaking the "one mile limit" law.

Fears are entertained today by the hotel men that the prosecutor will carry out his threat. The most radical of the temperance advocates, flushed with victory, declare that they will have the unlicensed places raided if the prosecutor or the city officials fail to act promptly.

The women taxpayers played a lively part in the battle of ballots. The returns show that forty-four women voted in the First Ward and one hundred in the Second Ward.

Frost in Warren County.

Orange, Aug. 19—According to reports from Washington, Warren county, early risers report seeing a slight frost yesterday morning. It was plainly visible on the tin roofs in many places. At 6 o'clock various thermometers registered 50 degrees. Vegetation did not suffer by this unusually early frost. It has been noticed that the katydids got down to business about two weeks ahead of time this year. There is a rural saying that the katydids tune up just six weeks before frost, but it hasn't been six weeks since they started in Orange.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson, of West Front street, are expected to return home next week from their summer vacation.

S. Rusling Ryno, Clerk, Board of Chosen Freeholders, Elizabeth, N. J.,

Dear Sir: Your favor of July 10th advising that a vacancy exists in the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J., for the city of Plainfield, occasioned by the death of Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, received, and beg to advise that at a special meeting of the Common Council held in the Council Chambers in said city of Plainfield, in the County of Union, on the 24th day of July, 1905, J. Fred MacDonald, of the said city of Plainfield, was elected by the said Common Council to fill the said vacancy. I have advised Mr. MacDonald of his election, also that he take the oath of office at his earliest convenience.

Signed—Yours Very Truly, J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

No objection being offered, the communication was received and placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen: We desire to express to you our deep appreciation of the beautiful flowers sent in Mr. Hubbard's memory at a time when all our hearts were sore with loss, and assure you that every member of the Board is held in grateful remembrance for the many years of unswerving loyalty, care and consideration which they have invariably held his interests and watched over his welfare.

It is not often that it falls to the lot of one man to be so blessed with friends such as you have been, and it is out desire that you should know we appreciate it, as he did.

Signed—Yours Sincerely, Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, Mrs. Eva Hubbard VanSickle.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin. I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply to Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FASHION TIPS.

Loose little sacks with scalloped and buttonholed edges, under which are set frills of narrow Valenciennes, and with delicate trailing garlands embroidered by hand down the fronts and on yoke and sleeves, are costly trifles for all their misleading air of dainty simplicity, but they are exquisite, and a host of women seem to have money enough to buy them. The popular openwork or eyelet embroidery is also much in evidence, and often one sees heavy, bold, blind embroidery combined with open work or with delicate garlands.

The fine embroidery flouncings and allovers are pressed into service for charming matinees that are, of course, much less expensive than the hand embroidered models, and here again the English open work embroidery comes to the front.

The daintiest of little sacks are fashioned from deep flouncing of such embroidery on fine batiste or lawn, with medallions or insertion bands to match, and a little Valenciennes to soften the effect, and frequently these open work embroidery matinees are made over linings of wash silk in delicate color.

The loose lining is caught to the outside only at the neck and armholes, so that it may be readily removed before tubbing, and especially in pink or creamy yellow the under color gives a delightful tone to the matinee without detracting from its airy freshness and coolness.

Little matinees, without hand embroidery or by the yard embroidery, but trimmed more or less lavishly in fine tucking and lace, are offered in many attractive forms, and there are most lovable matinees very sparingly trimmed and owing their effectiveness chiefly to their lines and to the fineness and charm of their materials.

STUDY YOUR FACE.

A little judgment used in the selection of hats will often do much in the way of tempering the unkind treatment which nature may have accorded one's face.

The woman who has sharp and prominent features, for instance, should never wear hats that are set back or off her face. Such a woman will do well to arrange her hair in as fluffy a manner as possible, and her hat should be of a shape that may be worn well forward. The same kind of a hat should be adopted by the woman whose hair is scanty, says an exchange.

If the hair is very heavy a larger hat may be worn than when it is thin and sparse.

The woman with irregular features also must beware of choosing her headgear without a very nice regard to its angle from every point in the mirror.

A hat with brim crushed to suit her face will be a suitable setting, and often in trying on a hat its unbecomingness may be altered by simply bending the brim here and there after it is adjusted.

Alas for the woman with a prominent nose! Here is the worst of troubles with which to contend in hat choosing.

Many a charming shape which she covets must be laid by in favor of another of more friendly contour. Her hats must avoid severe outline, and must be worn well forward, so that the prominent feature will seem proportionately insignificant.

She, too, must look at her headgear from every mirrored point and angle, to see that no one side is too frankly unkind in showing up her defect.

Huge picture hats must never be worn by girls with small faces, even if their figures are sufficiently tall and slight to carry them.

Some of the smart milliners declare, however, that the only possible rule for hat buying is to try them on, since many times a woman may be able to wear a hat which looks impossible for her when on the stand.

Hard or careworn features, it should always be remembered, must be softened by not too severe headgear.

A word, too, to the woman who thinks to hide her "near middle age" appearance beneath a too juvenile hat. She deceives no one but herself, and while she, of all women, including her sister with the prominent nose, must select her headgear cautiously, the former will call inevitable attention to the fact that she is passe directly she attempts to wear an ingenious hat. This does not mean that she need adopt the "old" unbecoming style. The softest of effects she must seek to wear, but let her beware of the bebe contour if she would look her best.

Prediction Unpleasantly Verified.

A week ago Professor Smith predicted a visitation of mosquitoes. On the eighth of the present month he said that there was a large section of salt meadow "on which a heavy brood is now in the larval stage. They are due to mature by the end of the current week, and next week there will be a flight which may or may not reach well into Newark." It has reached Newark. It has also infested Elizabeth. It is the silent, stinging, get-instantly-to-work species—all the more intolerable because of the comparative scarcity of mosquitoes heretofore. — Newark News.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

I GOT into the train, Mag, the happiest girl in all the country. I'd a big basket of things for Tom. I was got up in my Sunday best, for I wanted to make a hit with some fellow with a key up there, who'd make things soft and easy for my Tommy.

I had so much to tell him. I knew just how I'd take off every member of the company to amuse him. I had memorized every joke I'd heard since I'd got behind the curtain—not very hard for me; things always had a way of sticking in my mind. I knew the newest songs in town, and the choruses of all the old ones. I could show him the latest tricks with cards—I'd got those at first hand from Prof. Haughwout. You know how great Tom is on tricks. I could explain the disappearing woman mystery, and the mirror cabinet. I knew the clog dance that Dewitt and Daniels do. I had pictures of the trained seals, the great elephant act, Alle. Picotta doing her great tight-rope dance, and the Brothers Borodini in their pyramid tumbling.

Yes, it was a whole vaudeville show, with refreshments between the acts, that I was taking up to Tom Dorgan. I don't care much for a lot of that truck—funny, isn't it, how you get to turn up your nose at the things you'd have given a finger for once upon a time? But Tom—oh, I'd got everything pat for him—my big, handsome Tom Dorgan in stripes—with his curls all shaved off—ugh!

I'd got just so far in my thoughts, sitting there in the train, when I gave a shiver. I thought for a minute it was at the idea of my Tom with one of those bare, round convict-heads on him, that look like fat skeleton faces. But it wasn't. It was—

Guess, Mag.

Moriway.

Both of us thought the same thing of each other for the first second that our eyes met. I could see that. He thought I was caught at last. And I thought he'd been sharp once too often.

And, Mag, it would be hard to say which of us would have been happier if it had been the truth. Oh, to meet Moriway, bound sure enough for Sing Sing!

He got up and came over to me, smiling wickedly. He took the seat behind me, and leaning forward, said softly:

"Is Miss Omar engaged to read to some invalid up at Sing Sing? And for how long a term—I should say, engagement?"

I'd got through shivering by then. I was ready for him. I turned and looked at him in that very polite, distant sort o' way Gray uses in her act when the Charity Superintendent speaks to her. It's the only decent thing she does; chances are that that's how Lord Gray's mother looks at her.

"You know my sister, Mr.—Mr.—" I asked humbly.

He looked at me, perplexed for just a second.

"Sister be hanged!" he said at last. "I know you, Nan, and I'm glad to my finger-tips that you've got it in the neck, in spite of all your smartness."

"You're altogether wrong, sir," I said, very stately, but hurt a bit, you know. "I've often been taken for my sister, but gentlemen usually apologize when I explain to them. It's hard enough to have a sister who—" I looked up at him tearfully, with my chin a-wabble with sorrow.

He grinned.

"Liars should have good memories," he sneered. "Miss Omar said she was an orphan, you remember, and had not a relative in the world."

"Did she say that? Did Nora say that?" I exclaimed, piteously. "Oh, what a little liar she is! I suppose she thought it made her more interesting to be so alone, more appealing to kind-hearted gentlemen like yourself. I hope she wasn't ungrateful to you, too, as she was to that kind Mr. Latimer, before he found her out. And she had such a good position there, too!"

I wanted to look at him, oh, I wanted to! But it was my role to sit there with downcast eyes, just the picture of holy grief. I was the good one—the good, shocked sister, and though I wasn't a bit afraid of anything he could do to me, or any game he could put up, I yearned to make him believe me—just because he was so suspicious, so wickedly smart, so sure he was on.

But his very silence sort of told me he almost believed, or that he was laying a trap.

"Will you tell me," he said, "how you—your sister got Latimer to lie for her?"

"Mr. Latimer—lie! Oh, you don't know him. He expected a lady to read to him that very evening. He had never seen her, and when Nora walked into the garden—"

"After getting a skirt somewhere."

"Yes—the housekeeper's, it happened to be her evening out—why, he just naturally supposed Nora was Miss Omar."

"Ah! then her name isn't Omar. What might it be?"

"I'd rather not tell—if you don't mind."

"But when Latimer found out she had the diamonds—he did find out?"

"She confessed to him. Nora's not really so bad a girl as—"

"Very interesting! But it doesn't happen to be Latimer's version. And you say Latimer wouldn't lie."

I got pale—but the paleness was on the inside of me. Think I was going to flinch before a chump like Moriway, even if I had walked straight into his trap?

"It isn't?" I exclaimed.

"No. Latimer's note to Mrs. Kingdon said the diamonds were found in the bell-boy's jacket the thief had left behind him."

"Well! It only shows what a bad habit lying is. Nora must have fibbed to me, for the pure pleasure of fibbing. I'll never dare to trust her again. Do you believe then that she didn't have anything to do with the hotel robbery? I do hope so. It's one less sin on her wicked head. It's hard, having such a girl in the family!" Oh, wasn't I grieved!

He looked me straight in the eye. I looked at him. I was unutterably sad about that tough sister of mine, and I vow I looked holy then, though I never did before and may never again.

"Well, I only saw her in the twilight," he said, slowly, watching my face all the time. "You two sisters are certainly miraculously alike."

The train was slowing down, and I got up with my basket. I stood right before him, my full face turned toward him.

"Are we?" I asked, simply. "Don't you think it's more the expression than anything else, and the voice. Nora's really much fairer than I am. Good-by."

HE LOOKED ME STRAIGHT IN THE EYE.

He watched me as I went out. I felt his eyes on the back of my jacket, and I was tempted to turn at the door and make a face at him. But I knew something better and safer than that. I waited till the train was just pulling out, and then, standing below his window, I motioned to him to raise it.

He did.

"I thought you were going to get out here," I called. "Are you sure you don't belong in Sing Sing, Mr. Moriway?"

JEALOUSY AND LOVE.

When a woman says that she does not know the meaning of the word jealousy I immediately draw one of two conclusions, either that she is not telling the truth or that she is ignorant regarding love rather than jealousy.

Most of us learn the meaning of that hideous word in our babyhood, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

We have seen a tiny girl of three most wretchedly jealous of her new baby brother.

And could we but remember no doubt we have all felt the stings of the green-eyed monster by the time we are five.

It is the most miserably unhappy sensation in the world.

Even animals are not exempt from it.

When a first little nephew was born he was considered by all his admiring family to be the most wonderful scrap of pink humanity that had ever come to earth.

His father was the owner of a fine bull terrier, which had been much petted and noticed by everyone.

Naturally, when the baby came the interest in "Bose" waned.

Such an unhappy puppy you never saw. He sulked and would not come near any of us, and whenever he saw the baby he would growl and snarl as much as he dared.

He was desperately jealous, and it was weeks before he got over it.

In the matter of jealousy human beings are little more than animals.

No matter how much you may love a person, jealousy can creep in and, to a certain extent, poison that love, for in nine cases out of ten jealousy is the stronger of the two.

There are so many kinds of jealousy.

When we are children we are jealous of each other's toys and pretty clothes, and later we are jealous of social or business success.

But, of course, the jealousy that far, far eclipses all others is that which has to do with the love between man and woman.

It can poison the sweetest friendships, arouse the bitterest, most evil feelings the human heart is capable of.

It can descend on one like a blood-red cloud, blinding one to all better instincts.

A woman may love her sister deeply and tenderly, but let a man slip between and, even though it be against her will, the love is turned to gall and bitterness.

If your whole heart is given to a man you see a possible thief in every woman who looks kindly on him.

Should she distract his attention from you in the smallest degree every virtue of which she is possessed becomes, in your jealous eyes, distorted into a vice.

You may be too wise to criticise her yourself, but you love to hear others do so.

One sad thing about jealousy is that it almost invariably destroys all the pride in one's nature.

It leaves room for no other sensation save hate and its miserable self.

Fortunately, jealousy is not the constant companion of love.

It comes but rarely to most of us.

But at some time or other every human being is bound to experience it in a greater or lesser degree.

Some natures are full of it; others have comparatively little of it.

In New Jersey today one poor woman stands in the shadow of the gallows because jealousy was the strongest passion she knew.

She loved well and she hated well, and the jealousy that traveled hand in hand with her hate caused her to kill her rival.

Perhaps love might not be so great a thing if it were freed from the stimulus of jealousy, but I am quite sure that it would be an infinitely more peaceful one.

UNTOLD LOVE.

According to Shakespeare, to love is to "be made of doubts and fears," and most women remember at one time or another taking counsel, like Marguerite, with Nature, and plucking petal after petal from a daisy, repeating, "He loves me, he loves me not," as each one fell to the ground, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Remembering this experience, and finding it supported by the immortal bard, perhaps it is safe to conclude that love, though patent to all the world, may often be unknown to its object.

Women, perhaps, are clearer-sighted than men to detect love inspired by them, but only let them return it, and then at once they must be told in words that they are beloved.

Men are apt to think that their attention to a girl must show her their love, and it sometimes happens that they utterly surprise their girl friends with proposals of marriage, when the girls themselves regarded them merely as pleasant companions, quite oblivious to the fact that they might possibly be suitors.

When this happens a man will sometimes think the girl "ought to have choked him off sooner, for she must have seen what was coming," whereas she did nothing of the kind.

The girls who are best worth winning are not those who think themselves so attractive that they imagine every man who shows them a little attention to be in love with them, so it is not fair always thus to blame them.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Randolph, of Myrtle avenue, have returned from a stay in the White Mountains.

TELEPHONE COMPANY SOLD.

Stockholders Wiped Out—Bondholders Get Twenty-six Per Cent.

Doylestown, Pa., August 19.—By order of the court, the Bucks County Trust Co., trustee under the mortgage, sold to R. D. Brown all the property and franchises of the Standard Telephone and Telegraph Co. The price paid was $50,000. This company, which went into the hands of a receiver a few months ago, has been operating less than four years. Due to Bell competition and inadequate rates, the company has not been able to meet its current operating expenses or to lay aside a fund to offset the usual depreciation of its plant.

The Bell company, with its larger volume of business and extended toll and long-distance service, is in a strong position in this territory and is rapidly extending its system into the rural sections, connecting up all the farmers on a co-operative plan.

A striking feature connected with the sale is the speed with which a telephone plant depreciates, and emphasizes two facts: First, that the public prefer and demand a comprehensive telephone system reaching all points; and, second, that, like any other business, there are many expenses, of which depreciation is one, which telephone promoters either do not see or fail to explain to investors.

A. V. H. CADMUS DEAD.

Came From the South to Regain Health at Former Home.

Abram V. H. Cadmus, a former resident of this city, died last night at the home of his great uncle, Rutger Cadmus, of Greenbrook road, after a short illness with hasty consumption. Mr. Cadmus held a responsible position with the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, in Virginia. He was in poor health and was given a vacation so that he might return here in the hope of regaining his strength. His illness developed into hasty consumption and he quickly passed away.

Mr. Cadmus was the son of Cornelius and the late Cornelia A. Cadmus, of the borough, and was well known here. He was twenty-nine years old. The funeral services will be held from the home in Greenbrook road Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Henry Leifke and niece, Miss Irene Samuels, of West Front street, are home from Asbury Park, where they sojourned for a month.

RAILROADS MAY DODGE PAYMENT OF THEIR TAXES

NEW LAW REQUIRING FULL RATES LIKELY TO BE EVADED.

Commissioner Brock, the Democratic member of the Jersey City Board of Finance, has set the Corporation counsels of all the cities in the State delving into their law books to find out whether the new railroad tax act does not reduce the railroad tax bills which it was designed to double and treble. The roads had been paying local tax on their second class property at the rate of $1.50 per $100. The new tax act requires them to pay on their holdings at the full local rate, which often approximates $3 per $100.

Commissioner Brock says he had been informed by a high railroad official that the act compels the companies to pay at only the municipal tax rate. That means that the companies may cut out the county and school taxes, which are always included in the city's tax bills.

The local rate in Jersey City will be about $28 per $1,000. In Newark it will be about $24 per $1,000. But of Jersey City's $28, $10 is for school and county taxes, and in Newark $8 of the $24. In all the other cities the school and county taxes represent about one-third of the total tax bill. If the companies pay only the municipal bill their local tax bills this year in Jersey City and Newark will be scarcely larger than they were last year, before the new law was passed. In some of the municipalities, where the municipal rate does not reach $1.50 per $100, the railroad tax bills will be even smaller than they were last year.

Mr. Brock's announcement has stirred up the cities all over the State, because they have all prepared their budgets for next year on the assumption that the railroads will pay their city tax bills at the full rate, and their failure to do so will lead to financial embarrassments all around. The deduction in Jersey City alone would amount to nearly $300,000.

Girl Eloper Hurt.

New Brunswick, Aug. 19.—William Braun, a farm hand, persuaded Louisa Gessler, 15 years old, a pretty housemaid, to elope with him, but Mrs. William Hahn, of Metuchen, by whom the girl was employed, suspecting all was not right, kept the girl in her room. In trying to get out, the girl jumped or fell from a second story window, injuring her spine so badly that she may be crippled for life. She is now in the hospital, and Braun is in jail. He takes the whole affair as a joke.

WHAT PLAINFIELD NEEDS

Former Councilman Randolph Discusses the Local Political Situation.

CLOUDS GATHERING

Declares the Citizens Require the Awakening of a Healthy, Intelligent Public Sentiment.

The Daily Press is in receipt of the following communication from Isaac S. Randolph, of West Front street, who was at one time a member of the Common Council:

To Editor The Daily Press:

Henry Liefke's letter to the people, through the columns of The Press the other evening, should make certain self-appointed political bosses sit up and take notice. Because the voters of Plainfield have been slow to anger in the past, should not be taken by the machine to mean that they will sleep forever. The indignation of those of our citizens today who know the true inwardness of local politics is nothing to the storm-clouds which will gather and burst when the people at large become fully aroused.

What Plainfield needs—and the only thing she needs—is the awakening of a healthy, intelligent public sentiment. The opposition to the machine is not against men; it is against methods which are questionable and principles which, it is believed, would not stand the full light of day. The bosses work in the dark—is it any wonder, then, that there is a steadily growing belief among all classes of citizens that it is neither wise nor safe to follow them?

Mr. Liefke pointedly says: "Citizens who know the truth sit back and take no active steps." This is true—lamentably true—of the past, but will it be true of the campaign which is about to open? If it proves true in the next three months, Plainfield deserves ring rule of a worse type than she has ever had before, and the man who will make this thing possible by "sitting back" with folded hands will have no moral right to lift a voice in protest.

The time to do something is now—not tomorrow—and the first thing to do, if you have not done it already, is to post yourself on conditions as they exist in Plainfield today. Find out who the ring candidates are, whom they really represent, and what principles they advocate. Start in, perhaps, by telling the candidate you would like to open a saloon on your block, and see if his support is not freely offered. Tell him you would like to get a friend a job in some city department, and see if he can't be induced to use "his influence" with the machine in your friend's behalf. This is "practical politics," as the term is generally understood in Plainfield.

Above everything else, don't say you "guess things are good enough as they are." Look into the matter and find out. That's what you do in your business; do it in your politics. And when you have found out, work and vote according to your own conscience and your own judgment, not, as has been done so many times, because the other fellow asks you. Remember that the man who will not openly assert his independence of ring control and declare his principles in unequivocal terms is seldom worth an honest man's vote.

INFERNAL MACHINES FOR NEW YORK BANKERS

ATTEMPTS BY CRANKS TO INJURE JACOB SCHIFF AND DANIEL GUGGENHEIM.

New York, Aug. 19.—Packages containing high explosives were sent to Jacob H. Schiff, head of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and to Daniel Guggenheim, head of the firm of M. Guggenheim & Sons, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Schiff is on his vacation, and the box did not reach him, but was opened by an office boy. Inside the box was a cylinder made of emery paper, covered with a small piece of paper on which were stock quotations. At the upper end of the cylinder was a small piece of cotton formed like a cork, and inside the tube a quantity of gun powder. On each side of the cylinder were several matches with their heads against the emery paper, the sender of the package believing the friction would cause the matches to ignite and cause the gun powder to flash up.

The package received at Guggenheim & Sons' lay undisturbed on the office table for some time, when an astute employe placed it in the wash basin before opening it. There was an explosion a few minutes later, and when the box was opened it was found to contain a liquid supposed to be a high explosive.

At the offices of both firms no explanation for the sending of the infernal machines was given, except that it was thought to be the work of some crank.

PIRATES STUNG FOR ANOTHER; RIOT AFTER GAME

O'Neil Hurt Making Last Out, and Crowd Howls For Vengeance.

YELLS FRUITLESS.

Excitement Quelled Before Even the Umpire Gets Hit—A Fast, Exciting and Close Game.

Splitting even in a double-header bill, consisting of one ball game and a frenzied fuss, the Daab Commuter Combination put in a busy and profitable afternoon at Recreation Park Saturday. They won the game by a score of 2 to 1, and lost the fuss by one broken head.

The broken head, which adorns the manly form of the Hon. J. O'Neil, was not really a part of the fuss, but it started the tumultuous proceedings and must be figured in with them because no other casualty was discernible when the sounds of strife died away. As the dauntless J. Hopper Wahl, in a mad but futile attempt to pull off his end of a squeeze play, administered the bump, the honors of war must go to the Pirates. As the honors of war do not figure in the pennant chase, we have no hesitancy in according them to the Pirates.

It was a fine afternoon's sport for the assembled beauty and chivalry. Even without the piquant social feature that aroused the Westfield police force to repeated and excited charges on a surging populace, the exhibit was a real lively one for a small town. It took ten agitating innings to wind up the game, and the going was snappy and scrappy all the way. The Pirates were so set on getting the game that grim determination dripped from their spikes and oozed through their bonnets. They grew so peevish under the strain that they assailed the probity and good sense of their own ump, which is a sign of much agitation in the Westfield soul.

Both flingers were in impressive form, and engaged in one of those deadly duels in which the flingers have a fine time, the batsmen suffer much vexation, and the populace hovers on the verge of nervous prostration. Willie had nothing on the vivacious Red, and if it hadn't been for a fool attempt at a squeeze play in the tenth, which ended the game, the Commuters might not be so far in the lead for the champ rag. Willie allowed five hits and the glory-topped twirler was only stung for one more. Each of them gave away four bases. Willie whiffed five and Red four.

Things came our way because the Commuters coupled bunching with hitting. This simple expedient for making sparse swats pay dividends totally escaped the enemy. There was considerable difference in the playing of the cohorts, and we are not proud of the difference. Four punky errors marked the gambols of the Commuters, and the hated rivals proudly hustled through with but one. But only one of our miscues figured in the run getting, and between the yellow streaks our heroes blazed brightly, like real little baseball stars. Two of those crooked plays were painful for the Plainfield beauty and chivalry to behold. They were overthrows to first from the traditionally trusty wings of the Hon. P. Hooligan Kiernan and Dr. Mike Leonard. Happy's chuck opened the way for the Pirates' registry, and it was real poetic justice when he found it was up to him to bat in the winning run in the extra session. Happy, being a conscientious youth, took up the burden and batted it in with the simplicity of true genius. Besides this interesting affair, Happy participated in some lively footwork and handy throwing, so on the whole we will not clamor for his release.

Dan Connolly made one of the other bad things, after struggling with neuralgia and a dull ache in his upper works for an inning and a half. Dan didn't feel like playing, and when he dropped a hoist from Barry he waved the distress signal to Magnate Daab. Tuck Turner went in. Tuck is a great filler of unexpected holes.

The Pirates turned off some brilliant fielding stunts, but they were not resourceful on the alleys. In the first inning G. Malken, the popular idol, pulled off the catch of the game, after a thrilling run under a long lift from Micky Leonard. Cheers, in which the chivalrous enemy joined, greeted Georgie, and for quite three minutes the Plainfield chivalry forgot to wish he would choke himself to death. In the seventh inning when we had a fighting chance to

CHILDREN SING AT IRVING HAND'S FUNERAL

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE HELD ON PORCH OF PARENTS' HOME.

Following funeral services that were doubly impressive, the body of Irving Hand, the popular Netherwood young man who died suddenly from malignant diphtheria, was buried in Hillside cemetery, Saturday afternoon. At the same time the form of his brother, David, who met an accidental death at Dunellen five years ago, was taken from its resting place in the Scotch Plains cemetery and placed in an adjoining grave.

A brief service was first held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Irving Hand.

Mrs. David Hand, of Berkeley avenue, the pastor and friends standing upon the porch. It was in charge of Rev. T. Moore-Smith, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which Irving had always been a member, who offered prayer and made a few remarks. One hundred children from Miss Curry's Fresh Air Camp, in which the young man was greatly interested from the time of its establishment, sang "There'll Be No Dark Valley When Jesus Comes" and "Nearer My God to Thee." It was with difficulty that the little tots concluded the last selection because of emotion. Twenty-five mothers from the camp were also present and were visibly affected.

At the grave Pastor Smith again had charge and he spoke further upon the Christian character of the young man and the fact that he was fully prepared to go when the time came. The choir of the Scotch Plains Baptist church sang "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," "Shall We Meet Beyond the River" and "Sweet Peace the Gift of God's Love." The first of these hymns and the Scripture quotation used by the pastor were the same as those at David's funeral. The pall bearers who lowered both caskets were John Doud, Grover Schuck, Percy Gaddis, Joseph Robinson, Fred Dixon and Harry Brokaw.

The floral tributes were exceptionally profuse and numbered many large set pieces from the Scotch Plains church, the Fresh Air Camp and the employes of the brickyard owned by the young man and his brother.

APPLIES FOR DIVORCE.

Dunellen Man Charged by Wife with Desertion.

Mrs. Ann T. Moffett, whose maiden name was Voorhees, of Fairfield, Woodbridge township, Middlesex county, has filed a petition in the Court of Chancery for an absolute divorce from her husband, Wilbur H. Moffett, on the ground of desertion.

The petition says the pair were married April 9, 1884, at Fairfield, by the Rev. James G. Mason, of Metuchen. They lived together on the farm of the petitioner's father for four years. In April, 1888, it is claimed Moffett deserted his wife and went to live with his relatives near Dunellen, where the wife says she believes he now is.

She charges that during the two years last past her husband has wilfully deserted her and neglected to provide for her support. The couple have had three children, two of whom are living, John William Moffett, aged 17, and Ernest Cutter Moffett, aged 16. Besides the divorce Mrs. Moffett asks that her husband be compelled to support her.

William Selvage a Suicide.

William C. Selvage, fifty years of age, father of William H. Selvage, who is employed in the contracting department of the local office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, committed suicide at his home in Morristown on Friday. He was one of the best known fire insurance men in the United States. He swallowed some kind of poison, which the coroner has not yet been able to determine.

Charles A. Dixon, of West Fifth street, is at Hainesburg, Sussex county, for the benefit of his health.

BERDINE WAXES ANGRY

Will Have Justice Fort Investigate Failure to Serve Auto Warrants.

PIERCE CALLED DOWN

New Market Constable Is Informed By His Superior That He "Winked at the Whole Matter."

Prosecutor Berdine, of Middlesex county, had Constable Pierce and Justice Von Minden at his office in New Brunswick Saturday morning, and asked them to make an explanation as to the failure to serve the warrants upon Oscar Harrison and William Stanbery in the Dunellen auto accident case. The prosecutor will bring the matter to the attention of Justice Fort, who will make an investigation. The prosecutor so told the justice and constable after hearing their stories.

Constable Robert Pierce was the first one concerned who arrived at the office of the prosecutor. He was asked to explain his conduct in the matter, and said he delivered up the warrants a week ago Saturday when Justice Von Minden and the three lawyers for the parties against whom the warrants were issued came to his house in an automobile and demanded them.

The constable said the lawyers told him the parties who had made the complaints had decided to withdraw them. Constable Pierce also said the justice asked for the return of the warrants. He had never had a case like that before and supposed it was all right to give them up under the circumstances. Prosecutor Berdine told the constable he had been in the business long enough to know what was the proper thing to do and that the complaint could not be withdrawn after once issued.

"It has been done before, and often," said the constable.

"Well, it should not have been done," replied the prosecutor. "You just winked at the whole matter apparently and you can't do that with this office while I am prosecutor."

The constable intimated that the arrangement to have the warrants not served was fixed up by the lawyers and justice and Detective Mulvey at dinner in Taylor's Hotel at Dunellen last Monday during the noon recess at the trial of the civil suit of Harrison against Stanbery for damages.

Soon after the constable left the office Justice Von Minden arrived, and his side of the story was obtained. He said he did not make any request from Constable Pierce for the warrants and that he only issued one of them, the other having been issued by Justice Warden. He declared that he warned the officer at the time he went to his home with the lawyers that he would have nothing to do with the matter and that the prosecutor would make no agreement to hold up the warrants until after the civil suit.

The warrant was returned by Constable Pierce later to him, the constable stating that he could not serve it, as the man was out of the State. A similar return is said to have been made as to the warrant issued by Justice Warden against Stanbery.

Justice Von Minden said that later on Wednesday the constable returned and got the warrant and had it served. The constable had at that time received a letter from the prosecutor asking him what he was about.

The commitments for the two men arrived at the New Brunswick jail Saturday morning, endorsed on the back by Judge Strong with the statement that bail had been taken. Sheriff Carman endorsed each commitment with the statement that they had not been received until August 19, and that the prisoners were never brought to jail.

Election Officers Appointed.

The Somerset County Board of Elections named the following officers today for the borough and township of North Plainfield: Borough—First district, Charles G. Wood and Benjamin Schuck, Democrats; John H. Ross and David C. Allen, Republicans; Second, Lambert B. Bodine and Levi C. Kline, Democrats; Walter Walker and Jacob M. Higgins, Republicans. Township—Alfred Johnson and Francis Bartels, Democrats; Herbert Cleaves and John Mooney, Republicans.

Noisy Drunk Fined.

Albert Saunders, colored, of 307 Arlington avenue, raised a fuss in his neighborhood Saturday night, to work off the energy created by a superabundance of bad whiskey. He made threats to kill and dared everybody to come forward and be carved up. Patrolman Charles Flynn heard of Albert's challenge and presented himself as a candidate. Albert welched, and cooled off his ardor in the coop. He had to pay $10 for his fun in the city court this morning.

TEN-YEAR-OLD GOES TRAVELLING BY FREIGHT

ARTHUR MARTIN VISITS GRANDMOTHER IN PENNSYLVANIA—MEETS RUNAWAYS.

Ten-year-old Arthur Martin, son of J. C. Martin, of Duer street, felt a longing to see his grandmother, who lives in Bangor, Pa., Friday morning. Lacking fare on a regular train, Arthur clambered aboard a freight and made the trip. He reached his grandmother's home unharmed Friday night at 9 o'clock. He traveled from Easton by trolley, after a meeting with two Plainfield boys who had been tramping for a week and from whom he got money enough for carfare.

Arthur hadn't bothered to tell his parents of his proposed trip, and they were worried almost sick before a telegram from Bangor apprised them of his arrival there. Arthur has frequently made the trip alone by train, but this is the first time he has tried it without telling of his plans.

In a letter to his father mailed at the time the telegram was sent, Arthur told of meeting Eddie Seader, thirteen years old, son of Peter Seader, and Arthur Van Nest, fourteen years old, son of Charles Van Nest, who disappeared from their home here a week ago. They told Arthur they were going to the hop fields in New York State, where hoboes from all over the country gather every year. They wanted Arthur to accompany them, but he refused. They advised him to make the trip from Easton to Bangor by trolley, and gave him the fare.

Mr. Martin sent word of the information in the letter to the Seader boy's father. The latter has been anxiously seeking traces of the lad ever since his disappearance a week ago. The Van Nest boy is an old traveler. He came home for a day during the past week, and slipped away again to rejoin Seader.

Young Seader reappeared in town this morning. His father heard he was hanging around the station and nabbed him. He turned him over to the police for the moral effect on runaways that lies in the cooler, and Eddie went into a cell for a time. He will be scolded by the judge this afternoon or tomorrow until he promises to be a good boy.

200 MEN RUSHING WORK ON NEW THEATRE

HAVE BEEN BUSY NIGHT AND DAY TO INSURE COMPLETION.

With a force of 200 men working day and night at the new Plainfield theatre, there is every assurance that this amusement place will be ready for the opening performance of "The County Chairman" on Thursday night. The scenery arrived this morning, and is all ready to be put in position, and the seats are also here. The gallery seats have been built, and as soon as the scaffolding is removed from the auditorium tonight, the work of placing the seats on the main floor will begin.

The upholstery work is rapidly being completed, and evidences of the great progress being made is seen on every hand. All day yesterday the work was pushed with all possible speed and the large force of workmen is doing its utmost to have the house in readiness for Thursday night.

Joseph Robinson, of West Third street, has been engaged as head usher, and his assistants will be chosen within a day or two. Unusual interest is being shown in the opening of the new amusement house, and the people of the city are much pleased over the idea that they will have the opportunity of seeing first class plays here once more.

A Quartette of Offenders.

For fighting and creating a general disturbance in the rear of the silk mills, on Chatham street, Edward King, George Woodland, Charles Packer and John Taylor were arrested at 12:30 this morning by Chief Marshal Weiss, upon complaint of residents of that vicinity. All the prisoners were released this morning, the first three upon depositing $10 bail each, and Taylor by putting up $20. They will be tried tonight before Recorder Doud.

Richard O'Neil Unimproved.

The condition of Richard O'Neil, who was taken to the hospital for medical treatment yesterday, was said to be about the same this morning.

—Fred Moore has resigned his position at Durando's cafe, Fort George, to become head bartender at the Hotel Iroquois.

A NEW $7,500 BRIDGE

MEETING TODAY.

County Engineers Instructed to Prepare Plans for the Structure Within the Coming Week.

A committee from the Union County Board of Freeholders met the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at the West End avenue bridge this morning, and on a joint ballot it was decided to build a new structure at that point, 70x66, iron beam, concrete roadbed and abutments at a cost not to exceed $7,500.

After the freeholders met, Director Logan, of the Somerset county board, was made chairman, and F. J. Hubbard secretary. It was on a motion offered by Freeholder W. A. Westphal, of this city, that it was voted to build a new bridge as stated. Only one Somerset county member voted in the negative. It was at first the wish of the Somerset county board to spend half of the amount appropriated for the structure, but the Union county board would not agree to this.

The new bridge is to have a fifty foot roadway with two eight foot sidewalks and it will be so constructed that if it is decided to widen the avenue from the bridge to Front street to one hundred feet, the sidewalks can be turned into the roadway and new walks built.

County Engineers Dougherty and F. J. Hubbard, of the two counties, were authorized to draw plans for the new bridge and submit them at a meeting to be held on Monday next for acceptance. Chairman Logan appointed the Union county bridge committee and five members of the Somerset county board as a joint committee to receive and accept the plans on Monday.

After the plans are accepted, another date will be fixed for receiving bids and the awarding of the contract. It is hoped to have the bridge completed before frost arrives.

The Somerset county members originally wanted a single span bridge while Union county held out for a double span, and the latter plan was adopted.

TROLLEY CAR TOSSES AUTO AND OCCUPANTS

CHAUFFEUR AND WOMAN NARROWLY ESCAPE INJURY.

While Mrs. E. O. Edgar and her two daughters, the Misses Edgar, of Westfield, accompanied by Newton Doeltra, a chauffeur, were automobiling at Westfield, yesterday afternoon, the machine collided with a trolley car near the Rahway Junction. The body of the auto was taken off the axles, but the occupants, aside from a severe shaking up, escaped uninjured. The auto was transformed into a heap of scrap iron and the fender of the car was wrecked.

The automobile party was riding through Central avenue, returning home from a trip, and just as it reached the junction a trolley suddenly appeared going east. Doeltra in trying to avoid a collision, headed his machine in the same direction of the trolley, but not quick enough. The car struck the auto in the middle, tossing the body off into a ditch and twisting the axles and wheels all out of shape.

The auto is owned by Mr. Lauter, of Connecticut, who is a member of the New York Yacht Club. He is now off on a cruise and his machine was in charge of the Edgars during his absence.

A Zealous Conductor.

The trolley that left this city for Westfield at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, carried some fifteen baseball enthusiasts. It has been customary for patrons to the games to ride to a point opposite the baseball grounds and then cross over one block without paying an additional five cents, the limit being only a few hundred feet to the west of this point. The conductor, who hails from this city, in his anxiousness to collect the extra five cents compelled the motorman to go the short distance at a snail's pace so that he could take it up. For all his trouble no extra fare was taken as the majority were through passengers who occupied the front seats who he mistook for baseball passengers. The fifteen were let off about thirty feet from where they intended to get off and the excited conductor has probably learned a lesson, or should by this time on the "block" system.

MUCH DEPENDS ON THE COMING ELECTION

"BOSSES DARK DOINGS"

Asserts That "Many a Deal Would Not Look Well If Exploited in Public Print"—Cites Some Recent "Doings."

Additional spice to the local political situation came today in the form of the following letter from Dr. A. W. Anderson, of East Second street, who was elected president of the First Ward Republican Club, organized last week:

Editor, The Daily Press:

Former Councilman Isaac S. Randolph, of the Fourth ward, in his recent letter to The Press, spoke truly when he said, "the bosses work in the dark." There are now, and have been for years, a good many "dark" doings in local politics. Many a "deal" would not look well if exploited in public print.

The men who make a business of politics in Plainfield, would not care to publish all that goes on behind closed doors when the "get-together club" holds a session, or when there is a "conference" at the City Clerk's office or in one of the shops.

Much more than the personnel of next year's Common Council depends on the approaching election. The local leaders, who have been "useful" to certain people elsewhere in Union county, can retain their power only by remaining in control of Plainfield so that they can deliver its vote where it is most needed. It is a case of "Give Lord, Give Devil" with them so long as they can hold the position in which they have been intrenching themselves for years.

It is of vastly more importance to them to retain their strength at Elizabeth than it is in Plainfield, although of course if they lose the latter, the former is gone also.

Elizabeth politicians keep more closely in touch with Plainfield politics than many of our citizens realize, and there have been many local occurrences during the last twelve months to make the people at the other end of the county wonder if the bosses are losing their grip.

One of these was the increase of the license fee to one thousand dollars, which the machine did not want, and fought as hard as it knew how to defeat. The reason was obvious—it weakened the cordial relations existing between Plainfield's bosses and the saloons, and it made it harder to get campaign contributions from the liquor dealers and their backers, the brewers.

The bosses, assisted by His Honor, the Mayor, and other machine men, fought as hard as they could to secure a license for the John Goff place on West Front street. Their reason was said to be financial as in the previous instance. The license was not granted, neither did the Council see fit to grant two or three other new licenses in which the bosses were very much interested.

Robert L. Lee, the present tax collector, was not the choice of the machine. He entered the Council as a machine man, and continued as such until he could no longer subscribe to the principles of the leaders. When that time came the bosses promptly threw him down. Against the strongest kind of "ring" opposition Mr. Lee was appointed by a majority vote of the Common Council to fill the unexpired term of Frank H. Smith, whose peculiar talents were recognized by electing him to a county office.

Charles C. Randolph was the successful candidate of the independent members of the Council to fill Mr. Lee's unexpired term. The leaders were highly indignant that anyone had been bold enough to propose a candidate in opposition to the man whom they had selected. This had nothing to do with the fact that these same bosses have offered Mr. Randolph the machine nomination from the Fourth ward at the approaching election, as this is a matter of comparatively recent occurrence.

To appreciate the fact that the machine has had no control whatever of this year's Common Council, it is only necessary to recall that the independent members of that body, and not the machine, elected the present president.

Of more recent date the Council was called upon to select a successor to the late Captain J. Frank Hubbard in the Board of Freeholders. Not only were the bosses not consulted, but the gentleman appointed, was, perhaps, the last man in Plainfield whom they would have chosen.

NO MORE RIDING ON THE FRONT PLATFORM

PUBLIC SERVICE MAKES THE RULE FOR PASSENGERS' SAFETY.

The Public Service Corporation has issued a general order that in future no passengers are to be carried on the front platform, even though the cars have front platform seats. There have been a number of accidents recently, at different points along the Public Service Corporation's lines, where it has been proved the motorman was talking to passengers instead of attending to business. Recently, also, there have been several accidents to passengers from electrical flames when fuses have not worked or the controller has got out of order. A woman was burned to death on a Brooklyn Rapid Transit car a few weeks ago.

The orders are positive, and no one is to be permitted to use the front platform. If the car is crowded, the passengers may stand up, or get off and wait for the next car. If a passenger attempts to ride on the front platform he is to be put off.

The first case of putting a man off a car occurred Thursday afternoon. Trolley car No. 256, bound for Boynton Beach, was crowded to such an extent that many passengers were compelled to stand, among them women and children. A man got on the front seat. The motorman told him that he would have to get off. The man refused, and the conductor was called. He took the passenger by the arm and forced him to vacate.

NEARING THE END OF MINISTERS' SESSIONS

SABBATARIANS WILL ADJOURN TONIGHT —TOPICS DISCUSSED SINCE SATURDAY

One more session will close the Pre-conference Convocation of the Seventh-day Baptist church. The penultimate session was held this morning and the gathering, after a week of papers and discussions on every phase of the minister's life, will end tonight. From here the clerics will go to Shiloh, Pa., where the annual conference of the church will open Wednesday.

The session this morning was given over to a discussion of "The Minister as Leader." It was led by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of the Sabbath Recorder. It was agreed that the minister is the leader of his people in every line of living—in morals, in ethics in the everyday life, and in all the ramifications of the church work.

After a day of religious observance the sessions were resumed Saturday night with a paper on "The Physical Health of the Minister," by Dr. A. S. Burdick, of Chicago, editor of the Medical Journal. He said the best exercise for ministers was walking. He scoffed at prepared foods, and said the day of patent medicines was over. Tea and coffee, he said, did not harm, if used in moderation.

The paper yesterday morning was on "The Minister as a Citizen," by Rev. L. A. Platts. The minister, he said, was a man first of all, and by virtue of his manhood he was a citizen. How much a minister should go into politics, he said, depended upon circumstances. Such questions as good roads, public morals and temperance were vitally interesting to him because they affected the welfare of his people, whom he must please and serve and protect.

The paper last night was on "Church Discipline," by Rev. O. U. Whitford, secretary of the Missionary Society. He said discipline meant training, and uplifting, and holding the members, rather than governing them.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Fresh air services in the interest of the Union Fresh Air Mission Association was held last night in the Methodist church. Mr. Fox, one of New York's most active workers in the great work being done for the poor of the East Side, was present and made the address. Mr. Fox explained the object of the association and the good work it was doing. During the service a number of the children from the association sang. A collection for the benefit of the work was taken.

Many friends from here attended the funeral services of Irving Hand, held Saturday afternoon at the grave side, Hillside cemetery. Rev. T. Moore-Smith, of the Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member, spoke feelingly of the loss the church had sustained by the death of one of its young and active members at the morning service at the church yesterday.

For twelve long innings the home team and Berkeley Heights battled Saturday afternoon on the Berkeley diamond to decide the last game in the series between the two teams. Finally Berkeley, by a timely bunching of hits in the twelfth, brought the winning run across the plate and won the game by the score of 5 to 4.

Saturday's game at Recreation Park between the Daabsters and Westfield team ended in a regular Westfield finish—a row. It is too bad Manager Denman, with as good a team as he has, is unable to tame them so that they are safe to be handled in public.

William Jamison, who has been enjoying two weeks at Asbury Park, has returned home.

The weekly B. Y. P. U. meeting was held last night in the parlors of the church.

FOUND THEIR HOUSE TURNED UPSIDE DOWN

UNPLEASANT ENDING TO A PLEASANT DAY AT THE SEASHORE.

Francis E. Bodin, of the firm of Francis E. Bodin & Co., of Park avenue, whose home is in Washington Valley, locked up his house on Thursday and went with his wife for a day at the seashore. They had a nice time at the shore, but the edge dropped from their enjoyment when they got home.

The house looked as if it had been swept by an eccentric cyclone. None of the furniture in any of the rooms was where it belonged. Chairs were piled on beds, tables were lying on their sides or upside down, cuspidors where on the mantels, and mantel ornaments reposed piquantly on the kitchen stove.

Nothing was missing and it was evidently the work of some practical joker. But how the jester got in was a mystery, for all the doors and windows were tightly locked, exactly as Mr. Bodin left them. He hasn't the slightest idea who the joker can be. The family has not been living in the Valley long and not very many people know them.

GOVERNOR STOKES MAY NAME JUDGES

HE WILL HAVE TO APPOINT SUCCESSOR TO CHANCELLOR MAGIE IN 1907.

Trenton Aug. 21—It has been discovered that the term of the present Chancellor, William J. Magie, will expire at midnight, January 13, 1908, and that, as this will be a day before the Legislature of that year assembles, the appointment of his successor will devolve upon Governor Stokes in 1907, nearly a year before the end of the Chancellor's term.

The Constitution provides that "no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his term," otherwise Governor Stokes could make the appointment the day the Legislature convenes in 1908. This probably escaped the attention of Governor Voorhees in making the appointment so early in the session of 1901. He was such a friend and admirer of Chancellor Magie, with whom he studied law, that he was anxious to pay him the marked compliment of so prompt an appointment. Before that the term of the Chancellor expired May 1.

It is understood that Chancellor Magie will not desire a reappointment in 1908. His successor will probably be Chief Judge Gummere, whose promotion will create a vacancy in the Supreme Court, to be filled by Governor Stokes, who will also have the naming of a chief judge in place of Mr. Gummere, and will be very likely to advance to that position one of the present Supreme Court judges, Judge Jonathan Dixon being marked by seniority and ability as in the logical line of promotion.

For the vacancy on the Supreme Bench there are many able lawyers in New Jersey who would look well in that seat, and who are willing to fill it.

DON'T DREAM.

Wake up, girls!

You have no time to spend in idle day dreams.

Get the best out of every moment you live.

At the end of each day you should be able to say to yourself: "I have learned something today, my time has not been wasted."

There is no sense in saying that no good opportunities come your way.

They come, but you don't take advantage of them.

While you are dreaming of the great things you will do, someone else gets ahead of you and does them.

Be on the alert and don't be afraid to try things.

What if you do fail a few times, you will be all the better for trying.

No one yet was ever hurt by earnest endeavor, always providing that the endeavor was for what the person considered to be right.

Day dreams are very pleasant luxuries, but they don't travel hand in hand with success.

Dreaming means sitting with folded hands and waiting.

Success will never come to you unless you go to it.

You must keep your eyes open and take advantage of even the smallest opportunities.

It is wonderful how much one can learn by cultivating the habit of observation.

As you walk in the street or ride in the car you can pick up a surprising amount of information.

Our fellow beings are intensely interesting and they are constantly teaching us something or other.

Do not let your knowledge stagnate. Put it to some practical use.

If you allow it to grow rusty it will be of no use to you or to anyone else.

Remember you have only one life to live on this earth, so make the best of it.

Don't mourn the opportunity you lost yesterday. Put all your heart into the one that may come to you today.

And bear in mind that to do a small thing well is better than to do a large thing badly.

Don't sneer at the small opportunities, they may lead on to great ones.

If you want to get on well, dear girls, here is a little bit of advice I would offer you:

Keep your eyes open, don't whine and don't neglect the everyday opportunities.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

POPE LEO'S POEM ON DEATH.

In 1897 Pope Leo felt the shadow of death beginning to fall upon him, and, in splendid defiance of its power, wrote the following lines, which are considered among his strongest works:

DEATH.

The Westering sun draws near his cloudy bed,
Leo, and gradual darkness veils thy head:

The sluggish life blood in thy withered veins
More slowly runs its course—what then remains?

Lo! Death is brandishing his fatal dart,
And the grave yearns to shroud thy mortal part:

But from its prison freed, the soul expands
Exulting pinions to the enfranchised lands.

My weary race is run—I touch the goal;
Hear, Lord, the feeble pantings of my soul;

If it be worthy, Lord, they pitying breast
Welcome it unto everlasting rest!

May I behold thee, Queen of earth and sky
Whose love enchained the demons lurking nigh

The path of heaven; and freely shall I own
'Twas thy sweet care that gained my blissful crown!

RIOT AFTER BASEBALL GAME

score run* number two, Joe Wahl pulled off a double play unassisted that retired the side. Deegan, after forcing Jack O'Neil, lay off first for a chance to go down on a welt by Wally Cosgrave, who was lunging fiercely at the leather. Wally cracked a liner for the hole between first and second, and things looked thrilling for us for a half a second. Then the busy paw of Mr. Wahl, moving rapidly in front of his flying form, stuck itself to the globule, and our hopes were thumped stiff.

We started to win in the bright, rosy beginning of things. Kiernan, first up in the opening round, worried Red into chucking four wide ones. He stole second, and Wally Cosgrave, continuing his great work of rehabilitation, sacrificed him along with artistic neatness. Then Kid Brogan, just to prove to Red that he couldn't be buffaloed like the flinger says he can, smashed one at Micky Flynn so hot that the shortstop gent had a tough time getting the Kid at first, without trying to head off Happy at the gutta percha. Connolly stung one to left and P. Cincinnatus Cregan punched one rightward, but Mallen's sensational haul of Mike Leonard's fly, hereinbefore sung, shut off the two threatening runs.

In their half of the stanza the Pirates came near tieing up the tallies with two down. McCormack, who had his eye with him and batted 1,000 with a walk and three hits, drew a life from Willie. Brogan muddled Wahl's sharp rap, and Harry reached second. Mallen cracked the round thing for a long single to right, and Harry started for home. Connolly forgot his buzzing wheels long enough to whip the globule to O'Neil, in time to kill Harry an inch and a half from the rubber.

The Pirates registered in the fifth. Cotter turned off the only extra base rap of the game and went to third on Waller's whack to Brogan. Bertwhistle rapped an easy one to Pete Kiernan, and Pete felt so sure of his prey that he heaved the leather into the uncovered beyond back of first base, and Paddy paddled in.

The winning run was scored by Dave Driscoll on a series of fine, honest plays, untainted by errors or gifts. Dave lammed one to left and stole second. Jack O'Neil pasted the ball for a long fly into the same place, and Dave scudded down the alley for the next stop ahead of the throw-in. Pete Kiernan's workmanlike biff to left sent Captain Dave to Joyville.

When the moribund Pirates came up for their try they were on edge, and quivering for a chance to go on living. By that time the beauty and chivalry were likewise some to the nervous, so that it can be readily discerned by the intelligent reader that things were just right for the whoop-up that rounded off the struggle. Waller and Bertwhistle, the first two up, were easy outs, but Flynn worked Deegan for a walk. Westfield heaved a gasp, and the populace sat with bulging eyes. McCormack rapped his third welt, to right, and the beauty and chivalry nearly died when Micky hit third. Joe Wahl faced Willie and was set for a hit when Mickey let out and raced down the line. Nobody signalled him, and why he tried to make a squeeze play with two down baseball dope does not explain, but he came, and it was up to somebody to do something. O'Neil threw a hurry-up signal to Willie, and the ball whipped down. Jack reached for it as close as he could get and Joe, being where he was for a purpose, made a swipe at the globule. He didn't hit the ball, but Jack's head and the bat came together. The head was punctured, but Jack clutched the ball and went at the flying Mickey. Mickey was close, but Jack got him, and the game ended. But the second act of the great double-header was about to begin.

When Jack straightened up he was thoughtfully feeling the new airhole in his konk, and red gore streaked his honest countenance. He turned a reproachful eye on Joe, and immediately everybody from Plainfield decided that Joe was an assassin and had tried to divide Jack's noble head into seventeen parts. Dave Driscoll jumped in from his bag and closed with Joe. Then every bleacher emptied itself on the diamond. There was a fierce looking bunch squirming around the field for a time, and frenzied yells for rope and telegraph poles rippled on the agitated air. But Chief O'Neil and a nice young man who helps him make up the Westfield police force, escorted Joe off the field and shooed the crowd away. And the crowd went without even hitting the ump.

Joe says he never had the slightest idea that Jack's head was going to get in the way of his stick, and put the whole blame on the punctured athlete. He says Jack grabbed a good deal more space out of his box than the rules entitled him to, and laid himself right in line for the crack. Joe actually was aggrieved because he didn't get his base for being interefered with. As a matter of cold and compressed fact, it is not to be suspected for a minute that Joe aimed at Jack's top piece. Joe belongs to the Westfield team, and of course he is a real wicked athlete, but there are probably limits to his devilishness. He may be so depraved as to want his team to win, or even cut a base every chance he gets, but it is not likely that he would deliberately hit a frail human head with a guaranteed hickory bat just to tie a score.

The players didn't carry much of the excitement into their dressing room. The two teams shed their war clothes together in peace, and before departing for the gay whirl of the Bronx, Jack cast an almost forgiving eye on Joseph, the suspected assassin.

It was the general opinion that Henning roasted both Deegan and Waller on balls and strikes.

Deegan was in the best of condition. Only five hits off his delivery, and McCormick got three of these.

Jack O'Neill is a gentleman on or off the ball field and he proved this Saturday after the game by his actions.

Westfield will be on Crescent Oval Saturday, when the Daubsters will try to add another victory to their string.

Driscoll materially helped to win the game with a base hit and his clever base running, assisted by Kiernan's timely single.

During the mixup following the game Mallen took refuge beneath the grandstand, where he remained until the crowd got away.

Leonard, although making an error on a desperate chance, continued his brilliant work at third, making some wonderful stops and throws.

It was Westfield's umpire that gave the last decision and the home rooters could not charge Plainfield with any unfairness, as they did before.

There is no doubt but that certain Westfield players resort to questionable tactics to win a game. The performance of Mallen and Cotter in trying to rattle Deegan by throwing their gloves in the air and waving bats was condemned by fair-minded fans.

Plainfield, N. J., August 21, 1905.

The controversy over the division of the Long blood money leads us to ask what became of the rewards offered for the capture of the horse thief apprehended in this city by Patrolman Vanderweg? They amounted to quite a sum and are said to have been paid over, but to whom?

Meaning what you say and saying what you mean are two essentials in successful advertising. If you don't mean what you say the public soon detects the insincerity. If you don't say what you mean you are also subject to public criticism. The sign "Boots blacked inside," to be seen in front of a West Philadelphia shop, is well meant; but it stirs the mockery of men who insists that what they want is to have their boots polished on the outside.—Philadelphia Record.

THE WEEK AT THE HOME.

Elizabeth People in Charge of Sunday Service.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will have charge of services at the Netherwood Home tonight. A song service will take the place of a mothers' meeting tomorrow night. The Epworth League of the First Methodist church of Rahway will have a delegation present on Wednesday night.

The weekly prayer service on Thursday night will be in charge of George V. Taylor and A. C. Broughton, of the Greene Avenue Baptist church of Brooklyn. A delegation of the Young People's Society of the Crescent Avenue church will be present Friday evening. The service on Sunday is planned to be a big one. Rev. William B. Hamilton and a male quartette from the St. James M. E. church of Elizabeth will have charge on the Sabbath afternoon.

AT MISS CURRY'S CAMP.

Large Gathering Attended the Usual Service Yesterday.

D. M. Torrey presided at the services at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home yesterday afternoon, and one of the largest audiences of the season was present. Early in the afternoon a few drops of rain fell, but not enough to change the meeting place.

The principal speaker of the day was Rev. Dr. John R. Wright, pastor of the Methodist church in Westfield. His general subject was "God's Respect for the Best Things of His Creation." Dr. Wright's talk appealed especially to the children. Rev. George E. Francis also spoke briefly.

During the services several solos were rendered by Mrs. William Sebring. L. D. H. Gilmore, of the Scotch Plains Methodist church, who assisted last Sunday, led the singing again yesterday.

CIDER UNDID HIM.

Englishman Finds North Plainfield Stuff a Regular Old Killer.

John Murdock, a soft-spoken Englishman, was arraigned in the city court this morning for parading a Sunday jag around town. He told Judge Runyon that he got his load in North Plainfield joints.

"I drank nothing but cider," he said. "I never come across such blooming cider in my life before. It must be a regular old killer. It jolly well did for me."

"The next time you make the rounds of the North Plainfield places," advised the Judge, "drink milk."

Murdock agreed to go on a milk diet, and escaped with a suspended sentence.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR ANNUAL OUTING

WILL TAKE PLACE WEDNESDAY AND 1,000 WILL GO.

The eighth annual outing of the Elizabeth Democratic city committee will be held Wednesday, and will be attended by members of the party from the entire county. The destination will be Duer's Grove, Whitestone, Long Island, and the trip will be made on the iron steamboat Cygnus. It is expected that there will be between 800 and 1,000 on the trip. All arrangements have been made by the committee.

The boat leaves the Chancellor dock, Elizabeth, at 9 o'clock, an hour earlier than usual, because of the extra long trip which will be made. A conference will be held on board the boat, when a slate for the Democratic party of Union county will be made up.

The party will arrive at the grove at 2 o'clock. A band of twenty-five pieces, headed and under the direction of Professor James, will provide the music on the trip. The company will proceed at once to the baseball bleachers, where Herbert A. Pierson will take a photograph of the entire party. The band will then march to the dining room, where dinner will be served. Afterwards there will be athletic games. There will be a fat man's race. This is a special feature of the trip arranged by H. F. Boyle, who has charge of the athletic events of the day. These will include the 100-yard dash, the obstacle race, the sack race, the fat man's race for the championship medal for agility, a baseball game and a tug-of-war match. The teams which will play baseball are the Pick-Me-Ups and the Throw-Me-Downs.

The steamer will sail down the narrows after the trip up the Long Island Sound, returning, and will sail out towards Coney Island, so as to give the politicians a glimpse of Coney Island in its far famous electric display.

Handsome badges will be awarded to all who go, which will be well worth saving as souvenirs. There will be lots of refreshments on board, and all the rest will come to him free of charge.

Among the notables on board will be Hon. William B. Gourley, State Democratic chairman; Hon. James A. Hammill, of Jersey City; Hon. James E. Martine, of Plainfield; Hon. Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield; Col. Edward Stevens, of Castle Hook, Hoboken; Hon. Leon Abbott, Hon. John T. Dunn, Hon. P. J. Ryan, Hon. DeWitt C. Flanagan, and Mayor Berry, of Elizabeth, has been invited to attend.

Raritan Italians Celebrate.

A large number of people from Somerville, Bound Brook, Plainfield and New Brunswick were in Raritan Saturday night to witness the fireworks set off by the Italians of that place in celebration of the festival of San Rocco. About $800 worth of pieces were displayed and it was considered very fine by all who attended. A brass band from Brooklyn furnished music.

FEW CONTESTANTS ON THE GOLF LINKS

VACATION DAYS SERVE TO KEEP ATTENDANCES SMALL.

It was very quiet in local golfing circles on Saturday, the only play being for the golf committee cup at the Plainfield Country Club. There are so many members away from the city on their vacations that the contestants in the weekly competition are naturally limited. However, there was a sufficient number to make the play interesting, and there was a close race for the points.

E. A. Cruikshank, with a net score of 79, won the first three points, while C. W. Abbott, with an 80, secured two points. The one remaining point went to Henry D. Hibbard, who returned a score of 81.

E. B. Shoemaker still leads in the competition, with 13 points, while C. B. Morgan is second with 9 5-6. By winning one point on Saturday, H. D. Hibbard takes third position, with 8 1-2 points, and E. A. Cruikshank takes a big jump, with his three points, having a total of 5 5-6. The competition is a close and exciting one, owing to the new system of handicapping, and from present indications the winner will not be definitely known until nearly the close of the season. Last year this was the reverse, as the player in first position had such a substantial lead that he could not be overtaken.

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers increased her lead last week for the Gaston cup by adding three points to her total of 26 1-2. She now has 29 1-2. Her nearest competitor is Miss Daisy Elsberg, who has 14 points.

There was no regular play at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, and in consequence no scores were returned for the president's and Park Golf Club trophies. This makes the third week that the play has gone by default, which is due to the fact that a majority of the members are out of town.

MUST NOT THROW STONES.

Police After Young Hoodlums, One of Whom Is Fined $5.

Irving Mann, sixteen years old, was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Vanderweg for throwing stones at Thomas Bebout, another boy, while the latter was riding a wheel through Plainfield avenue. The Plainfield avenue boys have been making a practice of throwing stones at carriages and bicycle riders lately, and the police have determined to break it up.

Mann is said to be one of the worst offenders, and he was fined $5 or twenty days in jail. The fine was paid. The same dose will be given to all the other boys caught throwing stones.

Couldn't Understand Him.

Patrolman Vanderweg found a Hungarian parlayzed with Tokay or some other exciting drink last night, and locked him up. When the prisoner was arraigned this morning nobody could understand him. He talked a string of consonants that sounded like a bunch of firecrackers, but none of the court officials could make head or tail of his oration. A call for interpreters proving vain, Judge Runyon suspended sentence by pointing to the door. The Hun understood, and hustled away.

Funeral of Westman Schaefer.

The funeral of John Augustus Westman Schaefer, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Schaefer, was held from the parents' home on East Sixth street Friday afternoon. It was conducted by Father Westman, of Cranford, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends from this city and High Bridge. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Samuel P. Case Engaged.

The friends of Samuel P. Case, of Plainfield avenue, will be interested to learn of his engagement to Miss Martha Thornton Dunham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Dunham, of Far Hills, Somerset county. Miss Dunham is a talented young woman who has made many friends during her visits at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Case, of Duer street.

Dr. Bryant at First M. E.

Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryant, of this city, occupied the pulpit at the First M. E. church yesterday morning, preaching an interesting discourse. During the service Miss Agnes Bailey, a member of the choir, sang a solo. The Epworth League had charge of the evening meeting, which takes the place of the regular preaching service.

A Parish Picnic.

A large party of young people from the city and borough will attend the St. Mary parish picnic at Papermill hill, near the papermills, just back of Scotch Plains, tomorrow afternoon and evening. It will be given under the auspices of St. Mary's parish, Stony Hill.

Boroughite Arrested.

William Bellis, of Vine street, was arrested Saturday night for disorderly conduct in the borough. He was bailed out by depositing $15, and will be given a hearing before Recorder Doud tonight.

Edward H. Weaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Weaver, of South avenue, is slowly recovering from an illness of two weeks with dysentery.

DO YOU?

A professor in Chicago University has asked his students the following questions in examination:

Can you see as much beauty in washing dishes and hoeing corn as in playing golf and the piano?

Do you know the value of time and money?

Are you good friends with yourself?

Do you see anything in life besides dollars and cents?

Can you see sunshine in a mud puddle?

Can you see beyond the stars?

Do you feel an exultation in your pneumogastic nerve
When a yellow automobile comes right at you 'round the curve?

Can you read an evening paper when you're hanging to a strap?
Do you ever drop your h's? Did you ever loop the gap?

Can you look a sainted maiden in her eyes so blue and bright
And declare in mournful accents, "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight?"

Would you steal a silk umbrella from a cripple in the rain?
Have you ever lived in Jersey? Have you ever lived in vain?

Do you want to start a mission with the money that you make?
Do you feel at home at Sherry's when you order Hamburg steak?

Do you love your neighbor's chickens when the harvest moon is right?
Do you like to hear a turnip as it whistles through the night?

And, lastly, would you be surpised at anything you hear
In Chicago University, where things are often queer?
—Wallace Irwin, in New York Globe.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Ocean's Supply of Fish.

The fish is a migratory animal and his home covers three-quarters of the globe. Some varieties may be absent or scarce one season and abundant the next. They eat each other more extensively than man can catch them. While it is about time that old ocean was fully stocked it will take quite a long time to clean out so large a pasture. Some varieties may disappear and other develop to succeed them. Man is the most destructive and voracious animal that threatens the fish supply.—Atlantic City Union.

No Credit to the Sex.

Those women who waved handkerchiefs and kissed the tips of their fingers to convicts in cells at Trenton are no credit to their sex. The building of an addition to the prison necessitated the removal of a wall, thus exposing to view windows of the cells, in each of which was a prisoner. So great became the crowd of female gazers and so marked their flirtations with the convicts that the prison guard had to be called out to disperse them.—Hoboken Observer.

Can Do Without a Leader.

If the Republican party of New Jersey acquits itself as it ought to, and by fidelity to the best interests of the State and honest zeal in its service commends itself to the confidence and support of the common people, it won't need any leader, and, in fact, the farther it keeps away from the domination of "Bossism," the better for it. What the party needs for a leader is high principle, and not a man, no matter how exalted his political station.—Paterson Press.

Thinks He Would Fill Bill.

The New York Tribune is concerned beyond measure as to the condition of the Republican party in New Jersey, and the pessimistic Republican, who told its correspondent that "unless the party gets a leader pretty soon, it will surely meet with disaster," must feel lonesome. However, if there is a crying need for a leader, the Tribune has suggested one who would fill the bill, when it names Senator Kean.—Elizabeth Journal.

Advices That Conflict.

Information concerning the Morris canal that drifts down from the north end of the State, and especially from Newark, is varied and of a character to set a man thinking. The Newark newspapers refer to the canal as an open sewer. A few days ago we were told that a convert to the Baptist church was baptised in the canal. Our Baptist brethren are sticklers for pure water when it comes to immersion. They are not apt to baptise a convert in an "open sewer."—Trenton State Gazette.

County Politics.

Although he declares that he will make no fight for the nomination, friends of Ernest Ackerman, of Plainfield, are industriously at work advocating him as a candidate for State Senator. The movement started in Elizabeth and in various other sections it has gained much headway. Plainfield is still looked upon by county leaders as a doubtful quantity, although the administration people have come out for William N. Runyon. It has been stated that Mr. Ackerman will not accept a nomination without the support of his own town and his friends count upon obtaining it before the convention date. —Rahway Advocate.

Chancellor Magie.

Chancellor Magie has begun his six weeks' vacation in Maine, where he fishes and sails a boat and otherwise shakes off the cares of office. The Chancellor is now 73 years old, but vigorous and as interested in his profession as ever. He has had a very peaceful life. He was valedictorian of his class at Princeton in 1855, studied law and had a good practice at once in Elizabeth, where his family had lived for years; was appointed Prosecutor, then elected to the State Senate, and in 1880 made a Supreme Court Justice. He has been Chief Justice and, for the last four years, Chancellor, and each place came to him without any special effort on his own part. He has ample means and honorable office, and, altogether, has escaped most of the troubles of life.—Paterson News.

Not Silly, But Good Sense.

The Somerset Messenger says: "This is the silly political season of the year" and the only reason assigned for this statement is that "the Republican press of the State is attempting to convince its readers that New Jersey is safely Republican." We cannot see anything silly about this. It would certainly be silly for anyone to attempt to prove that the State was Democratic. The Messenger says itself that "the Democrats cannot logically deny the soft impeachment that for the last 15 years the State has been in control of the Republicans." There is nothing silly then in telling the facts as they exist. New Jersey is Republican because we get a better government through that party. The present financial system was not thought of by the Democrats, but all departments are now conducted on strict business principles. The State government has been improved and built up in many ways and while the yearly expenditures may be somewhat more than a decade ago when the Democrats were in power the population has increased over 30 per cent. and the comforts and conditions are vastly superior. No one objects to justifiable expense in the interests of good government.

The voting system has been so much improved that the old habit of stuffing ballot boxes is no longer possible. Voting machines cost the State about $50,000 a year but they help to make a pure ballot. We spend $250,000 a year on stone roads which add value to the farmers' land and give him easy access to the markets. We are paying to the counties for the support and care of the insane $100,000 more than ten years ago, and a special officer has been appointed to look after all charitable and penal institutions. We are spending three times as much as we did ten years ago for charitable purposes. We are spending for educational purposes three times as much besides giving a million a year to save the people from school tax.

There are many reasons why New Jersey is Republican, and many reasons for the conclusion that she will remain so. It may seem silly to the Messenger, but the people do not think so.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

Municipal Ownership Abandoned.

The city of Elizabeth has, through the action of its City Council, practically abandoned the idea of the municipal ownership of its water supply for at least five or six years to come. Several months ago the question was raised in the Board of Trade and was discussed with much vigor, not a few of the leading business men and taxpayers taking positive ground in favor of the city either negotiating with United States Senator John Kean, who controls the Elizabethtown Water Company, for the purchase of the plant, or beginning condemnation proceedings to secure the entire supply. But Elizabeth could not buy and was not in position to condemn, and this was known to everybody familiar with its financial condition for the past thirty years. The cloud of its former financial misfortunes hangs over it still, retards its progress and blocks the large enterprises which its own welfare demands. The city debt is still over $30,000,000, the tax rate is still above $2.90, and to buy or take over a water plant capable of supplying more than 60,000 people would undoubtedly necessitate the doubling of the city debt and of the fixed charges. How this could be done with the Hilliary maximum tax law about to become operative was the problem which the City Council could not see its way to solve. But the agitation over this question has not been without good results. Senator Kean's water company has conceded better terms to the city and to private consumers. The rates to houses are to be reduced and a discount is also to be allowed for the prompt payment of bills. The company reduces the yearly rent of fire hydrants from $20 to $15, and will supply gratis the water necessary to sprinkle the streets through which the trolleys run. A new contract will be made between the city and the water company, and the agitation, though fruitless of its avowed purpose, will prove of no small advantage to both the city and the citizens. Under the circumstances nothing more could reasonably have been expected, but had the city been free from the burdensome legacy of the old wooden pavement debt, how easily could Elizabeth have raised anywhere from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000, or more if necessary, and become the owner of its own water supply; while at less rates than are now paid for water it could meet all expenses, pay its interest charges and provide a sinking fund for the retirement of the necessary bonds.—Newark News.

NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FOR THE COOK.

A Summer Drink.—Put into a basin two pounds of loaf sugar, pour on to it enough boiling water to cover it, stir in one ounce of tartaric acid, and enough essence of lemon to taste. Set it aside until quite cold. Put into bottles and cork well. Take one wineglassful of the beverage to a tumbler of water. Add a pinch of carbonate of soda to each tumbler. This is a very nice, refreshing drink.

Orange and Rhubarb Marmalade. —To every pound of rhubarb allow three or four Seville oranges and one pound and a half of loaf sugar. Peel the oranges thinly and cut them into stripes as for marmalade; take off the white pith, which will not be needed. Remove the pips from the fruit and cut it in slices. Place oranges, rhubarb and sugar in the preserving pan, and cook gently till sufficiently done, and the scum has ceased to rise. Pour the preserve in small pots, and next day cover it down with gummed paper.

Cheese Straws.—Take two ounces of butter, two ounces of flour, two ounces of grated cheese, a little salt and cayenne pepper, mix into a paste, roll out thin, cut into fingers quarter inch wide and two inches long. Twist them and bake them for a few minutes in a hot oven. Serve cold.

Egg Dainty.—A tasty breakfast dish. Boil three eggs twelve minutes, take them out and put them into cold water till cold. Remove shells, dry them with a little flour, cover them with sausage meat, egg and bread crumbs. Fry in boiling fat a nice brown. Serve cold, either cut in halves or whole.

Yorkshire Pudding.—Mix five spoonfuls of flour with a quart of milk and three eggs well beaten. Butter the pan. When brown by baking them under the meat, turn the other side upward and brown that. It should be made in a square pan. Set it over a chafing dish at first, and stir it some minutes.

Preserved Rhubarb.—To every pound of rhubarb put one pound of sugar. Let it remain three days, then boil the syrup two or three minutes. Next add the rhubarb and boil thirty minutes. Place on a flat dish till lukewarm, then add essence of ginger to taste. Put into jars.

For minced pickle chop half a peck of green tomatoes, cover them with two-thirds of a cupful of salt and let them stand for a day and a night. Then scald half a gallon of vinegar, with a tablespoonful of pepper, a tablespoonful and a half each of ground mustard, allspice, cinnamon and cloves and half a cupful of white mustard seed. Add to the tomatoes two onions chopped fine and four large green peppers denuded of seeds and cut into rings. Turn the vinegar over the mixture and boil steadily twenty minutes.

A Simple Savory—This little savory is seasonable at all times, as sardines are with us all the year round. To make the dish you must bone as many of the fish as you require, first removing the skin; then make a little white sauce (about a quarter of a pint), and add to it a seasoning of salt, pepper, cayenne, and a few drops of lemon juice; now add the sardines, and put the mixture into scallop tins, cover each with fine bread crumbs; put a few small pieces of butter on the top, and bake for about ten minutes in a moderate oven.

FASHION WHIMS.

There is very little trimming on the long skirts to be worn in the afternoon and evening.

Sleeves for the coming season will be large at the top and short in length.

Choicest materials for dresses for the coming season are of solid colors.

If a strictly tailored shirt waist is worn it is proper to wear a strictly tailored stock.

Feathers have taken the place of flowers in millinery to some extent.

The most popular style of embroidery at present is Broderie Anglaise.

The linen shoe, heavily embroidered on the toe, is very fashionable.

Linen with incrustations of eyelet embroidery is among the favorite materials for gowns.

The aigrette plays an important part in the trimmings of headgear. The newest aigrettes are shorter, but very full.

The suspender dresses which have been so much worn during the summer will again be worn this winter.

White dresses are very popular at the seashore and country. They are worn at all occasions.

KEEP GOING.

The world is moving right along,
You must keep going,
There is no halting with the throng,
You must keep going.
There is no stopping on the way,
The same old hustle day by day,
You cannot stop in some one's way,
You must keep going.

If you would reach fame's topmost rung
You must keep going;
Begin the strife while you are young,
And then keep going.
If you would keep from dire distress,
If you would make a big success,
And reap reward and happiness,
You must keep going.

IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

can see his face yet, Mag, and every time I think of it, it makes me nearly die of laughing. He had actually been fooled another time. It was worth the trip up there, to make a guy of him once more.

And whether it was or not, Mag, it was all I got, after all. For—would you believe Tom Dorgan would turn out such a sorehead? He's kicked up such a row ever since he got there that it's the dark cell for him and solitary confinement. Think of it—for Tom!

I begged, I bluffed, I cried, I coaxed, but many's the Nance Olden that has played her game against the rules of Sing Sing and lost. They wouldn't even let me leave the things for him, or give him a message from me. And back to the station I had to carry the basket, and all the schemes I had to make old Tom Dorgan grin.

All the way back I had him in my mind. He's a tiger—Tom—when he's roused. I could see him, shut up there by himself, with not a soul to talk to, with not a human eye to look into, with not a thing on earth to do—Tom, who's action itself! He never was much of a thinker, and I never saw him read even a newspaper. What would he do to kill the time? Can't you see him there, at bay, back on his haunches, cursing and cursed, alone in the everlasting black silence?

I saw nothing else. Wherever I turned my eyes, that terrible picture was before me. And always it was just on the verge of becoming something else—something worse. He could throttle the world with his bare hands, if it had but one neck, in the mood he must be in now.

It was when I couldn't bear it a moment longer that I set my mind to find some thing else to think of.

I found it, Mag. Do you know what it was? It was just three words—of Obermuller's: "Earn it now."

After all, Miss Monahan, this graft of honesty they all preach so much about hasn't anything mysterious in it. All it is, is putting your wits to work according to the rules of the game and not against them. I was driven to it—the thought of big Tom crouching for a spring in the dark cell up yonder sent me whirling out into the thinking place, like the picture of the soul in the big book at Latimer's I read out of. And first thing you know, 'pon honor, Mag, it was as much fun planning how to "earn it now" as any lifting I ever schemed. It's getting the best of people that always charmed me—and here was a way to fool 'em according to law.

So busy I was making it all up, that the train pulled into the station before I knew it. I gave a last thought to that poor old hyena of a Tom, and then put him out of my mind. I had other fish to fry. Straight down to Mother Douty I went with my basket.

"A fool girl, mother, on her way up to Sing Sing, lost her basket, and Nance Olden found it; it ought to be worth a good deal."

She grinned. You couldn't make old Douty believe that the Lord himself wouldn't steal if He got a chance. And she knows the chances that come butting up against Nancy Olden.

Why did I lie to her? Not for practice, I assure you. She'd have beaten me down to the last cent if she thought it was mine, but she always thinks there'll be a find for her in something that's stolen. So I let her think I'd stolen it in the railway station, and we came to terms.

With what she gave me I bought a wig. Mag, I want you some day, when you can get off, to come and see that wig. I shouldn't wonder but you'd recognize it. It's red, of very coarse hair, but a wonderful color, and so long it—yes, it might be your own, Mag Monahan, it's so much like it. I went to the theater and got my Charity rig, took it home, and sat for hours there just looking at 'em both. When evening came I was ready to "earn it now."

You see, Obermuller had given me the whole day to be away, and neither Gray nor the other three Charities expected me back. I had to do it on the sly, you sassy Mag! Yes, it was partly because I love to cheat, but more because I was bound to have my chance once whether anybody else enjoyed it or not.

I came to the theater in my Charity rig and the wig. It looked as if I'd slept in it, and it came down to the draggled hem of the skirt. All the way there I walked like you, Mag. Once, when a newsboy grinned at me and shouted "Carrots!" I grinned back—your own, old Cruelty grin, Mag. I vow I felt so much like you—as you used to be—that when I lurched out on the stage at last, stumbling over my shoe laces and trying to push the hair out of my eyes, you'd have sworn it was little Mag Monahan making her debut in the Cruelty board room.

Oh, Mag, Mag, you darling Mag! Did you ever hear a whole house, a great big theater full of a peevish vaudeville audience, just rise at you, give one roar of laughter they hadn't expected at all to give, and then settle down to giggle at every move you made.

Girl alive, I just had 'em! They couldn't take their eyes off me. If I squirmed, they howled. If I stood on one foot, scratching the torn leg of my stocking with the other—you know, Mag!—they yelled. If I grinned, they just roared.

Oh, Mag, can't you see? Don't you understand? I was It. The center of the stage I carried round with me—it was just Nancy Olden. And for ten minutes Nancy had nothing to do but to play with 'em. 'Pon my life, Mag, it's just like stealing; the old trait exactly; it's so fascinating so busy, and risky, except that they play the game with you and pay you and love you to fool 'em.

When the curtain fell it was different. Gray, followed by the Charities, all clean and spick-and-span and—not in it; not even on the edge of it—stormed up to Obermuller standing at the wings.

"I'll quit the show here and now," she squawked. "It's a shame, a beastly shame. How dare you play me such a trick, Fred Obermuller? I never was treated so in my life—to have that dirty little wretch come tumbling on like that, without even so much as your telling me you'd made up all this new business for her! It's indecent, anyway. Why, I lost my cue. There was a gap for a full minute. The whole act was such a ghastly failure that I—"

"That you'd better go out now and make your prettiest bow, Gray. Phew! Listen to the house roar. That's what I call applause. Go on now."

She went.

Me? I didn't say a word. I looked at Obermuller and—and I just did like this. Yes, winked, Mag Monahan. I was so crazily happy I had to, didn't I?

But do you know what he did? Do you know what he did?

Well, I suppose I am screaming and the Troyons will put me out, but—he just—winked—back!

And then Gray came trailing back into the wings, and the shrieking and thumping and whistling out in front just went on—and on—and on. Um! I just listened and loved it—every thump of it. And I stood there like a demure little kitten; or more like Mag Monahan after she'd had a good licking, and was good and quiet. And I never so much as budged till Obermuller said:

"Well, Nance, you have earned it. The gall of you! But it only proves that Fred Obermuller never yet bought a gold brick. Only, let me in on your racket next time. There, go on—take it. It's yours."

Oh, to have Fred Obermuller say things like that to you!

He gave me a bit of a push. 'Twas just a love-pat. I stumbled out on to the stage.

CHAPTER VII.

AND that's why, Marguerite de Monahan, I want you to buy in with the madam here. Let 'em keep on calling it Troyon's as much as they want, but you're to be a partner on the money I'll give you. If this fairy story lasts, it'll be your own, Mag—a sort of commission you get on my take-off of you. But if anything happens to the world—if it should go crazy, or get sane, and not love Nancy Olden any more, why, here'll be a place for me, too.

Does it look that way? Divil a bit, you croaker! It looks—it looks—listen and I'll tell you how it looks.

It looks as though Gray and the great Gray rose diamond and the three Charities had all become a bit of background for Nance Olden to play upon.

It looks as though the audience likes the sound of my voice as much almost as I do myself; anyway, as much as it does the sight of me.

It looks as though the press, if you please, had discovered a new stage star, for down comes a little reporter to interview me—me, Nancy Olden! Think of that, Mag! I receive him all in my Charity rig, and in Obermuller's office, and he asks me silly questions and I tell him a lot of nonsense, but some truths, too, about the Cruelty. Fancy, he didn't know what the Cruelty was! S. P. C. C., he calls it. And all the time we talked a long-haired German artist he had brought with him was sketching Nance Olden in different poses. Isn't that the limit?

What d'ye think Tom Dorgan'd say to see half a page of Nancy Olden in the X-Ray? Wouldn't his eyes pop? Poor old Tom! . . . No danger—they won't let him have the papers. . . . My old Tommy!

What is it, Mag? Oh, what was I saying? Yes—yes, how it looks.

Well, it looks as though the trust—yes, the big and mighty T. T.—short for theatrical trust, you innocent—had heard of that same Nance Olden you read about in the papers. For one night last week, when I'd just come off and the house was yelling and shouting behind me, Obermuller meets me in the wings and trots me off to his private office.

"What for?" I asked him on the way.

"You'll find out in a minute. Come on."

THINK SLAYER KNEW HER.

Murder of Mattie Hackett May Not Be Work of Tramps.

Kent's Hill, Me., Aug. 21—The police, who spent the entire night investigating the circumstances surrounding the brutal murder of Mattie Hackett, at the home of her father, here, have abandoned the search of the surrounding country.

Sheriff Brown, while not entirely dismissing the theory that the murder was committed by tramps, expressed the opinion yesterday morning that the murderer might prove to be a resident of Kent's Hill.

Coroner Henry E. Morse has made arrangements for an inquest. Evidence secured is said to strengthen the theory that the young woman was killed by some one who knew her.

Henry Jones, the tramp who applied at the Hackett home Thursday night for food and shelter, said yesterday that while he and Mr. Hackett were at the barn Thursday night he heard conversation between a man and a woman, the voices sounding in the direction of the spot where Miss Hackett's body was found. Mr. Hackett confirms this statement.

The selectmen have offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of the girl's slayer.

Bridge Builders' Bids Held on Account of Delay in Awarding Contract.

New Brunswick, Aug. 21.—The prospect of litigation over the acceptance of the timber spans of the Amboy bridge, and the consequent delay in awarding the contracts for the three new steel spans for which bids were invited several weeks ago by the Board of Freeholders, has resulted in tying up nearly $60,000 belonging to bridge building companies which bid on the new work. Each company bidding put up a certified check for $10,000 as a guarantee of good faith. These checks were deposited to the county's credit, so that the validity of the checks would be determined.

Now there is a prospect of a long delay over the award of the contracts, and some of the bridge companies have written asking that the checks be returned. Director Fountain and Solicitor Willis both declare the checks must be held until the contract is awarded. It is possible that the bidders will demand interest from the county if the money is held an unduly long time. The county does not get interest on its funds.

HORSES SCATTER CROWD.

Many Hurt When Teams Dash Into Big Gathering.

New Brunswick, Aug. 21—Two teams belonging to the Van Dyke Ice Cream Company, of Trenton, which has a branch establishment in this city, while racing down Livingston avenue, ran into a crowd of from 3,000 to 5,000 persons in Monument square Friday evening, and injured about fifty persons, most of whom were children.

A patent medicine minstrel troupe was giving a show in the square at the time. The teams were seen coming down the avenue at breakneck speed, some one cried, "Look out for the runaway!" a panic ensued, and women and children were trampled under foot or run over by the horses and wagons in the mad struggle to reach a place of safety.

So far as is known, there is but one of the injured seriously hurt. It is a two-year-old child of Frank Naylor, of Bennett street. A horse trampled upon it and injured it internally.

William A. Van Aman, an elderly stove dealer, was badly cut about the head.

STOPPED BY YELLOW JACK.

Tennessee Team Out of Tourney Because of Quarantine.

Sea Girt, Aug. 21.—Captain A. H. Graff, regimental adjutant of the First Regiment, is now hard at work transferring blankets, overcoats and other supplies from the storehouse of the commissary general to the storehouse near the rifle range. Colonel William Early, of Somerville, representing the quartermaster general, is down for a few days. As post adjutant, Captain Graff will have plenty to do for the first week of the rifle tournament. He has for his assistant Regimental Sergeant Major Clarence H. Sleight, and he is well posted in the work.

General William P. Hall, who will conduct the national match, is here and will remain through the meet. Captain Rhodes, who will act as post adjutant for the national match, is also here. Lieutenant A. S. Jones, the secretary of the National Rifle Association, has received word that the Tennessee team will not come on account of the yellow fever quarantine.

Young Brakeman Killed.

Trenton, Aug. 21.—John Howard, Jr., of 117 Pennington avenue, a brakeman on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, was instantly killed Friday morning by an express train at Belle Meade. Howard was doing double duty while another brakeman was on a vacation. He had closed a switch and was returning to his train, when the express hit him and killed him. A sorrowful feature of the tragedy was that Howard was only married two months ago. His widow is prostrated. He was 22 years old.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The Potter A. C. defeated the Oak Tree A. C., on the grounds of the latter on Saturday, by a score of 16 to 3. There were a number of brilliant plays.

The series now stands four to one in favor of the Deabsters and the prospects of winning the series grows brighter. Manager Delman admits that the dove of peace is scorched.

Harry McCormick, who has been playing right field for Westfield, has signed with the York, Pa., Tri-State League Club, and plays his first game there this afternoon. This means that he will have to give up his position with the U. S. Steel Company. His absence will be a great loss to Westfield.

DUNELLEN, 3; CLINTON AVE., 0.

Bunching the only two hits they managed to get, Dunellen took a hard-fought game from Clinton Avenue Saturday, 3 to 0. Hits were scarce on both sides, the losers getting only three. The Dunellens scored in the third on a pass, two two-baggers and an error. The score:

ELIZABETH STARS LOSE.

In a fourteen inning game at Elizabethport yesterday the Amsterdams, of New York, defeated the Stars, thereby breaking the winning streak of Manager Burke's aggregation, which had nine straight victories. The score was 2 to 1. The visitors were reinforced by Lungren, of the Chicagos, who occupied the box, and Tinker and Casey, also of the Chicagos. Tinker scored the winning run on his single, a steal, a fielder's choice and Wolf's wild throw to catch him napping at third. The series now stands two to one in favor of the Amsterdams. The score:

The Hobokens got revenge at St. George Cricket Grounds yesterday by defeating the fast All-Cuban aggregation by a score of 6 to 4. They made all their runs in the first two innings, securing a total of nine hits of DeMeza and Perez. The All-Cubans got seven hits off Deegan, but they were scattered. Hildago is credited with a home run. Deegan and Driscoll made a very pretty double play. Perez, who went into the box after the second inning, allowed but three hits and no tallies. The score:

WEST ENDS, 7; HOPEWELL, 2.

In an errorless game of baseball played at Somerville on Saturday the West Ends beat Hopewell by a score of 7 to 2. Timely hitting in the fourth inning by the West Ends put the clamps on the game. Again in the seventh the home team found Milliken for three clean hits and scored as many runs. Demay's excellent work on third and the perfect control by Galbraith were the features of the game. Demay figured in three double plays and executed some clever base running. Smith, of Hopewell, scored their first run in the fourth on a beautiful home run drive. Galbraith, besides striking out six men, was credited with seven assists, some of which were red hot. Next Saturday the N. J. Centrals will play here. Score:

FARMERS WANT SPEED OF AUTOS REGULATED

MIDDLESEX BOARD OF AGRICULTURE DISCUSSES THE QUESTION.

The Middlesex County Board of Agriculture Saturday morning took up the matter of forming a State Road Association for the purpose of protecting the farmers from automobilists. The county boards throughout the State are discussing this matter and the Middlesex board expressed itself as favorable to such an association.

The meeting was presided over by Seward Applegate, the vice-president. There was a large attendance, owing to the fact that in the afternoon the board went on its annual excursion down the river on the launch of Captain George Smith, of South River.

Former Freeholder I. S. Bennett spoke upon the State using up some of the surplus in the treasury on the State roads. He suggested that $150,000 could be spent on the roads and also some of the State money used for the care of lunatics.

David Perrine thought if there were more farmers in the legislature they would get laws enacted for their benefit in a greater abundance than had been the case with recent Legislatures.

The question of having the speed of automobiles regulated on the county highways was discussed. All were in favor of some movement that would tend to give the farmer greater protection. The road association was thought to be a good scheme.

Among those present were James Herbert, of Milltown; Samuel Manning, of South Plainfield; Lewis D. Walker, Jr., and Henry Smalley, of Piscataway; C. S. Boice and Arthur Perrine, of the River road; DeWitt Giles, of New Market; William Rogers, of Prospect Plains; G. Voorhees, of Voorhees Station; George W. Mount, of Monmouth Junction, and W. Fitz Randolph, of New Market.

BAD AUTO ACCIDENT.

One Man Has Skull Fractured and Ribs Broken.

Mr. Lake, of New York, accompanied by three friends, whose names could not be learned, had a lively experience on Saturday while automobiling through Scotch Plains. Their trip came to a sudden termination when they ran their machine into a telegraph pole. One had his skull and three ribs fractured, besides receiving general cuts and bruises. Mr. Lake sustained several scalp lacerations.

The accident happened in the morning and the four men were until late in the afternoon reaching Plainfield. They went to Dr. Dundon's office and received temporary treatment. Two of the worst injured were hurried to a New York hospital and the other two returned later. They refused to give their names.

Won Canoe Race.

Fred Martin and G. Harold Whitney, of this city, won the canoe races of the water carnival at Ocean Grove Saturday. They represented the Wanamassa Boat Club, of which they are members.

Mrs. John V. Beekman, of Elm place, and Mrs. S. C. Terry and daughter Helen, of Chatham street, have gone to Asbury Park for two weeks. They are at the Lake View.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Dr. L. C. Randolph, of Alfred, N. Y., spoke yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A., before a good-sized audience. His subject was "A Horseback Ride Through the Holy Land." Dr. Randolph's talk was especially interesting, as he spoke from personal experience.

Miss Sarah Curry and a delegation of twenty-five children from the Netherwood Fresh Air Home entertained a large congregation at Faith chapel last night. After the children gave their customary interesting programme, Miss Curry spoke upon the work that is being done and is planned to be done. A good sized offering was made for the benefit of the home work.

The meeting which was to have been conducted by the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp and which was postponed on account of the weather, will be held tonight. The members will leave the North avenue trolley station at 7:45. Any friends wishing to go with the League will be welcome. Each person is asked to take something in the way of provisions. Anything large or small will be acceptable.

Odd Fellows On an Outing.

Representatives from Plainfield Lodge and Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., attended the outing of Odd Fellows at Boynton Beach on Saturday, for members of the tenth district, which includes Plainfield, Westfield, Elizabeth, South Amboy, Carteret, Woodbridge and Rahway. Joseph Sheppard, of Plainfield Lodge, was chairman of the committee in charge of the trip of the local Odd Fellows. The occasion was purely one for pleasure, and there was a large gathering of Odd Felows.

BRIDAL COUPLE ARE TAKEN FOR THIEVES

TRENTON JOKER HAS TABLES TURNED UPON HIM.

Trenton, Aug. 21.—John F. Garwood, one of the greatest practical jokers in town, married his housekeeper, Miss Nellie I. Terrell, of New York, Saturday night. When he introduced her as a bride his friends smiled, believing he was playing a joke. When he showed his certificate to his friends, they said: "Forgery, another joke," much to the embarrassment of the bride.

Finally Garwood and his bride fled to the former's store on State street to await the midnight trolley to Bordentown, where the couple are to reside. Some one told a policeman that a man and woman were seen to enter the place and, owing to the lateness of the hour, the policeman investigated. He discovered Garwood and his bride, who, after a time, convinced the policeman that everything was right.

Garwood finally got an affidavit from the clergyman who married them, and a reception in the street was the result, rice and confetti being used in liberal quantities.

Garwood is known in Trenton as "Uncle John." He has played more practical jokes than any man in the city. His friends are arranging to give him a serenade which will eclipse anything of the kind in this section.

Miss Annie Herlitz, of West Second street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital for medical treatment yesterday.

MUCH DEPENDS ON ELECTION

Although a staunch Republican and a man of high standing in the community, Mr. MacDonald has been fighting against machine rule for years.

It is plain to be seen, in view of the facts presented, that among Elizabeth politicians, as also in the minds of the citizens of Plainfield, there is a growing belief that the two men, who have long controlled our local political destinies, have been losing ground rapidly within the last twelve months.

Connolly was too ill to play on Saturday, yet he made an attempt. He tried it for two innings when Turner took his place. "Dan" performed the unusual stunt of dropping a fly ball.

Hurt by Fall from Wagon.

Mrs. Charles Shrieber, her son, aged eight years old, and her sister, Mrs. Haines, of New York, who are spending the summer on Harrison avenue, received painful injuries while carriage riding yesterday afternoon. When passing the home of A. G. Hooley the rear seat of the buckboard upon which they were riding gave way, throwing them into the street. Mrs. Shreiber sustained a fractured collarbone, Mrs. Haines was cut and bruised and the boy, who has just recovered from spinal meningitis, sustained a severe shock. The injured persons were treated by Dr. Dundon.

After apparently losing the game by a poor throw to first base, "Happy" Kiernan redeemed himself in the tenth by a timely hit which brought Driscoll home with the winning run.

BROOK WIDENING RESTS

Opposition By Property Owners Causes Council To Halt Plans.

QUESTION OF COST

Belief Exists That the City as a Whole Should Be Assessed for the Improvement.

In view of the pronounced opposition by property owners to the proposed plan of the city to widen and deepen Cedar brook, so as to avoid the flooding of adjacent property in heavy rains, it is not likely that the matter will be taken up at present. In fact, definite plans for the improvement are not even prepared. At the last meeting of the Common Council a hearing was granted the interested property owners and many appeared to speak their objections to having the cost assessed on them. They believe that it should be borne equally by all taxpayers, inasmuch as it is an improvement to benefit a large area of the east end.

When Councilman Gloak was chairman of the street committee, it was his purpose to have this improvement made in connection with the building of the Richmond street sewer, proposed to carry off surface water, but the members could not see their way clear to do this. At that time it was proposed to assess taxpayers generally for the work and this met with approval. Now that the city plans to assess only those affected, there is strong opposition to the plan.

Mr. Fenno, one of those interested, offered several knotty problems at the hearing, which the officials had some difficulty in solving. He said that so far as he could learn the city desired to make the improvement so as to drain a much larger area, and if this be true, he thinks that the city at large should stand the expense. He contends that if the brook is properly cared for, its present capacity is large enough for the purpose for which it is intended. He also says that the city has not expended any money in keeping the brook and banks in repair, after it was walled by the abutting property owners. He thinks it should do this the same as in the case of macadamized roads, where property owners pay their proportionate share of the expense.

There is no doubt but that the proposed improvement will be made at some future time, but it is the opinion of many that a more equitable form of asssessment will be adopted. Those now affected would not object to paying their share, but do not want to stand the entire expense, as suggested. One of the most important objectors to the present plan is the New Jersey Central, yet it is willing to share with the city in the cost, providing a general assessment is made.

Possibly some report will be made on the matter at the next meeting of the Common Council, and maybe some plan will be suggested that will meet the principal objections presented.

AT THE WRONG HOUSE.

Little Mistake Leads To a Beating Up for Wells.

Lee Wells, colored, tried to enter the home of an excitable Italian on Fairchild place, last night, under the impression that he was at the door of a friend. Mr. Wells was very drunk and what the Italian, who objected to his free-and-easy manner of entrance, did to him was plenty.

With the assistance of the family, the Italian hammered Wells with a board and other hard things. When they got through with him he was a sight.

Officer Payne heard of the racket three hours later and arrested Wells. His cuts were dressed at the station house.

Wells' face and head was almost concealed by bandages when he faced Judge Runyon this morning, and the magistrate suspended sentence because a fine would have rubbed it in too much.

Edmonds in Jail.

Lambert Edmonds, the Plainfield man whose intended marriage to Miss Mary Hubble, of Metuchen, was learned by his wife just in time to intervene, has been locked up in the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick. The Hubble girl has preferred a charge of seduction and it will be heard at the next session of the Grand Jury. His bail was fixed at $300, but he has been unable to furnish the amount.

Edmonds has retained W. A. Coddington, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, as his counsel. The latter expects to secure the release of his client today, after which arrangements will be made for the trial.

CHESTER BRIGGS IN NATIONAL TOURNAMENT

WILL PLAY CLOTHIER, LAST YEAR'S RUNNER-UP, TODAY.

Chester Briggs, of Albert street, twice winner of tennis tournaments at the P. H. S. and a graduate of this year's class at the school, is one of the players in open tournament at Newport for the championship of the United States, which starts today. The first drawing brings Briggs together with Clothier, of Philadelphia. Clothier was the runner-up of last season's tournament and it was only after the hardest kind of play that he was beaten by the present title holder.

While his friends wish him the best of luck in this match and hope that he will make a creditable showing, it is almost a foregone conclusion that Briggs will be defeated by such an experienced and heady player as Clothier. However, it was Briggs' intention to go into this tournament merely for the purpose of getting himself in shape for the scholarship championship of the county, which will be started at Newport on Thursday. He won the Columbia tournament of the east recently, which entitles him to play in this tournament.

Briggs is but nineteen years old and has played tennis practically from the time he was able to lift a racquet. He is a cool, steady player, and has a keen eye.

FIRM OF HERZIG & CO. TO BE REORGANIZED

LOCAL FACTORY TO CONTINUE RUNNING WITHOUT INNERRUPTION.

By an arrangement with creditors and others directly interested, the firm of Herzig & Co., which was declared insolvent last week, will be reorganized. Plans are now underway to form a new company and the business will be carried on as heretofore. In the meantime the local factory will continue running as ususal and the financial embarassment revealed by the death of Samuel Herzig will be quickly overcome. The business has always been regarded as a well established one and the remaining members of the firm are confident that it will grow still larger.

The Rink building, in which the factory is located, is owned by Charles H. Hand and he has been informed that the lease will be renewed as soon as it expires. The present one was made for five years and terminates in March, 1906.

RUNYON WILL STICK.

Laughs at Stories from Elizabeth that He May Withdraw.

Rumors are circulating in Elizabeth that Judge Runyon is likely to withdraw from the senatorial race. The Elizabeth Journal gave one currency yesterday in an article obviously intended to weaken the Plainfielder.

Judge Runyon laughed when the suggestion of his withdrawal was called to his attention this morning. "I am in the race to stay," he said. "I have authorized nobody to so much as hint that I would withdraw."

THEATRE WILL BE READY

Handsome New Playhouse Only Awaits the Finishing Touches.

CROWDS VIEW INTERIOR

Remarkable Change From Old Washington Hall Calls for Expressions of Wonderment.

Fifty men working the greater part of last night finally succeeded in clearing away the maze of scaffolding that encumbered the auditorium of the new Plainfield theatre, and today it was presented to the view of hundreds of people for the first time. While the sound of hammering and sawing, the splitting of timbers and the general hubbub was on last evening, scores of men and women secured vantage points out of harm's way to view proceedings, so great has been the interest in the progress of the reconstruction. Without a single exception, what they saw amazed them and called for such exclamations as "Isn't it grand," and "My, I never thought it would be anything like this." The old Washington Hall is a thing of the past, and the new theatre stands as a structure of which any city might feel proud.

The playhouse, in point of cosiness, appointments and interior appearance, will rank with any in the State. At first glance the general decorative scheme reminds the observer of Keith's handsome new theatre in Philadelphia, while the architectural design resembles the New Amsterdam in New York. It has an orchestra floor with a capacity of 510 chairs, a balcony with 370 more, and seats for 500 in the gallery, making a total capacity of 1,380 without the boxes. The main entrance leads off West Second street, where a handsome lobby has been put in, and the gallery is reached by a separate stairway fronting on the adjoining alley. The men's smoking room and the women's retiring rooms are to be on the main floor to the right and left of the orchestra entrance.

The general decorative scheme is of a pleasing buff color, while a soft green graces the proscenium arch. The boxes and fronts of the balcony and gallery are resplendent in white fresco work, here and there touched with delicate tracings of gold. At the present time the sounding board is finished in buff, but it is the intention of Proprietor Counihan, and would have been accomplished but for the necessary hurry, to have it embellished by a large oil panel placed by a well known artist. Instead of a chandelier the auditorium is lighted principally by seventy-four electric lights studded about the main ventilator directly over the orchestra floor. Several hundred other lights peep out from frieze work along the balcony, the gallery and about the stage side columns. Extra care has been taken in providing for the comfort of patrons by having the chairs finely upholstered in red leather and with wide aisles between. The safety exits are numerous and in case of necessity the entire audience could be gotten out within a few moments.

The stage is at the north end of the building and is wider than the one at Music Hall. It is fitted with modern fire proof scenery, curtains, mechanical appliances and lighting effects. In dimensions it will be sixty-two feet wide from wall to wall, thirty-two feet from the main cur-

Piscataway Township Officials Hope It Will Solve School Problem.

THE LATEST PLAN

Original Proposition To Erect a $20,000 Building Now Considered Extravagant.

The Board of Education of Piscataway township, at a meeting yesterday, drafted a call for a special election to be held on Wednesday night, September 6, at 7 o'clock, at New Market, when propositions to purchase additional land and appropriate money for a new school house will be submitted to a vote of the taxpayers.

The plan is to purchase a lot adjoining that upon which the old school house stood, and known as the Farrier property, for $425, and the sum to be asked for the new building is $12,500. As these propositions are a compromise over former plans, it is confidently expected that they will be ratified by the voters.

While plans for the new building have not yet been drawn, the idea is to erect a four-room school house, which, it is believed, will meet the requirements of the township for some time to come. According to the last census there are 110 children of school age in this district, and the building proposed to be erected will accommodate 160 children. When the building is tested to its fullest capacity arrangements can be made to construct an addition to it, but this would not be necessary in several years.

The original proposition to erect a $20,000 school house at New Market is now considered by the Board of Education as unnecessary and extravagant and will not be discussed at further length.

Now that South Plainfield has arranged for the teaching of the higher grades, many pupils who formerly attended the New Market school will not be obliged to make that trip as heretofore.

TRENTON WILL NOT DEFEND REWARD SUIT

COURT WILL DECIDE RIGHTFUL OWNERSHIP OF MONEY IN DISPUTE.

The city of Trenton will not fight Franklin Van Nuis in the courts to prove its decision to give Chief Kiely the $250 Long reward right. As soon as it is served with papers in Van Nuis' proposed suit it will pay over the money into the hands of the court and let the latter decide who is entitled to it.

The county authorities, who offered the other $250, will probably follow the city's example. No decision has been arrived at yet by the freeholders.

City Solicitor Bird has already decided, after a careful review of the facts in the case, that Van Nuis is not entitled to the reward, but the council does not desire to engage the municipality in a law suit. Both the city and county feel that the money will have to be paid out, anyway, and there would be no sense or wisdom in adding a law suit to the bill of expenses that has grown out of the chase after Long.

Chief Kiely has no fear of the outcome of the suit.

"The reward was offered for the apprehension of Long," he said. "We apprehended him. That is all there is to the case."

OFFENDERS FINED.

Disorderly Quartette Contributes to Borough Treasury.

Joseph Packer, John Taylor, George Woodland and Edward King, the four young men arrested by Chief Marshal Weiss for disorderly conduct and creating a disturbance on Sunday morning, were given a hearing last night before Recorder Doud. In addition to these men, Fred Drake was arrested on the same charge during the day by the Chief, and he was brought up at the same time with the others. All pleaded guilty as charged.

Each of the men except Taylor was given the choice of paying $5 fine or seven days in jail. Because he had given the borough authorities extra trouble in locating him, Taylor was given the choice of paying $10 or spending time in jail in proportion to the fine. All produced the coin and were released.

THE SOMERSET ASPECT

Correspondent Says A. A. Clark May Be a Senatorial Candidate.

FURY TELLS IT.

Declares That Many Prominent Persons Throughout the County Have Asked Him to Stand For Nomination.

The Somerville correspondent of the Newark News sized up the political situation in Somerset county as follows yesterday:

"From a Democratic point of view there are ominous clouds hovering in the political skies of Somerset county, and that the coming campaign will be the hottest ever waged in the old red shale county is no longer considered a matter of doubt.

"Notwithstanding his public announcement, made some months ago at a dinner given by the Young Men's Club of a local church, to the effect that he had decided to abandon politics forever and give the young men a chance to gain some of the honors that politics offered, Alvah A. Clark is talked of as a possible Senatorial candidate this fall.

"This statement was made by Charles J. Fury, a prominent leader and close friend of Mr. Clark, while discussing the political situation with a reporter this morning. Mr. Fury said:

"'The Democratic candidate for State Senator will be Alvah A. Clark. I know this to be true, as many prominent persons throughout the county have asked him to become a candidate.'

"'Who are some of these persons?' Mr. Fury was asked.

"'I do not care,' he said, 'to divulge their names. However, I will say they are prominent in both parties.'

"'Is there any reason why Senator Childs should not be renominated?' he was asked.

"'Senator Childs,' Mr. Fury made answer, 'has many elements opposed to him because of his action on the local option measure which he introduced last fall. Then, again, he was instrumental in the recent county committe fight that almost split the party into factions. The Republicans have already the promise of support from the liquor dealers, and certain Republican leaders have been working up the local option question as a campaign slogan.'

"The foregoing statement is of more than usual significance from the fact that Fury has always been closely identified with Clark in political matters. It is also a well known fact that the Thompson Republicans intend to settle all scores with Colonel Frelinghuysen this fall, for, as they put it, the manner in which he treated former Senator Thompson in the fight last winter for the appointment of a prosecutor. John F. Reger, of Raritan, a follower of Frelinghuysen's, got the appointment, while J. L. Griggs, a Thompson man, was turned down.

"Clark and Thompson are political leaders of the old school. Their friends say they have both been badly used in the past two years by those from whom they had cause to expect better treatment, and it is probable that these two old generals will combine forces in the coming campaign to make their last stand.

"Mayor Smalley, of North Plainfield, makes no secret of his opposition to Colonel Frelinghuysen, whose defeat he helped to bring about three years ago. With the Thompson faction against him at Somerville and the Reed and Smalley faction here, Colonel Frelinghuysen, it is believed, will have the fight of his life on his hands."

CANDLE AND BENZINE A BAD COMBINATION

THEIR MEETING RESULT SERIOUSLY FOR GEORGE DUFFORD.

George Dufford, of West Front street, one of the night gang at the Potter Printing Press Works, met with a painful accident last night which will detain him from work for several weeks. He was engaged in cleaning up one of the large double-deck web presses prior to painting it. He carried some benzine in one hand and a lighted candle in the other, and in walking from one end of the press to the other his foot slipped on a trap door, pitching him forward. The candle and benzine came together, and as a result Mr. Dufford's right hand was severely burned.

While the hand was enveloped in flames, Mr. Dufford tried to smother them by putting the hand under his left arm. In doing so the waist to his jumper caught fire and only after the greatest difficulty was he able to extinguish the flames. By this time the flesh on the hand was burned to a crisp. Mr. Dufford hastened to the office of Dr. M. B. Long and had the injured hand dressed.

Dr. Harper and other Chicago educators saw the work, and urged Prof. Lewis to put it into permanent form. The volume is to be called "A Sketch of the Bible." Scribners' will probably issue it.

ENDING OF CONVOCATION

Sabbatarian Ministers Listen to Last Paper, on Bible Literature.

BY PROF. E. H. LEWIS

Scholarly Treatment of a Great Subject—Migration of Ministers to Conference at Shiloh.

Permanent adjournment was taken by the Pre-conference Convocation of the Seventh-day Baptist church, after a week of sessions, shortly after 9 o'clock last night. Today the clerics are on their way to Shiloh, where the annual conference, to which the convocation was preliminary, will open tomorrow.

The feature of the closing session was a masterly and scholarly paper by Prof. Edwin H. Lewis, of the Lewis Institute, Chicago, a son of Dr. A. H. Lewis and a former Plainfielder, on "The Bible as Literature."

The paper was considered under two general heads, "The Bible As Words" and "The Bible As Books."

Prof. Lewis analyzed the genius of Hebrew language and religion, showing that it was rich in poetic imagery and spiritual power, which is the highest religious thought. He declared that the New Testament is strongly Hebraic from the literary standpoint, and that the Bible is free from metaphysical terms, metaphysical discussions, and as literature is full, flowing, and vigorous with life. He dwelt at length upon the words of the Bible and the forms of literature as revealing the character of the men who wrote the books. Speaking of the books, he analyzed many of them briefly, showing what the central thought and spirit is.

The paper, which consumed forty minutes in the reading, was listened to with almost breathless attention. As literature, the paper was a beautiful specimen of clear, terse, vigorous, and lifeful language, the character of which was especially commended to the younger members of the convocation by Rev. Dr. Platts.

Comment on the paper was general, and warmly complimentary. A vote of thanks was extended to the author.

In the brief business session held before final adjournment the committee on pastors' training class reported a recommendation that such classes be established in all churches of the denomination. The committee, composed of President Davis, Rev. Walter Green and Dr. Davis, was appointed to prepare literature for the classes. The publication of the books was referred to the American Sabbath Tract Society.

The convocation by a rising vote thanked the people of the local church for their hospitality during the week of the gathering.

It is felt that the convocation has been a great success. Permanent organization having been effected, and plans laid for the annual gathering of ministers and people immediately before the regular conference, it is expected that the effect of the "School for Prophets" will go on with increasing force in the denominational life. The officers of the permanent organization are Rev. A. E. Main, president; Rev. E. D. Van Horn, secretary and treasurer, and Rev. A. J. C. Bond, recording secretary, all of Alfred, N. Y.

All the clerics were out of the city and on their way to Shiloh by early afternoon. A number of them made the trip by trolley, through Philadelphia.

The constitution of the Pre-conference Convocation provides that it shall meet each year in the city nearest to that in which the conference is to be held, so next year the "prophets" will go to school probably in Utica. The conference is to meet in Leonardsville, N. Y.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

William Sanford, proprietor of the new loop lunch and waiting room, expressed himself to a Press reporter as very indignant at the action of the trolley company in turning its cars about the loop in such a way that they remain back facing the loop. By so doing they not only defeat the purpose of a waiting room for patrons but also stop part of the lunch counter business. He says that he treats the women just as well as if he were a paid employe of the company and there again the company is benefitted by his service. He said that he hopes the matter has happened only through the oversight of the officials and hopes the matter, small as it is, will be fixed up for mutual benefit.

Rev. E. Adelbert Witter will speak and conduct the prayer service on Friday evening at the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Rev. L. A. Platts, a former pastor of the church, will conduct the services on Saturday morning.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE FOR STATE RIFLE MEET

WILL BE BE HELD AT SEA GIRT AUG. 24 TO SEPT. 9.

Trenton, Aug. 22—Most of the arrangements for the annual meeting of the New Jersey Rifle Association to be held from August 24 to September 9, at Sea Girt, have been completed. This event this year will be the largest and most important of its kind ever held. The officers of the United States and National Guard of New Jersey, to the number of twenty-four, will be range officers, and among those of the regular army service who have been assigned to duty at Sea Girt is Lieutenant Gouvernour Packer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Packer, of this city. Lieutenant Packer is now in Trenton, and will go direct from here to Sea Girt. He is connected with a military post just outside of Buffalo, and is now on duty.

Officers of the National Guard of New Jersey who have been assigned as range officers are Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Clime, Major Nelson Y. Dungan, Captain John Rogers, Captain William Libby, Captain John McCullough. Seven more are to be named.

The most important event of the meet will be the shoot for the National trophy, and the dates set for this are August 26, 28 and 29. Teams will contest from the regular army, navy, marine, West Point, Annapolis and the National Guards of every State and Territory, excepting Louisiana and Mississippi.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

J. J. Leahy, the Richmond street plumber, guarantees his work to give entire satisfaction.

Have you any electrical work to be done in your house? If you have you had better see E. A. Craig, Watchung avenue.

Have you a bell or an electric wire which is out of working order? If so notify W. H. Pope, the electrician, North avenue.

H. Eggerding, Park avenue, is the manufacturer of the famous Jockey Club and C. O. D. brands of cigars. Give them a try.

Whoever has dealt with John Wirth, baker, of West Front street, once, is never satisfied with any other baker's goods.

Stonewall Jackson, of the borough, can sell you a horse for any kind of work, and he guarantees every animal to be as represented.

Homelike surroundings and management mark the Kensington Hotel, North avenue. Transients regret that they are not permanent guests.

O. M. Dunham, the Park avenue men's furnisher, always carries a full line of shirts, ties, gloves, underwear and hats of the best make at low prices.

Putnam & DeGraw, the dry goods merchants, have the reputation of selling only the best goods. Patronize the firm and you will never regret it.

The stock of Fred Ivamy's fish store is always as complete as the market affords. The offerings are attractive and the deliveries are prompt.

U. B. Crane, the West Front street gent's furnisher, always carries an up-to-date line of goods at prices that appeal to every class of people. Drop in and look at his big display.

When you are buying shoes you ought to look for those that will last the longest and cost the least. A. E. & A. L. Giddes, the West Front street shoers, keep just those kind of shoes.

When you want reliable drugs, medicines and toilet articles and the best soda water, stop at L. W. Randolph's pharmacy on West Front street, and you are always sure to get them at right prices.

Put your valuables in the First National Bank vaults while away for the summer. You will then be sure to have them when your vacation is over. This is a better plan than trusting to the watchfulness of an overworked policeman.

The place to get a first class meal or a light lunch is at Timbo's restaurant. The food is always well cooked and served in a proper manner, while the prices will meet with your approval. Timbo also sells the best cigars and all kinds of tobaccos.

In order to make room for fall and winter goods, which are coming in very fast, I. H. Boehm, on West Front street, has found it necessary to sell out his stock of spring and summer lines as quickly as possible. Consequently goods have to be sold at reduced prices, by which you will benefit, if you are one of his customers.

There are always good things running for bargain-loving housewives at the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company's store, West Front street. It is the policy of the firm to sell most things below the prices charged by competitors, and a few things at a price that competitors cannot begin to approach. The line of teas, coffees and spices that the company carries is the finest in the city.

William Moore, of Fairview avenue, is on the sick list.

TWO STALLIONS IN A BLOODY BATTLE

THOROUGHBREDS PUT UP A FIERCE FIGHT NEAR RAHWAY.

Rahway, Aug. 22—A fierce battle between two blooded stallions took place Saturday afternoon on the McKenzie road, near the old Clark farm southwest of Rahway. George Hano, of Millburn, was driving a Hambletonian bay stallion to a roadway, and as he was passing a field where a chestnut stallion was grazing his horse, gave vent to a shrill neigh of defiance. This was promptly responded to by the animal in the field, which leaped the fence and savagely attacked Heno's horse, which was nothing loath for the fray. So sudden was the onslaught that Mr. Heno was thrown out of the wagon and his shoulders dislocated. His stallion tore itself loose from its harness, and the conflict between the maddened beasts raged furiously.

The loud noise they made drew several farmers and farm hands to the scene, and the animal fighters were only finally separated by the liberal use of pitchforks. Great strips of skin and flesh were torn from their breasts and flanks in the battle, while the road wagon was considerably damaged and the harness of Heno's horse wrecked. When the combat was at its height a party of men and women in a large auto touring car came along the road.

At the sight of the struggling animals, with blood streaming from their bodies, the women in the automobile screamed from fright and one of them fainted. It was some time before she recovered sufficiently to enable the tourists to resume their journey. Both horses were badly injured in the encounter.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Boston Globe, in speaking of the engagement of the "Sign of the Cross" in that city recently, said: "Any one who witnessed the two immense audiences that attended the opening portrayal of the "Sign of the Cross" in the Music Hall yesterday could not fail to have been impressed with the tremendous hold this drama has upon the public. For eight seasons this remarkable play has been upon the stage, and yet the tense silence, the eager watchfulness of the spectators and the unmistakable interest was greater than at its first presentation here. And the reason for all this can be easily traced. In the first place the story, while of a religious and an historical nature, is yet told with so large an amount of human traits, that it appeals strongly to all classes. Love, hate, ambition and other of the passions of man burned as fiercely in the days of Nero as they do today, and while the brutal instincts of mankind were held less in check then, there are the same underlying principles, so that there is no sentiment which is not readily understood and appreciated." Mr. William H. Ferris, the sterling young American actor, is a worthy successor to Charles Dalton in the role of Marcus Superbus, and his company is comprised of players of sterling merit. It will appear at the new Plainfield theatre on Tuesday, August 29.

There is a big, laughing bill at Kieth's this week, including every sort of act calculated to superinduce cheerful cacchination. Leona Bergere, a pretty and talented sister of Valerie Bergere, makes her New York debut with Rudolf Horsky, in a funny one-act farce entitled "He, She and He" while Victor Moore and Emma Littlefield are bidding farewell to vaudeville in their laughable burlesque, "Change Your Act," or "Back to the Woods." Miss Mignonette Kokin, daughter of Prince Kokin and one of the most graceful dancers in the business, reappears after several seasons' absence abroad, and scores with some new songs and steps. By special arrangement with Barnum & Bailey, Galetti's Dog and Monkey Circus is touring the continuous, while the Marvelous Merrills, comedy cyclists, are the acrobatic feature of the bill. May Duryea and W. A. Mortimer appear to advantage in Edmund Day's playlet, "The Impostor," and others on the bill are Dixon & Anger, "The Baron and His Friend," and Barrett Brothers, "the men from Ireland." Comic moving pictures by the Kinetograph add to the fun.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boughton, of Park avenue, are entertaining friends from Bayonne.

Eric Moraller is home from De Pauw University, Greencastle, Md., for a vacation stay.

Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan, of Plainfield avenue, have returned from a visit to Brooklyn relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McVoy, of Sandford avenue, have returned from a week's stay at Asbury Park.

W. R. Codington, of Sandford avenue, who has been spending his vacation in Maine, has returned home.

Miss Ada Clark, of East Front street, has returned from a trip through the Thousand Islands region.

Herbert Stratter of the Madison flats, has returned from a ten days' outing in the vicinity of Niagara Falls.

JERSEY ROAD SYSTEM GAPS ARE FILLING UP

STATE AND COUNTIES PUTTING HIGHWAYS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Trenton, Aug. 22.—News that New Jersey is soon to have the finest boulevard in the world—in its ocean drive from Atlantic Highlands to Cap May City—has roused much interest in what the State is doing in the way of good road building to help the counties.

One-third of the expense is paid by the State, and this year 102 miles of road is being built. Some of the work is already completed. In some cases gaps in extensive systems of roads are being filled, while in others important extensions are being made.

The final completion of the boulevard from the mainland at Pleasantville to Atlantic City is now assured. The gap of 3,100 feet, over which the county had no right of way, has now been dedicated as a public highway, and the improvement of the same is being pushed forward so rapidly that by the middle of September the traveling public will have a fine smooth boulevard from the mainland across the meadows to the seashore. This will be good news to those who have been compelled to turn aside and use an old turnpike at this point.

This completes the great through line from Camden to Atlantic City. It also completes the main shore road from Atlantic City north to Chestnut Neck, Batsto, Tuskerton, Toms River, Lakewood, Point Pleasant, and so on up the coast to Highland Beach.

The only other gap between this shore road and the stone road system of northern New Jersey was a short stretch of three-fifths of a mile between Matewan and the Middlesex county line, which has just been completed. The filling of this little gap connects the road system of the coast resorts with the stone road system of northern New Jersey, via Old Bridge, New Brunswick, Metuchen, Rahway, and thence to Newark, Jersey City and all north Jersey.

Woodbridge and the Staten Island Sound also have now a stone road connecting them with Plainfield, Somerville and the northern parts of the State by the completion of the road from Woodbridge to Oak Tree, where it strikes the old stone road

Other road building operations in north Jersey are on the mountains around Montclair, the extension of the old and famous Brunswick pike in Mercer and Middlesex, the Stony Hill road in Somerset county, and a connecting link with the outer world for Boonton, by way of the Hamburg turnpike above Paterson.

A cross-country road is being extended three miles toward the seashore from Hightstown, and runs direct to Trenton. All of these roads are fit for automobile riding at all seasons of the year. They are never muddy.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The sixth contest for the county championship honors on Saturday is sure to be a battle royal and no fan can afford to miss it.

If Captain Mallen, of the Westfield team, has no respect for the men attending the games, he should at least think of the women, when using indecent language on the ball field.

Dover, of the Lackawanna League, with Duquette and Lamar as the battery, will meet the Daubsters on Crescent Oval on Saturday, September 23, and the fans will be able to size up the strength of the Morris county aggregation.

Every member of the local team is ready to fight the limit to win a contest, but it does not resort to questionable tactics, such as the waving of bats and throwing gloves in the air and crowding the base line with coachers.

The Marion A. C., of Newark, a very fast semi-professional traveling baseball team, has Sunday, September 3, and 4, Labor Day, morning and afternoon, open, and they would like to hear from any team in this vicinity desiring a first class attraction and offering suitable inducements. Address H. B. Beaty, 73 Jewett avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

"Followers of Jersey ball, especially those of the Lackawanna League," says The Newark Call, "are curious to know how teams of that organization would fare in a series with Plainfield and Westfield. No team in the Lackawanna League, however, has shown the form of the Plainfield aggregation." It is the opinion of those posted on the subject that Plainfield has the strongest independent team in this part of the country. It has played twenty-two games and lost but four.

TENNIS.

More than one hundred men and women watched the players in the first round of the invitation mixed double tennis tournament at the Westfield Club courts Saturday afternoon. Cups are to be awarded to the winners and runners-up. A large number of entries made the opening games very interesting. The scoring follows:

First Round—Mr. and Mrs. E. Johnson, Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, defeated R. A. West and Miss Church, of Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, 6—4, 0—6, 6—4; Lindsley Dunham and Mrs. Edgar, of Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway, defeated H. R. Taylor and Miss E. Osborn, Westfield Club, 6—0, 6—4; R. F. Ginbernak and Miss Waring, Sewaren Lawn Tennis Club, defeated J. H. Kyte and Miss Wilcox, Fanwood Tennis Club, 6—2, 3—6, 6—1; A. L. Webb and Miss Leman, Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, defeated W. F. Zettlemayer and Miss Wright, Sewaren Lawn Tennis Club, 6—3, 6—3.

H. L. Robinson and Miss Edgar, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Herbert Knight and Miss Dorothy Knight, Fanwood Lawn Tennis Club, 7—5, 9—7; Clifford Miller and Miss Robinson, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Bertram Berry and Miss Woodruff, Ilderan Outing Club, 5—7, 6—2, 10—8; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Smith, Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, defeated C. W. Ferneld and Miss Ballard, Sewaren Lawn Tennis Club, 6—2, 6—4.

One set of the second round was played, Mr. and Mrs. Smith defeating George Case and Miss Florence Bradley, Westfield Club, 8—6. This match is to be finished tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Play will be continued through the coming week, and it is expected that semi-finals and finals will be reached by next Saturday.

Plainfield, N. J., August 22, 1905.

A New Brunswick clergyman says: "Man, like the moon, is ambitious." Sure thing. And man, like the moon, sometimes gets full and stays out all night.

A Newark artist has just received word that an aunt in Germany has left him several hundred thousand dollars. He can hardly be blamed if he goes over and paints the town red.

The newspapers are making great ado about the girls in a Missouri town forming a military company and shouldering arms. The Plainfield girls have been shouldering arms ever since we knew them, and did it as a matter of fact.

"Yet doth he give us bold advertisement," writes Shakespeare in King Henry IV. This expression might well be used as a motto by some wideawake merchant. Bold advertising is effective advertising—if there be no humbug about it. Humbug, like graft, is fast getting under the ban. Straight business is the kind of business that pays in the long run.—Philadelphia Record.

Those interested in the matter are to be congratulated in securing such favorable concessions from the freeholders of both Union and Somerset counties in the matter of the new bridge to be built on West End avenue, over Green brook. The Somerset county board did not favor spending more than $3,500 or $4,000 for the bridge, and besides they wanted a single span, and thought the old abutments could be used, all of which was in the line of the board's actions regarding North Plainfield improvements. The Union county members would not listen to this plan and insisted on making a double span, concrete, iron beam bridge, one that would stand the heavy travel for years to come, and $7,500 was the limit fixed for the improvement. An important feature of the new structure will be the arrangement whereby the eight-foot sidewalks can be turned into the roadbed, making it six-six feet in all, and yet allowing room for two eight-foot sidewalks, which would make the entire width about eighty-eight feet. The syndicate improving the borough property is much pleased that it was able to get what it wanted in regard to the bridge, believing that it was entitled to it in view of the large sum of money to be expended developing Rockview Park.

A tangle has been discovered in chapter 3 of the laws passed by the last Legislature and approved by Governor Stokes Feb. 15, abolishing spring elections in townships and boroughs and combining them with the general election in November. The mixup is giving the county and municipal political committees considerable trouble and the matter has been referred to Attorney General McCarter for opinion to set the matter straight. The bill was Assembly No. 7, introduced by Mr. Gibbs, of Camden county, and affects all officers excepting members of school boards or school trustees. Under its provisions the terms of all officers except justices of the peace hereafter elected in any township or borough shall commence at noon, Jan. 1, succeeding their election, and continue for the respective terms already fixed by law. This law makes it necessary to nominate and elect Nov. 7 all the officers in the townships and boroughs that would have been elected last spring, under the old law. The hitch in the arrangement is that the new law is absolutely silent as to the manner of nominating the candidates outside the cities. This leaves it an open question whether the primary election law as applied to cities should govern and the candidate be chosen Sept. 12, or whether the candidates for township and borough officers be named in caucus, as under the old law. The situation is complicated by the fact that on or before Sept. 2 all petitions endorsing candidates must be filed with the township or municipal clerk, and the committees have no authority as to how to proceed to meet this requirement.

SALAAM TEMPLE TO HAVE BIG OUTING

PLAINFIELD SHRINERS WILL ATTEND GATHERING AT NEWARK.

An event of unusual interest in Masonic circles will be the big outing of Salaam Temple, Ancient Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Newark, and of which there are many Plainfield members, which is to be held at Olympic Park, Newark, on Wednesday, September 6. It is to be an all-day affair, and gives every indication of being equal to those famous outings of Mecca Temple, of New York.

It is expected that in the neighborhood of 1,000 persons will take part. All Masons will be welcome, and there will be many invited guests. Invitations have been accepted by Mecca Temple, of New York; Kismet, of Brooklyn, and Crescent, of Trenton. The arrangements are in general charge of the Arab Patrol of the temple, of which former Freeholder Solomon B. Beidelman is chief. As a special committee of arrangements the following have been chosen: Dr. J. M. Macdonald, chairman; G. O. Groebe, A. P. Pionnie, E. W. Pierson, Henry W. Egner, Jr., and Charles Goldinger. The nobles will wear their fezzes and thus give picturesque color to the occasion.

One of the features of the outing will be a baseball game in the afternoon on a diamond to be specially prepared for the event, between Northern and Oriental lodges, of Newark. At 6 o'clock dinner will be served and in the evening there will be a theatre party. A vaudeville performance which will be specially gotten up for the occasion and in which a number of Shriners will take part will be given in the Park Auditorium. One of the numbers will be the moving pictures taken on the last visit of Mecca Temple to Coney Island. Another feature of the evening will be a special electrical illumination. For the dinner the large upstairs dining room in the pavilion will be reserved, and after the theatrical performance the dance hall will be given over to the exclusive use of the Shriners and their guests. Members of the Patrol are to act as ushers.

This outing will mark the opening of Salaam Temple's season of social activity. Among the events to be held later is a theatre party at the Newark Theatre.

—Dr. E. A. Gesswein, of East Fifth street, has leased the house formerly occupied by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, on East Front street, and will remove there from his present location September 1.

EARTHQUAKE IN THE WEST

Terrified St. Louis Citizens Rush to Streets to Pray.

NO LIVES LOST

Shock Is Felt All Through Mississippi Valley and Causes Great Consternation.

St. Louis, Tuesday, Aug. 22.—An earthquake shock was felt here shortly before midnight last night. It was distinctly felt in every part of the city, and caused panic in many places. So far it is not known whether any lives have been lost.

The shock was strong enough to set houses vibrating, throw pictures from the walls, disturb furniture, and, here and there, break window panes.

Scared by the trembling of their buildings and the rattle of glass and china, thousands of persons rushed into the street, many, awakened from sleep, taking no time to dress before seeking the safety of open ground. The spectacle of partly clothed women kneeling in the streets in prayer was observed in many places.

About midnight it was learned that the shock felt here had passed along a great section of the Mississippi Valley, and that the phenomenon everywhere had caused consternation. At Cairo, Ill., the shocks were very distinct.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 22.—The earthquake passing along the Mississippi Valley was felt here at 11:15 o'clock last night. There were two distinct shocks, separated by a few minutes. Neither of them was sufficiently violent to cause damage.

Many persons became scared, but few took the trouble of leaving their homes. The operators in the Western Union building felt that structure quiver, and for a few moments there was a general inclination to make for the street. This scare passed away as the vibratory motion ceased.

At Paris and Brownsville, Tenn., the shock lasted thirty seconds and was severe. The telegraph operator at Paris was thrown from his chair.

SULTAN OF SULU WOULD WED MISS ROOSEVELT

TELLS HER HIS PEOPLE WANT HER TO BE WITH THEM.

Manila, Aug. 22.—Advices from Jolo, where Secretary of War Taft and his party visited last week in the tour being made of the Philippines, state that the climax of the festivities arranged in honor of their visit came when the Sultan of Sulu offered his hand in marriage to Miss Alice Roosevelt, the President's daughter, and asked her to become the Sultana of the Sulu archipelago. In making his proposal, the native ruler declared that it was the earnest wish of all his people that she should remain among them.

Just what answer was returned to the Sultan's proposal by Miss Roosevelt is not known. She has shown tact many times on the present trip in reply to the declarations of the celebrities with whom she has come in contact, and there is little doubt that she was equal to the emergency when the little Sultan made his proposal.

The Sultan, Hadjt Mohamad Jamalul Kiram of Jolo, already has six wives, so that his offer of marriage to Miss Roosevelt is regarded as a form of Oriental politeness in offering her the highest compliment at his command.

SOMERVILLE TO HAVE PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT

COMMISSIONERS DECIDE TO DO AWAY WITH VOLUNTEERS.

Somerville, Aug. 22.—The town commissioners have decided to decrease the number of volunteer firemen to a minimum in each of the companies and put the department on a paid basis. Each member of the volunteer company will hereafter be exempt from all dues and will receive $3 per year for his service.

Heretofore the dues which members paid in the respective companies amounted to $3 per year. Under the new rules of affairs it will not be necessary for them to pay anything. The $3 per annum paid by the town will cover the expense of membership.

While the various committees were making their reports at the meeting, Commissioner Durling was called upon to report for the police committee and announced there was no report to make. This brought Commissioner Charles Houston to his feet and in a lengthy speech he lauded the police for the good work they had done recently in capturing the three alleged highwaymen near Finderne and deploring the fact that Mr. Durling was indisposed to recognize such efficient work. Mr. Durling replied as follows:

"The police force has made a number of arrests recently where they had no business to. It is the duty of every law-abiding citizen and police officer to assist in the capture of criminals at any time or place, but what I want is the police to attend to their duties here in town, 'nat's what they are paid for. The county authorities can take care of outlying districts. I don't believe in throwing bouquets."

Recently Mr. Durling appeared on the street one Saturday night and, finding a number of youths loitering about street corners, took the police to task for allowing it, and pointed out several other faults that he wanted remedied without further delay. Fearing that he may appear again at any time during the night or day, the policemen are on the move.

tain to the rear wall, twenty-eight feet to the fly gallery and sixty feet to the roof, which has been raised ten feet higher than originally. An asbestos curtain will be hung and the "gridiron" will have 200 electric lights. The switchboard controlling the various circuits is a marvel of workmanship, and will be operated by "Jack" Henry, of Philadelphia, who will also be stage manager. The dressing rooms are nicely fitted up and are located below the stage.

The boxes are all on the same elevation as the balcony, but are so arranged as to drop before each other and afford a full view of the stage. There are six in all, having chairs for six persons each. Three of the boxes have been engaged for the first night by Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Marcus Hoyt and Charles Woolston and George Tobin.

There are still a few finishing touches to be made, but they will have been completed by tomorrow night, and everything will be in readiness for the initial attraction, "The County Chairman."

Rev. George B. Shaw, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and John Hiscox left today for Shiloh, N. J., to attend the conference of Seventh-Day Baptists.

Rev. Hervey Wood, field secretary of the National Temperance Society, will occupy the pulpit at the First Baptist church on Sunday. He is considered a genius, an irrestible, pungent antagonist to the liquor traffic and by many he is regarded as John B. Gough and Wendel Phillips rolled into one.

Rev. George H. Wade, of Vassar, Michigan, preached at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday morning, delivering a very interesting and instructive discourse from the text Isaiah 40-31, dwelling at some length upon the thought that it is only from the Lord that one can renew their strength and be able to run without growing weary. The service was attended by a large congregation. There was no evening service.

O. B. Leonard, of the First Baptist church, in writing about revivals in the past says, "that spiritual awakening in churches the past generation has taken place generally during the winter months. Nowadays there seems to be no set season for such changes. Under our second pastorate, the largest revivals of the church occurred in the summer time. No vacations then for pulpit or pew. During July and August, 1834, we had a great awakening, when there were thirty-six conversions, a large number then for the size of the church, only 135 names on the membership roll. Among the converts at that early date was Sister Sims, who was baptized August 31, 1834. She soon will have reached her 71st spiritual birthday. Last week she celebrated the 88th anniversary of her natural birth. In the summer of 1837, our church had another revival, one of the largest in gatherings we ever had. There were 110 baptisms that year. Among the converts of that mid-summer was our brother, Jerome Pack, who is still with us enjoying his octogenarian days."

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson, who have been spending their vacation at Cottage City, Mass., and Washington, will return home from the latter place on Friday. Mr. Musson will occupy his pulpit at Faith chapel on Sunday.

CLIMAX OF RATE FIGHT

Royal Arcanum Supreme Council Will Reconsider Present Plans.

AT PUT-IN-BAY, OHIO

Various Council Eagerly Await Results—Complete Back Down Expected.

On August 30, at Put-in-Bay, O., the fight over the Royal Arcanum rates will reach a climax that will be watched with interest all over the country. The Supreme Council, which intended to put the new rates into effect on October 1, has, in compliance with almost unanimous demands, decided to reconvene and reconsider their action. The result can hardly be other than a complete back down on the part of the Supreme Council and the restoring of the old rates, or else an action by which the Supreme Council still maintains that its new scale of assessment must stand.

No plan has been suggested as a substitute for the new rates adopted. The various councils will expect to see the new rates declared unreasonable and void, and great developments will follow if the Supreme Council still holds to its intention to increase the assessments on the first of October. The argument advanced by the Supreme Council is that the increase is necessary to gather in enough money to pay the death benefits. And one member asks why this is necessary when the July report shows the order to be in better financial condition than ever before. The Supreme Council has not explained this to the satisfaction of the majority of the members, and the session at Put-in-Bay on August 30 will be a hummer. In case the action is not rescinded some of the councils will demand that the Supreme representatives be impeached; charged with gross incompetency, and new men selected to carry out the wishes of the members.

Some members, however, are of the opinion that the new rates are just, necessary to the maintenance of the order and should be submitted to by all who care to see the order live. One member of one of the local councils, who said some time ago that he believed the old rates were ridiculously low, had this to say regarding the special meeting of the Supreme Council at the end of this month:

"It is safe to say that no plan has been suggested as a substitute for the rates adopted by the Supreme Council that has not already been considered by the Supreme Council and discarded because it lacked the elements of efficiency and permanency.

"An intimate knowledge of the membership justifies me in saying that the mistaken notions that the old man is being overburdened is rapidly disappearing. Members are beginning to realize that the purpose of the Supreme Council is to lay up a fund to meet the advancing mortality cost due to increasing age, and thereby avoid increasing the rate as the member grows older, or by additional assessments. They are also beginning to realize that the young man, under the new rates, is obliged to contribute toward the cost of carrying the man 65 years or older who is now a member of the order. This is easily understood when I tell you that the cost of carrying the man aged 72 for $3,000 is $203.97, and for the man of 82 it is $483.60, whereas the order collects from these old members only $192.96, the order paying the difference between the mortality cost and the amount collected.

"The using of the larger part of the young man's contributions to pay the mortuary obligations of those at the ages of 50 years and upwards is becoming better understood, and the policy of the Supreme Council requiring each age to bear its own burden of mortality cost, leaving the excess contributions to the younger men to care for the increasing cost when they advance in years, and thus prevent advancing the rate to the now young man when he becomes an old man, is being accepted as equitable and just."

Whatever the outcome of the Supreme Council's action is, it can be stated now that the intention to raise the rates has had a bad effect on the order that will be felt forever. Confidence in the Arcanum has been shaken and there is no telling what the outcome will be. To get down to real facts and figures, as given out by the Supreme Council, it will be seen that members are dropping out of the order by the thousands, while the number of applications for admission have dropped to almost nothing. For instance, during the month of July no less than 6,046 members have withdrawn from the order. This includes councils all over the country. Of this number 424 are from New Jersey.

The number of applications for admission in May were 2,947; June, 1,255, and 405 in July. These figures, also, are compiled from records received from every council in the country. In New Jersey the figures were: May, 168 applications; June, 81, and but 22 in July. There is no telling what the figures will be for August.

The approximate membership of the entire order on July 31 was 310,061. There were but 229 deaths during the month.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Good, Broad Margin.

The Newark News in pictorially comparing Colby and Lentz makes Colby a 29 per cent. oculation of Lentz. That leaves Lentz 71 per cent. to the good. That is a good broad margin.—Jersey City Journal.

Much Nearer Right.

It would be much nearer right and proper if Asbury Park should insist that Ocean Grove should not be permitted to conduct a municipality under a private charter, and thus bid defiance to the State laws and State government.—Trenton True American.

Slow Recovery.

Those who know Supreme Court Justice Hendrickson will be pleased to hear that he is slowly recovering from the stroke of paralysis with which he was stricken a year ago. Judge Hendrickson is at Jamestown, Rhode Island, where he will remain till September 1, when he expects to be able to resume his Circuit Court duties.—Trenton State Gazette.

Sewage on Oyster Beds.

The Register acknowledges receipt of the annual report of the State Board of Health. As usual it contains much information interesting to all classes, but a new feature is the photographs of dairy conditions, and the great danger to public health from certain oyster and clam beds. Thirty-six photographs show beds where sewers have an outlet. It is no wonder that the clam and oyster dealers are stirred up over the revelations.—Sussex County Register.

The Anti-Deadly Weapon Law.

A law passed by the last Legislature makes it a crime to carry a revolver without a permit. In view of the experience of farmer Harry Lock's boys, in going to market last Monday night, our farmers should make application to Judge Jessup for a permit to go armed, and then should shoot to kill when disturbed.

The difficulty with laws of that class is that they don't affect the people they are enacted to affect—the lawless continue to go armed, while the law abiding observe the law, and frequently find themselves at a disadvantage.—Gloucester County Democrat.

Due to General Spencer.

The fact that the rifle range at Sea Girt has been brought into National prominence as a place for target practice, is largely due to the activity of General Bird Spencer.

For years General Spencer has labored for recognition of the importance of rifle practice as a part of the National Guard training and through his influence the various Legislatures have been persuaded to make appropriations necessary for the improvement and equipment of the Sea Girt range until it has been borught up to a point of excellence that ranks it with the best in this country if not in the world.—Burlington Enterprise.

The Baron Should Advertise.

Reports from Camden are to the effect that the German baron in jail there is now compelled to eat ordinary prison fare, as his money has run out. Why does he not advertise in a way to catch the eye of some title-seeking young daughter of a multi-millionaire American and offer his title and hand to her in return for proper maintenance? Such a plan might be successful. The young woman could be given a guarantee that he would not desert her for some time to come, and that would be an advantage not possessed by all of the titled foreigners looking for American heiresses.—Newark News.

Ought to Arouse Great Interest.

In scarcely more than a week the Sea Girt rifle range will be the scene of much animation. Then the regular annual practice will take place—a series of matches in which teams from the National Guard of more than two-thirds of the States of the Union will compete, together with marksmen from the army and navy and both the naval and military academies of the nation. This is an event that ought to arouse great interest. The tendency of modern warfare is to increase the importanec of the man who can shoot straight at long distances, and although we could wish that never again would the American soldier boy be called to arms, it is highly important that he be thoroughly drilled in marksmanship and equal to any expediency. —Asbury Park Journal.

NOTICE!
"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. C. W. James, Mr. C. W. James." Leading Druggists, 50c-$1c

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

TOPICS OF HOUSHOLD.

In Creole and other Southern recipes Northern cooks often find their plans frustrated by a demand for cocoanut milk, which is unobtainable in its natural state in these parts. This is the way it can be prepared: Put half a cupful of finely ground fresh cocoanut meat into a mortar, moisten it with cold water and pound it, adding cold water by the teaspoonful from time to time until the result is a fine, smooth paste. Then mix it with a cupful of milk or water and strain it through a cheese cloth, pressing through as much pulp as possible.

There is a delicious salad made of oxhart cherries stoned and cut in two, dice of pineapple and minced celery, all tossed lightly together and dressed with mayonnaise.

For deviled macaroni have on hand a cupful of boiled macaroni cut in short pieces. Make a sauce by cooking two tablespoonfuls of flour in two tablespoonfuls of butter and add a saltspoonful each of curry powder and mustard. Stir in little by little a cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes and cook until they thicken. Put a layer of the macaroni into a buttered baking dish, turn over it some of the sauce and sprinkle over that three or four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese. Then add the rest of the macaroni, the rest of the sauce, three or four more tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until the top is nicely browned.

When cold fish is left from the dinner save it for a salad. Break it into flakes, cover it with oil and vinegar and let it stand for an hour or so. Then drain it, add to it some finely cut celery if it is at hand and serve with French dressing of mayonnaise on lettuce leaves. If there is an insufficient quantity of fish piece it out with shredded lettuce or use more celery.

It is well to know that the yolks of two eggs are equal to a tablespoonful of flour for thickening causes. Sauces may be very easily varied in this way. French and German cooks decry the American way of thickening so often with flour and so seldom with eggs.

Few persons are left who use eggs for settling boiled coffee. Boiled coffee, by the way, is a misnomer, for no good coffee is ever boiled. It is brought only to the boiling point and checked there. But the so-boiled coffee, a term which distinguishes it from the drip kind, settles itself without any difficulty if handled gently and left to stand a couple of minutes before pouring. A tablespoonful or two of cold water turned in at the last minute is a safeguard, but is seldom, if ever, necessary.

DON'T WHINE.

Don't talk about your hard luck. Refuse to recognize it. Refuse to believe in it. Scorn to whine about it.

"Get the whine out of your voice, or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends; it will make you unpopular. Quit your whining; brace up, go to work; be something; stand for something; fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around, exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of a strong, ennobling womanhood, to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work."

If you continually talk about your bad luck and moan about your ill fortune, you create for yourself an atmosphere of misfortune which will certainly overwhelm you unless you stop in time.

The man or woman who persistently fears that such and such a thing is not going to turn out well is enlisting powerful forces against his success.

Two frogs once found themselves in a milk can, so the story goes.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear!" cried one. "I know we shall be drowned. We can never get out of this can!"

The other frog never waited to croak, but set vigorously to work to swim.

"Don't worry about getting out; kick out and swim," he said, cheerfully.

"I never can keep swimming till this milk can gets all the way into the city," croaked the first.

"Never mind—keep on kicking," said the little philosopher, and suiting the action to the word he began to kick and swim with all the strength of his little legs.

A few hours later, when the can was opened, one frog was found drowned at the bottom, while on top of the can, floating at ease on a pat of butter churned by his own vigorous kicking, sat the other, pensively humming "Down Went McGinty."

This little story has an obvious moral.

It is: Don't drown yourself by believing you can't swim, but keep on cheerfully striking out until, atom by atom, little by little, the realities of life will separate themselves from their surroundings and form themselves into a solid ground on which you may rest at ease.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

I pulled up my stocking and followed. You know I wear it in that act without a garter, and it's always coming down the way yours used to, Mag. Even when it doesn't come down I pull it up, I'm so in the habit of doing it.

A little bit of a man, bald-headed, with a dyspeptic little black mustache turned down at the corners, watched me come in. He grinned at my make-up, and then at me.

"Clever little girl," he says through his nose. "How much do you stick Obermuller for?"

"Clever little man," say I, bold as brass and through my own nose; "none of your business."

"Hi—you, Olden!" roared Obermuller, as though I'd run away and he was trying to get the bit from between my teeth. "Answer the gentleman prettily. Don't you know a representative of the mighty T. T. when you see him? Can't you see the syndicate aureole about his noble brow? This gentleman, Nance, is the great and only Max Tausig. He humbleth the exalted and uplifteth the lowly—or, if there's more money in it, he gives to him that hath and steals from him that hasn't, but would mighty well like to have. He has no conscience, no bowels, no heart. But he has got tin and nerve and power to beat the band. In short, and for all practical purposes for one in your profession, Nancy Olden, he's just God. Down on your knees and lick his boots—trust gods wear boots, patent leathers—and thank him for permitting it, you lucky baggage!"

I looked at the little man; the angry red was just fading from the top of his cocoanut-shaped bald head.

"You always were a fool, Obermuller," he said, cordially. "And you were always over-fond of your low-comedian jokes. If you hadn't been so smart with your tongue, you'd had more friends and not so many enemies in—"

"In the heavenly syndicate, eh? Well, I have lived without—"

"You have lived, but—"

"But where do I expect to go when I die? Good theatrical managers, Nance, when they die as individuals go to Heaven—they get into the trust. After that they just touch buttons; the trust does the rest. Bad ones—the kickers—the Fred Obermullers go to—a place where salaries cease from troubling and royalties are at rest. It's a slow place where—where, in short, there's nothing doing. And only one thing's done—the kicker. It's that place Mr. Tausig thinks I'm bound for. And it's that place he's come to rescue you from, from sheer goodness of heart and a wary eye for all there's in it. Cinch him, Olden, for all the traffic will bear!"

I looked from one to the other—Obermuller, big and savage underneath all his gay talk, I knew him well enough to see that; the little man, his mouth turned down at the corners and a sneer in his eye for the fellow that wasn't clever enough to get in with the push.

"You must not give the young woman the big head, Obermuller. Her own is big enough, I'll bet, as it is. I ain't prepared to make any startling offer to a little girl that's just barely got her nose above the wall. The slightest shake might knock her off altogether, or she mightn't have strength enough in herself to hold on. But we'll give her a chance. And because of what it may lead to, if she works hard, because of the opportunities we can give her, there ain't so much in it in a money way as you might imagine."

Obermuller didn't say anything. His own lips and his own eyes sneered now, and he winked openly at me, which made the little man hot.

"Blast it!" he twanged. "I mean it. If you've got any notion through my coming down to your dirty little joint that we've set our hearts on having the girl, just get busy thinking something else. She may be worth something to you—measured up against the dubs you've got; but to me—"

"To you, it's not so much your not having her as my having her that—"

"Exactly. It ain't our policy to leave any doubtful cards in the enemy's hands. He can have the bad ones. He couldn't get the good ones. And the doubtful ones, like this girl Olden—"

"Well, that's just where you're mistaken!" Obermuller thrust his hands deep in his pockets and put out that square chin of his like the fighter he is. "This girl Olden' is anything but doubtful. She's a' big card right now if she could be well handled. And the time isn't so far off when, if you get her, you people will be—"

"Just how much is your interest in her worth?" the little man sneered.

Obermuller glared at him, and in the pause I murmured demurely:

"Only a six-year contract."

Mag, you should have seen 'em jump—both of 'em; the little man with vexation, the big one with surprise.

A contract! Me?—Nance Olden! Why, Mag, you innocent, of course I hadn't. Managers don't give six-year contracts to girl-burglars who've never set foot on the stage.

When the little man was gone, Obermuller cornered me.

"What's your game, Olden?" he cried. "You're too deep for me; I throw up my hands. Come; what've you got in that smart little head of yours? Are you holding out for higher stakes? Do you expect him to buy that great six-year contract and divvy the proceeds with me? Because he will—when once they get their eye on you, they'll have you; and to turn up your nose at their offer is just the way to make them itch for you. But how the deuce did you find it out? And where do you get your nerve from, anyway? A little beggar like you to refuse an offer from the T. T. and sit hatching your schemes on your little old 'steen dollars a week! . . . It'll have to be twice 'steen, now, I suppose?"

"All right, just as you say," I laughed. "But why aren't you in the trust, Fred Obermuller?"

"Why aren't you in society, Nance?"

"Um!—well, because society's prejudiced against lifting, but the trust isn't. Do you know that's a great graft, Mr. Obermuller—lifting wholesale? Why don't you get in?"

"Because a trust is a lot of sailors on a raft who keep their places by kicking off the drowning hands that clutch at it. Can you fancy a fellow like Tausig stooping down to help me tenderly on board to divide the pickings?"

"No, but I can fancy you grappling with him till he'd be glad to take you on rather than be pulled off himself."

"You'd be in with the push, would you, Olden, if you were managing?" he asked, with a grin.

"I'd be at the top, wherever that was."

"Then why the deuce didn't you jump at Tausig's offer? Were you really crafty enough—"

"I am artiste, M. Obermuller," I gutturaled like Mdlle. Picotte, who dances on the wire. "I moost have about me those who arre—who arre congeniale—"

"You monkey!" he laughed. "Then, when Tausig comes to buy your contract—"

"We'll tell him to go to thunder."

He laughed. Say, Mag, that big fellow is like a boy when he's pleased. I guess that's what makes it such fun to please him.

"And I, who admired your business sagacity in holding off, Nance!" he said.

"I thought you admired my take-off of Mdlle. Picotte."

"Well?"

"Well, why don't you make use of it? Take me round to the theaters and let me mimic all the swell actors and actresses. I've got more chance with you than with that trust gang. They wouldn't give me room to do my own stunt; they'd make me fit into theirs. But you—"

"But me! You think you can wind me round your finger?"

"Not—yet."

He chuckled. I thought I had him going. I saw Nance Olden spending her evenings at the big Broadway theaters, when, just at that minute, Ginger, the call-boy, burst in with a note.

Say, Mag, I wouldn't like to get that man Obermuller hopping mad at me, and Nancy Olden's no coward, either. But the way he gritted his teeth at that note and the devil in his eye when he lifted them from it, made me wonder how I'd ever dared be facetious with him.

I got up to go. He'd forgotten me but he looked up then.

"That was a great suggestion of yours, Olden, to put Lord Gray on to act himself—great!" His voice shook, he was so angry.

"Well!" I snapped. I wasn't going to let him see that a big man raging could bluff Nance Olden.

What did he mean? Why—just this: There was Lord Harold Gray, the real lord behind the scenes, bringing the lady who was really only a chorus girl to the show in his automobile; helping her dress like a maid; holding her box of jewels as he tagged after her like a big Newfoundland; smoking his one cigarette solemnly and admiringly while she was on the stage; poking after her like a tame bear. He's a funny fellow, that Lord Harold. He's a Tom Dorgan, with the brains and the graft and—and the brute, too, Mag, washed out of him; a Tom Dorgan that's been kept dressed in swagger clothes all his life and living at top-notch—a big, clean, handsome, stupid, good-natured, overgrown boy.

Yes, I'm coming to it. When I'd seen him go tagging after her chippy ladyship behind the scenes long enough, I told Obermuller one day that it was absurd to send the mock lady out on the boards and keep the live lord hidden behind. He jumped at the idea, and they rigged up a little act for the two—the lord and the lady. Gray was furious when she heard of it—their making use of her lord in such a way—but Lord Harold just swallowed his big Adam's apple with a gulp or two, and said:

"'Pon honor, it's a blawsted scheme, you know; but I'm jolly sure I'd make a bleddy ass of myself. I cawn't act, you know."

The ninny! You know he thinks Gray really can.

Military Men Clash.

Trenton, Aug. 22—Colonel Dennis F. Collins and Major Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second Regiment, are said to have had a sharp clash as the result of a conflict of orders during the recent celebration of the battle of Elizabethtown. Colonel Collins has asked Major-General Wanser to appoint a board of inquiry, which shall investigate the case against Major Dungan. General Wanser's decision in the matter is expected in a few days. Military authorities here are reticent concerning the matter, and pending the receipt of orders from division headquarters no authoritive statement of the controversy seems to be obtainable.

Dalton thinks he will be able to return to the game on Saturday. His foot is getting well rapidly.

"Pete" Kiernan's little daughter, of whom he is very fond, has been seriously ill. "Pete" certainly has his troubles.

Elberfield's trick is to stand so close to the plate that the pitcher must get the ball over or else hit him. Getting hit with the ball has no terrors for him.

It is the general opinion that if Summit wins the pennant in the Lackawanna League it will be because the nine is the best in the league, despite the hard luck stories.

The Orange A. C. team, of the Lackawanna League, was snowed under yesterday at Trenton by the Y. M. C. A. aggregation, the score being 15 to 2. Clinton and Orr was the battery for the Orange team, and Milliken and McCune officiated for the home team.

Howard C. Griffiths yesterday secured an injunction restraining P. T. Powers and John C. Farrell from ousting him from the National Baseball Association, and he has also instituted two suits for damages in the sum of $25,000 each, against Powers and Farrell. This is another chapter in a long fight between Griffiths and the heads of the association.

Harry McCormick, who has been playing with Westfield, joined the York, Tri-State League Club, yesterday, and took part in the second game of a double-header with Williamsport. He had a record of two hits and three put-outs with no errors. He played left field. Applegate, of the Williamsport team, was spiked in the right hand in a collision with McCormick and was forced to retire.

The remaining dates with Westfield in the county championship series are as follows: August 26, Westfield at Plainfield; September 2, Plainfield at Westfield; September 4, Labor Day afternoon, Westfield at Plainfield; September 9, Plainfield at Westfield; September 16, Westfield at Plainfield. Many persons have wondered whether the entire series would be played if Plainfield should win a majority of games. It can be stated that the managers intend to play every game. By giving Westfield the first game on its grounds, Plainfield gets the Labor Day contest as well as the tenth game on Crescent Oval.

The West End baseball team, of Somerville, which has been trying out players all the season, has at last settled on the nine that will finish the schedule. The last changes made were "Red" Alberts, of Newark, in place of Weatherwad, of Plainfield, in left, and Hardy, of Jersey City, in place of J. Martin, of Plainfield, in center. The following is the schedule: Aug. 26, Central R. R.; Sept. 2, Pennington; Labor Day, Star A. C., of Newark; Sept. 9, Hopewell. It is expected that a three-game series will be arranged with the Plainfield management. If this goes through, the West Ends will probably use the same men now representing them on the diamond, as it is believed they are strong enough to compete successfully with any nine outside of the big leagues.

GOLF.

By Labor Day the members of the Plainfield Country Club will be returning home and then will follow an active season in golf and tennis until the cold weather calls a halt.

Marty O'Loughlin, the professional at the Plainfield Country Club, is constantly playing golf and his friends predict that he will beat the bogie score before the season is over.

C. B. Morgan, one of the active contestants for the Golf Committee cup at the Plainfield Country Club, has been away from the city on a vacation. He expects to return this week.

Leighton Calkins is to compile a list of professionals, similar to the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap list, to be used in the medal play event on September 16 at Fox Hills. Will Anderson probably will be at plus 4.

ROD AND GUN.

George Scribner and P. A. McVoy spent last night fishing in Ohl's pond, Central avenue. They had fair success.

NO HOPE IN OUTLOOK

Peace Envoys Postpone Next Meeting Until Tomorrow

BOTH SIDES FIRM

Possible That Final Formalities Will Drag On For Several Days— May Last Until Saturday.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 22.—Mr. Sato announced at 10:20 o'clock this morning that the meeting of the peace conference set for 3 o'clock today was adjourned till tomorrow, owing to the impossibility of having the protocols ready.

According to the programme announced after the adjournment last Friday, this will be the last session of the convention, a purely formal meeting held for the purpose of signing the protocols of agreement and disagreement. The session may continue over several days, but the legislative fiction will be called that of a single day, in order to simplify the record.

It the programme is carried out the Portsmouth conference might end tomorrow, and at the outside could hardly last over Saturday. Today everybody, not only here but pretty generally over the civilized world, is asking: "Will it be carried out?" There is no evidence to the contrary here. No one will lose all hope of peace until the envoys have packed their trunks and departed, for there is always the possibility that one side or the other is working a diplomatic bluff.

BIG CALENDAR AWAITS THE MIDDLESEX COURT

TWO PLAINFIELD CASES AMONG THOSE TO BE HEARD.

New Brunswick, Aug. 22.—Prosecutor Berdine, of Middlesex county, has more cases of unusual interest to present to the Grand Jury when it meets September 5 than he has had at any time since he has been prosecutor. The cases to be investigated include cruelty to a little girl, killing of the wife of Freeholder Westphal in an automobile crash, shooting to death of a man at South Amboy, stabbing of man at Bonhamtown, attempted elopment of girl at Metuchen and the seduction of another Metuchen young woman by a Plainfield married man.

The first case of importance is that of Mrs. Laura Withington Monteith, of Kingston, the proprietor of a boarding house there and a woman whose acquaintances included the Clevelands and other well known people at Princeton, who was arrested and brought before Justice Sedam on the charge of cruelly beating her adopted daughter, Pearl, seven years old.

About the time this case came before the public an automobile accident happened at Dunellen in which a machine driven by William R. Stanbery and in which Mrs. Westphal was riding, crashed into a wagon driven by Oscar Harrison. Mrs. Westphal was fatally hurt. Both men have been arrested on charges of manslaughter and are now out on bail.

In a saloon at South Amboy Michael Mitchell, also known as Michael Stefal, was shot. The proprietor, Ludwig Goveyca, is charged with the murder. Goveyca alleges the shooting was accidental and Stafel signed a statement exonerating him.

At Bonhamtown Alexander Howarth, of this city, was stabbed by Stephen Klung in a fight near the hotel of Michael Fedak. Klung was arrested and brought to jail here and Howarth was taken to the hospital, where he is recovering.

Metuchen was the next town to attract attention when William Braun tried to elope last Thursday night with Miss Loise Gessler, a girl fifteen years of age. She packed her things, dropped her bag out of an attic window and jumped twenty-two feet to the ground from the cornice of the house. Her spine was injured and her sweetheart sent to jail on the charge of assault.

On Saturday, Lambert Edmonds, a married man with four children, living at Plainfield, planned to go away with Miss Anna Hubbell. He was arrested, charged with seduction by the girl. He is also in jail here.

Fire Fighter on a Junket.

Ambrose Campbell, of the borough fire department, left today on his annual summer vacation. He will first go to Flemington and then to Easton, Pa.

Mr. Barkalew Improved.

Former Freeholder Lewis E. Barkalew, of Lincoln place, who was quite ill with dysentery, is much improved and is now able to be about the house.

Miss Hattie Mattison, the register of vital statistics at the Board of Health office, has about recovered from a recent operation for appendicitis and expects to return home in a few days.

—William Krausse, of Vine street, has the contract for installing the heating apparatus in the new parish house of Grace church.

BOROUGH DEMOCRATS TO HOLD A POW-WOW

PUBLIC MEETING AT SOMERSET STREET SCHOOL THURSDAY NIGHT.

The North Plainfield Democrats will meet in the Somerset schoolhouse Thursday night to talk over candidates for borough offices and candidates for delegates to the county convention. The leaders say all Democrats will be welcome at the meeting.

A mayor, two councilmen and two justices of the peace are to be elected this year. Avowed candidates, or even suggested candidates, on the Democratic side are so scarce as to be almost totally lacking.

One of the leaders said this morning that he couldn't think of a name in connection with the nominations. Faint mention of S. S. Swackhamer for the mayoralty is heard on the street, but the talk lacks vigor and is not seriously regarded. It is not according to political ethics for an ex-assemblyman and an ex-gubernatorial possibility to run for mayor of a borough. Especially when the salary is next to nothing.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF CAUGHT AT THREE BRIDGES

HE IS BELIEVED TO BE A MEMBER OF AN ORGANIZED GANG.

Somerville, Aug. 22.—Because he was thrown from the back of a horse which he was riding near Three Bridges Sunday, the identity of Andro Rymo, an alleged horse thief, was revealed to the Somerset county authorities and he was placed in the county jail here by County Detective Totten, charged with stealing from Runyon Field, of Bound Brook, the horse which threw him in the road.

Field says Rymo applied to him a short time ago for work on his farm. After a short service Rymo selected the best horse he could find in the stable on Saturday night and started for Pennsylvania. He traveled all night and was many miles from the Field farm when he was captured. It has long been the practise of horse thieves to flee to Pennsylvania with animals stolen from this section.

Descriptions of Rymo were sent broadcast by the Bound Brook Vigilant Society. It is believed that he is a member of an organized gang of horse thieves that has stolen many horses in Somerset county. Rymo was taken before Justice of the Peace Kitchen here, who committed him to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

TENNIS AT ELIZABETH.

M. H. Long and C. A. Briggs, of This City, to Play in Doubles.

The Bronx Tennis Club, with courts on Albert street, have made entries in the doubles tournament for the East Jersey challenge cup to be held on the courts of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club beginning August 29, and lasting until September 5.

Prizes will be given to the winners of first place and to the runners-up of the tournament. Monroe H. Long and Chester H. Briggs will represent the club in the doubles. While no entries have yet been made by the Bronx Club in the singles, it is probable that Briggs, who is now playing at Newport, will enter for the club.

Maggie Benford Succumbs.

Maggie Benford, of Cottage place, an old offender in the city court, was found helplessly drunk in the hallway of a residence on Somerset street yesterday afternoon by Chief Marshal Weis. The Chief put Maggie in a cell until she recovered from the effects of her carousal and then sent for her family to take her home. No charge was preferred against her, because she did not create any disturbance.

Death of Wesley S. Dunn.

Wesley Starbuck Dunn, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Johnson Dunn, of Westervelt avenue, died at 10:30 o'clock this morning, after a week's illness with dysentery. He was a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Dunn, of Sandford avenue. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

In the Borough Court.

William Bellis, arrested Saturday night for being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner, appeared before Recorder Doud last night. He pleaded guilty to the charge and paid the five dollars fine which the Recorder fixed rather than going to jail for seven days.

A "Monster" Muskmelon.

Manager E. W. Mills, of the U. S. Express Company office here, has received one of the largest muskmelons seen in this vicinity. It is nearly twelve inches in diameter. The melon is consigned to Joseph H. Howell, of Myrtle avenue.

Walter Sampson and sister, Miss Cornelia Sampson, of East Fifth street, are among the Plainfielders at Asbury Park.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow and Dr. Norman H. Probasco returned this morning from their vacation spent in Canada.

NO CONCERT FRIDAY.

Next Week Leader LaVere Will Have Double Programme.

For the first time since the series started early in the summer there will be no band concert this week. Bandmaster LaVere reached this conclusion today after considering the fact that a play will hold the boards at the new theatre and that there are minor attractions that would tend to make the music fest a side issue. A week from Friday he declares he will have a concert and a display of fireworks doubly as large as the one last week. He is now at work arranging the details with the pyrotechnic company.

The funds for the weekly concert have been exhausted and the probabilities are that the one next week may be the last for the season. It was hoped that they might be continued until the first of October.

What Imagination Will Do.

Under a scare head caption, the News, last night, published a sensational story about John H. Cose nearly losing his life while bathing in the surf at Asbury Park, Sunday. Mr. Cose declares the article to be purely imagination as he spent Sunday quietly at his home on Spooner avenue, and knew nothing of his "close call" until asked about it by friends.

Manager E. W. Mills, of the U. S. Express Co., has been detained at home with an attack of dysentery.

Harry Dreier, of West Front street, who was detained at his home with an attack of dysentery, is now able to be at his store again.

Crap Games Numerous.

The fondness of those who inhabit the swimming hole for that popular game of crap is becoming well known to the police, and Patrolman McCarthy now makes it a part of his duty to make frequent trips to the pool on Green brook. It is a poor day when he does not find nearly 100 men and boys of all sizes and age playing the game for various amounts.

Miss Justina Smith and brother, of Duer street, have returned home from New York State, where they have been sojourning for two months. Miss Smith is much improved in health.

MANAGER DAAB'S PLANS

Has Arranged Some Good Games For Remainder of the Season.

GIANTS MAY COME.

Will Continue His Local Relations Next Year and May Possibly Secure New Grounds.

While the local baseball season is more than half over, there are yet many fine contests arranged by Manager Daab, and providing the usual good weather prevails the remainder of the summer, the fans will have a feast of good ball. There is every reason to believe that fandom has fully enjoyed the fine article of baseball furnished by Manager Daab, and that he is a true sport is shown by the fact that in the face of many obstacles he has stood firm and continued to give the public full value.

He has made a host of friends here by his honesty and fairness with the people, and every fan will be delighted to know that he has decided to continue his relations here next season, and that he will present the same fast article of ball that has given Plainfield the reputation this year of having the best independent team in the country. He is very well satisfied with his first year locally and appreciates the way he has been treated by the public. It is with the feeling that he has many friends and that they want the best ball that has led him to continue here next year.

Mr. Daab feels that the season has given him a good opportunity to get acquainted with the people and conditions in Plainfield and they have impressed him so favorably that he is assured of loyal support. One strong factor recognized by Mr. Daab is that local interest plays a large part in the national game here, and another season he hopes to increase this materially by securing games with strong teams throughout the county and other parts of the State, with occasional contests with first class teams from the metropolitan district and elsewhere.

Mr. Daab is not altogether pleased with the present location of the baseball grounds, and he will undoubtedly make a change before next season opens. He realizes the difficulty of handling a large crowd on the Arlington avenue trolley, while the accommodations at the oval are not up to his idea. His plan is to secure suitable grounds on the main line of the trolley within a few minutes of the business section, enclose the same and have them equipped in a first class manner. With this purpose in mind it is safe to say that it will be accomplished, for Mr. Daab is known as a man of his word and is not easily discouraged.

There is probably no man in New Jersey who has been such a successful manager as Mr. Daab. He enjoys the confidence and respect of every player, and they know they have the same regard from him. Now that the national game is on a good, solid foundation here, with a team second to none in its class, fandom may feel assured that Plainfield will take its place among the leading cities of the country as a baseball center.

For the purpose of increasing local interest, Mr. Daab has arranged to play three games with the Summit team at the close of the Lackawanna League season. They will be played on Crescent Oval, and the fact that Summit will undoubtedly win the pennant in its league will give Plainfield the chance of playing the best nine. Summit can be depended upon to bring a large crowd of rooters. Another contest sure to be filled with interest is the one scheduled with Dover for September 23 on the oval, when many favorites will be seen here. In the meantime the Daabsters will continue to clean up Westfield.

As a final attraction for the season, Mr. Daab will probably arrange to bring the New York Nationals here. If this can be fixed, he will try to secure Louis Wiltse to pitch for the locals and arrange for his brother, George Wiltse, to twirl for the Giants. This would make the contest well worth going many miles to see, as many believe the Plainfielder to be stronger than his brother.

Providing the locals win the next two games from Westfield, it is likely that Mr. Daab will give "Phil" Smith, the High School twirler, an opportunity to face the Denmanites. He has heard much about Smith and is inclined to favor him.

One feature that has encouraged Mr. Daab much this year is a noticeable decrease in the "knocking," and he hopes that it will practically be eliminated. When his efforts to give the best ball are appreciated by those inclined to too much criticism, praise will surely take the place of "knocking."

Dr. W. E. Mattison, of Somerset street, is ill at his home.

FOUR HORSES LOST IN A COUNTRY FIRE

HENRY RANDOLPH'S BARN IN PISCATAWAY ENTIRELY DESTROYED.

Piscataway township was the scene of a disastrous fire early yesterday morning, when a barn and all of its contents on the farm of Henry Randolph, below New Market, were destroyed by flames. The fire swept rapidly through the building after being discovered, and it had made such headway when Mr. Randolph was aroused that he was unable to save any of the contents.

The losses include the barn, four horses and a quantity of hay and grain. The money loss will amount to several thousands of dollars.

Some of the neighbors went to the aid of Mr. Randolph, whose farm is not far from Stelton, and the combined efforts of the volunteers succeeded in keeping the flames away from the other outbuildings and the dwelling house, but the fight was a hard one.

The origin of the fire is not known. The barn was the one in which seventeen-year-old William Matthews committed suicide last week by hanging himself to a hay mow.

VENTURESOME BOY FALLS DOWN WATCHUNG DAM

ATTIRED IN NATURE'S GARB TRIED TO WALK ACROSS IT.

The adventuresome spirit of George Webster, son of Frank O. Webster, of Duer street, got him into trouble yesterday and he is now at his home under the care of Dr. D. C. Adams, who hopes to bring him about in a short time.

George, with several companions, had been fishing and swimming about Watchung Lake, in Washington Valley, and desiring to cross the lake, tried to walk across the large dam. A considerable amount of water was running over and the planks which form the shed over which the water passes were very slippery. George had gone only a short distance when he lost his balance and slid the entire distance, from the top to the bottom, where he struck a pile of jagged rocks. He received a long cut in the side and his arms and back were badly scraped. After much difficulty he reached the bank and managed to get his clothes on.

He then walked to the terminus of the Somerset street trolley where he took a car for home, reaching there about 5 o'clock. Dr. D. C. Adams was summoned at once and he made two calls last night. While the boy suffers a great deal of pain, the physician does not think his injuries are serious.

EDMONDS MAY ESCAPE.

Hubble Girl Said to Have Been Warned Against Him.

A way of escape from the criminal consequences of his entanglement with Miss Anna Hubbell, the Metuchen girl who had him arrested on a charge of seduction, is said to have opened for Lambert Edmonds. A man who is acquainted with Edmonds and to whom he spoke of his trouble last week, declares he was told that the Hubble girl was informed that Edmonds was a married man early in the couple's acquaintance. If that is so, and Edmonds can prove it, the girl will have to be content with civil proceedings.

On the other hand, if Edmonds is proved to have posed as a single man, unsuspected by the girl, he is likely to suffer heavy punishment. The sentiment against the crime of which he is accused is very strong in farming communities.

Building Ready for Removal.

Contractor Mobus expects to move Charles W. McCutchen's brick building from Park avenue to West Second street, inside of two weeks. The cellar is about excavated and the work of laying the new foundation will be rushed as fast as possible. Alex. Kane has about completed his work of demolishing the old structures on Park avenue.

Auto Victim Confined to Bed.

Mrs. E. O. Edgar, of Central avenue, Westfield, who was injured in an automobile accident at that place on Sunday afternoon, is confined to her bed and under the care of a physician.

Who It Was.

It was George VanNest, Jr., son of George VanNest, that figured in the escape with the Seader boy a few days ago, and not Arthur VanNest, son of Charles VanNest, as stated.

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTING

Plainfield Well Represented in the Annual Trip to Whitestone, L. I.

SLATE FOR UNION

Situation in the County Will Be Discussed and the Local Discontent Sized Up.

Politics and pleasure are being intermingled today at the annual outing of the Elizabeth City Democratic Committee, which is attended by all the faithful throughout the county. Plainfield is well represented, the genial "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine and S. S. Swackhamer being among the first to arrive at the starting point. Duer's Park, Whitestone, L. I., is to be the destination, and the pleasant weather at the start leads to the belief that it will be the most successful affair of its kind in years.

The iron steamer Cygnus, one of the finest vessels in this vicinity, is conveying the excursionists, and will probably reach the grove at 2 o'clock. Then the party will partake of some refreshments and incidentally discuss the situation in Union county and name a slate for Union. The present discontent of the Republicans in Plainfield at ring rule will be a topic of conversation.

A program of sports has been arranged, and athletes of the Jeffersonian persuasion will compete. Hughie Boyle, who usually takes care of this end of the affair, is in charge this year, and has fixed things in good shape. There will be a fat man's race, with several obese Democrats participating; also a 100-yard dash, obstacle race, tug of war, and baseball game. In this contest the Pick-Me-Ups and Throw-Me-Downs will be opponents, and will try to develop some stunts with which to surprise the McKinley Club diamond artists when the teams meet later in the season.

The excursionists will also be photoed by Herbert A. Pierson, of Elizabeth, and will again be feted after the games. The return trip will be made so as to give the guests a glimpse at dear old Coney. Badges were distributed to the guests. The boat left the Chancellor Dock promptly at 9 o'clock. James' orchestra was on the boat to discourse music and soothe the cohorts with harmonious airs.

Among the notables on board are Hon. William B. Gourley, State Democratic chairman; Hon. James A. Hammill, of Jersey City; Hon. James E. Martine, of this city; Hon. Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield; Colonel Edward Stevens, of Castle Hook, Hoboken; Hon. Leon Abbott, Hon. John T. Dunn, Hon. P. J. Ryan, Hon. DeWitt C. Flanigan, and Mayor Berry, of Elizabeth.

FACTORY MAY MOVE.

Newhall Company Looking Over Site at New Brunswick.

An effort is being made to get the Newhall Ship Chandler Company, of which Henry B. Chandler, of this city, is the head, to locate its large factory in New Brunswick. General Manager John W. Bankeross, of the company, has been in that city looking over various sites and after looking over the factories available found one well adapted for the company's business.

It is felt confident that the company will settle in New Brunswick, as its manager liked the city and the advantages, as well as the reasonable price at which he could purchase the factory offered. The firm manufactures marine hardware and the famous "Neptune Brand" hardware.

Naughty Immigrant.

Naciiasek Miciola, a Slav, was arrested by Officer Payne on West Front street last night, for helpless drunkenness. Naciiasek has only been in the country three months, and Judge Runyon was scandalized when he learned that an immigrant had begun his career in a new land by loading up. He fined Naciiasek $3 as a warning to keep himself spotless and pure.

Collier Defeats Rockwell.

Paul Collier played Sidney Rockwell in the semi-final round of the Y. M. C. A. tennis tournament on the Cedar Brook court, Saturday morning. Collier had things all his own way and won easily, 6—1, 6—3. By winning this match, Collier earned a right to play in the finals with T. O. Gavett later in the week. This match will probably be played on the Cedar urday.

Laying Long Distance Gas Main.

The Public Service Corporation gas department is making excellent progress in the work of laying a main between this city and Bound Brook. It will be eventually laid to Somerville and the several towns along the line will be supplied with gas from the Plainfield plant.

NEW FACTORY TO BE LOCATED IN EAST END

NEW YORK FIRM LEASES OLD OILCLOTH WORKS.

The Sherwood Metal Working Company, of 149 Broadway, New York, has leased the old oilcloth factory on North avenue, and expects to take possession September 1. The company is engaged in the manufacture of iron doors, sashes and all kinds of metal work and the company will probably employ a force of 100 men at the local factory. The lease for the property was signed yesterday and a representative of the company will be here in a few days to arrange for putting the plant in shape.

Considerable work will be necessary to equip the buildings for the new business, but a large force of men will be engaged and it is hoped to have it in readiness at an early date.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER WEDS TROY YOUNG WOMAN

CEREMONY TOOK PLACE AT THE BRIDE'S HOME TODAY.

Miss Mannell, of Troy, N. Y., and Clarence Rogers, formerly of this city, but now of Miami, Florida, were married today at the home of the bride. After the ceremony and reception, the couple left for Shiloh, this State, where they will remain during the Seventh-Day Baptist church conference. They will then go to Miami to live.

Mr. Rogers, who is the nephew of L. T. Rogers, of Central avenue, and with whom he lived while here, is a graduate of the Rensslaer Polytechnic Institute, at Rensslaer, N. Y., and it was while a student there that he met Miss Mannell. For a long time he was employed in the civil engineering office of Frank J. Hubbard, and left there to accept the position of assistant engineer for the Key West Railroad, with offices at Miami. Mr. Rogers lived in Florida for several years prior to coming to Plainfield.

Mrs. Rogers belongs to one of the prominent families in Troy and is a most estimable young woman. She enjoys a large circle of acquaintances at her home and she was well remembered through a large collection of wedding presents.

STEERED WITH ONE HAND.

Small Boy on a Bike and Big Touring Car Come Together.

As a big touring car, in which Mrs. W. B. Joyce, of Cranford, three women guests and the chauffeur rode, shot over the North avenue crossing at Park avenue this forenoon, a bicycle, on which rode Thomas Colton, thirteen years old, the son of Joseph Colton, of West Third street, approached down North avenue. Thomas was carrying a package and steering with one hand. He saw that the auto was in his path and made a valiant one-handed attempt to steer clear, but the bike butted squarely into the side of the car.

Thomas was bruised, his clothes were dirtied and his bicycle was put out of business. The automobile wasn't hurt.

CHANCELLOR TO DECIDE.

Both City and County Will Pay Over Long Reward to Him.

Who is to get the Long reward in its entirety will be decided by the Court of Chancery. Following the example of the city of Trenton, which offered half of the money, the Mercer County Board of Freeholders decided, at a meeting yesterday, to pay the county's $250 into the Chancellor's hands, and let him decide where it belongs.

This action by the city and county will save them from defending the suits for $1,000 each, brought by Franklin Van Nuis, who disputes Chief Kiely's claim to the money. The Van Nuis suits are set for a hearing in New Brunswick September 8.

Another Disturber Fined.

William Robinson, a plumber, was arrested by the city police yesterday, on a charge of being one of the crowd of disturbers in the rear of the Watchung Silk Mills Sunday. Robinson appeared before Recorder Doud in the borough court last night and pleaded guilty. He paid a $5 fine in preference to going to jail for seven days.

Death of Young Son.

Patrick Day, the six-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Day, of South Plainfield, died yesterday afternoon after a few days' illness. Funeral services will be held at the parents' home tomorrow morning. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

DENMAN WILL PROTEST

Declares Result of Saturday's Game Should Not be Allowed to Stand.

QUOTES SIMILAR CASE

Insists That O'Neill Had No Right to Interfere With Batsman In Effort to Prevent Flynn Scoring.

On the ground that O'Neill had no right to interfere with the batsman, Joe Wall, in an effort to prevent Flynn from scoring in Saturday's Plainfield-Westfield game at Westfield, Manager Denman today announced that he would protest the contest to Manager Daab. The Westfield manager claims that for interference on the part of O'Neill, Flynn should have been allowed to score, that by stepping on the plate, while Deegan was in the box ready to deliver the ball, he violated the baseball rules.

In speaking of the matter today, Mr. Denman quoted a similar play which happened in the Detroit-Washington game at Detroit yesterday. The account of that game says: "Today's game broke up in a row in the eleventh inning. Hill on third broke for home, and Warner touched him, but Umpire Sheridan declared that Warner had interfered, so he allowed the run to score and Anderson to take first base. The Detroits refused to play and forfeited the game to Washington."

The same thing happened at Westfield Saturday, and as in the Detroit-Washington game, the score was 2 to 1. Mr. Denman does not question Umpire Henning's honesty for one minute, but after looking up the rules and noticing the comment on yesterday's game, he has decided to enter a protest. He says that O'Neill admitted after the game that it was his place to take every chance, which he did, and if he was wrong, it was up to the umpire to say so.

There are many persons who claim that Deegan was not in the box and in position to pitch the ball when Flynn attempted the squeeze play, and that the ball was a thrown and not a pitched one. Others are just as sure that Deegan was in the box and had wound himself up preparatory to pitching the ball. There is now a bet of $10 on this point between two local fans, but it is a question as to who shall decide it.

Mr. Denman says that he believes Henning gave the decision with every idea of being fair, the same as Merity gave a questionable decision in the twelve inning game on Crescent Oval, but being convinced that the decision was contrary to the rules, he will protest. The matter will be submitted to Manager Daab and a decision will probably be reached before Saturday.

Mr. Denman says that Patience has left him to play with Central Islip, and that he will have a good man in his place on Saturday. As for McCormick, who is now playing at York, Pa., he says that according to his arrangements the player is to be with him on Saturdays, and that he only went to York to play during his vacation. He expects to have him in right field on Saturday.

Oak Tree A. A.'s Dance.

Under the auspices of the Oak Tree A. A. a successful dance was held last night. Over 300 guests were present and the festivities continued until a late hour. All of the refreshments were sold out early in the evening. A feature of the dance was the music, which was furnished by Prof. Sam Frazee, the veteran, and all were so pleased with it that he was engaged for another dance to be held on September 12. The committee in charge comprised Chester Huff, Fred Stover and Bryant Randolph.

Rev. A. F. Irvine to Speak.

Rev. A. F. Irvine, who is to address the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday, August 27, is perhaps the most prominent speaker in the country. He is closely allied with the Labor Unions of his native city, New Haven, Conn., and is frequently called upon to settle the differences between the men and their employers. Carl Haynes, of the Mt. Vernon M. E. church, Washington, D. C., will sing and Miss Eva Wells, of Westfield, will also give a solo.

Realty Company Organized.

The Picton Realty Company filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State at Trenton yesterday. The capital stock is placed at $125,000, and the following incorporators were named: William Bloodgood and Mulford Scudder, of Picton, and William J. Taylor, of Plainfield.

Juniors to Visit Somerville.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will visit the Somerville Council next Monday night, making the trip by trolley. On Labor Day afternoon the council will go to Cranford to attend a flag raising by the local council.

JUSTICE HAND BOOMS HIMSELF ON OUTING

DENIES HIS CANDIDACY FOR SHRIEVALTY NOMINATION IS A JOKE.

Justice Hezekiah Hand closed up his court this morning to go on the Democratic County Committee outing to Whitestone, L. I. The judge will do some missionary work in behalf of his candidacy for the shrievalty nomination. He is grieved at the general tendency to regard his boom as a joke.

"Young man," he said to a reporter yesterday, "I am not the man to make sport of an office as important as the shrievalty, and when I say I am after it, I am after it. Don't regard this as a joke.

"For a good many years I was a court officer at Elizabeth, and I consider my record there and as a justice of the peace, not to mention my term as postmaster at Scotch Plains, entitles me to serious consideration as a candidate for the higher office."

James B. Guttridge is managing the judge's boom at this end of the county.

CHILDREN HOLD BENEFIT FOR MOUNTAIN BABY CAMP

DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT NETS $7 FOR THE CAUSE.

For the benefit of the King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountains, a number of girls and boys held a lawn party and entertainment last night at the home of H. C. VanEmburgh, on Richmond street. The affair was largely attended and liberally patronized, and after deducting about $3 for expenses, the young folks turned over $7 to The Daily Press this morning for the baby camp.

The large lawn was attractively decorated and illuminated with Japanese lanterns, while numerous tables were placed about the grounds at which refreshments were served.

The programme, which was in charge of H. C. VanEmburgh, consisted of a vocal solo, "Dairy Maid," Miss Daisy Robinson; recitations, Frank Simpson, Raymond Cutter, Harvey Thorn, Walter Fisher, the Misses Helen Baker, Mabel Koch, Ruth Klein, Margaret and Mabel Loizeaux, Isabelle Gloak, Bessie Adleberg; songs, the Misses May Koch and Daisy Robinson. The latter also sang "Hiawatha." Miss Bessie Adleberg and Bennie Adleberg sang a Japanese love song. Miss Helen Baker represented the shoemaker in a song called the "Shoe Shop," and the others sang the selection. The Misses Marguerite Walsh, Sadie Moskowitz and Mabel Loizeaux gave a doll baby drill, and Miss Sadie Moskowitz sang a song called "Pansy." Other songs were "Wee Little Lad" and "Baby's Boat," Miss Isabelle Gloak; "Christmas," the Misses Margaret and Mabel Loizeaux, and the last number was a recitation, "The Crows," by Miss Margaret Loizeaux.

Miss Daisy Robinson, who took a very active part in the affair, was presented with two handsome bouquets of flowers by Fred VanEmburgh, after her two vocal solos.

Those who arranged the affair and had charge, comprised the following: The Misses Daisy Robinson, May Koch, Ruth Klein, Bessie Adleberg, Helen Baker, Hazel Fress, Margaret and Mabel Loizeaux, Isabelle Gloak, Sadie Moskowitz, Gladys Edsall, Marguerite Walsh and Bennie Adleberg, Walter Fisher, Harvey Thorn, Raymond Cutter and Frank Simpson.

ARRANGING OX ROAST.

Local Colored People to Have Big Time on September 14.

Under the auspices of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church an ox roast and barbecue will be held on Thursday, September 14, and no pains are being spared to make it one of the greatest events of the year or in the history of the church. The ox will be cooked whole and will be guaranteed to be as tender as a squab. In addition, Toney Brothers' Mandolin Club will furnish the music for the occasion, which will be held on the large lawn directly back of the church.

The committe of arrangements comprises I. H. Hooper, Alexander Still, W. M. Grobes, A. P. White, E. B. Maynard, Henry Williams, Thomas Johnson, Major Selby, Spencer Kelly and Elmer Thomas. A committee of women will also assist. The affair will start at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, and dinner will be served from 12:30 noon to 11:30 at night. If stormy the affair will be held on the next fair day.

Vets to Have Reunion.

The sixteenth annual reunion of the Thirty-fifth N. J. Vols., will be held at Morristown on Labor Day.

CONDUCTORS LOSE MONEY

New Cash Registers in P. S. C. Cars Work Queerly They Say.

ONE RETAINS LAWYER

Amos Stites Fights Against Payment of Alleged Shortage—Hints of Graft Among Officials.

General dissatisfaction among the conductors of the P. S. C. over the new-fangled cash registers, on which all the various fares, from three cents to twenty-five cents, are recorded, has reached an acute stage. One suit is threatened as a result of them, and others are likely to follow.

The complaint against the registers is that they are continually getting out of order, making the conductors liable to costly mistakes in ringing up fares. Since the registers were introduced a year ago reports of shortages in money turned in have become the expected thing by conductors. So common have the "shortages" become that the conductors are openly hinting at some sort of graft game, which the peculiar character of the register makes it possible to work.

The suit with which the company is threatened grew out of an investigation made by Amos Stites, of this city, a conductor, into an alleged shortage of $12.11 in his last month's returns. Stites was told of the shortage by the local paymaster. Totally unable to understand the shortage, he went to the auditor's office in Newark, and asked for an accounting. The auditor said the shortage was $5.65, and could find no entries to make it bigger in a search of all his books. Stites took the auditor's statement to the paymaster. He was willing to pay $5.65, but the paymaster insisted his accounts were all right, and $12.11 was due the company.

Stites refused to stand for the demand and placed the matter in the hands of Lawyer H. C. Runyon.

The wages due him amount to $27.50. He is not working, but refuses to turn in his badge and number until his wages are paid. If the company does not settle in a few days suit will be brought and a good deal of interesting testimony will mark the hearing.

All his fellow conductors are intensely interested in the outcome of Stites' action.

"Those registers were put there to do the conductors," said one of them in commenting on the action, "but I don't think the big men were on to it. This kick will probably open their eyes to what's been going on."

As an example of how the registers work, the men tell of a new conductor who recently stepped up to the pay window to collect his first full week's wages, $15. He was told there was a shortage against him.

"How much?" he asked.

"Fourteen dollars and ninety-five cents," answered the paymaster, and pushed a nickel at him.

There was room for another conductor on the next run of the new man's car.

More Haste; Less Speed.

A laughable incident to all, except the interested parties, happened on the 5:10 train from New York, last night. This train, as many persons know, is an express to Plainfield, but last night it slowed up at Elizabethport and a number of young men at that station, in a hurry to get to their homes in Elizabeth, jumped on, thinking, of course, that the train stopped at Elizabeth. As usual, the train went through Elizabeth at a forty mile rate and the expressions on the faces of the young men were most amusing to the regular commuters. The young men got off at Plainfield and paid their fares back to Elizabeth. So much for being in a hurry.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

In accordance with his promise of making improvements at the loop lunch and waiting room, William Sanford, the proprietor, started yesterday to better the appearance of the building at the trolley turn. Work on painting the structure was started and the sloping roof is now of a bright red color, the work of Mr. Sanford's son. The Public Service Corporation, too, is doing some good work in the interest of its patrons at the loop. Since the loop has been in service there have been several heavy rainfalls, causing the clay ground within the tracks to turn to sticky mud, which stuck to passengers' feet as they went from car to car. To prevent this in the future, the company sent four carloads of sand and ashes to the loop yesterday, to be spread over the soil there to act as a heavier and more solid foundation for people to walk on. This mixture was spread over the place and drainage pipes were fixed, so that the entire place now presents a better appearance.

Work was started on the gas main again toward Lincoln yesterday, beginning at Gallagher's corner. Next week work on the south side of the track will be begun. There have been a number of complaints by drivers of passing wagons because their carts have been caught in the sand piles which have been blown over from the work on the mains, and it now seems as if someone or something should be placed near the danger spot to warn passersby.

Word has been received here that Harry Giddes, who is staying with his brother at Staten Island, had a narrow escape from drowning Monday at Midland Beach. Giddes was swimming there with his brother, when he got beyond the lines and was seized with a cramp. Only the quick work of a life guard saved the boy's life. When he was landed he was brought to in a few minutes.

Will Beekman, holder of the record time on a bicycle between Dunellen and Plainfield, made the ride between Somerville and Dunellen in the record time of twenty-eight minutes, which is going quite some.

Four stages will be run to the clambake at Washington Rock on Sunday. One-half of the proceeds realized will be devoted toward the improvement of the road leading up to the Rock.

Work on the new Roach house is nearing completion rapidly. James Eganey put the finishing touches to the tinning work yesterday, and the place is now about ready for the masons.

New Market will play at Clinton avenue on Saturday.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The annual picnic and outing of St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, was held yesterday afternoon in the grove near the Back Pond. Many of the friends and members of the parish from her and Plainfield were out to enjoy the day with Rev. Linus Schwartz and his flock. Games and refreshments were enjoyed by both old and young, but the older members found time to indulge in reminiscences of the past, as St. Mary's church is one of the oldest R. C. churches in this part of the State. It is considered the mother church of St. Mary's church, Plainfield. Rev. Mr. Schwartz, who has been rector of the old parish for the past two years, is a young man deeply interested in his work, and has proven a worthy successor to Rev. Father Chandler, who served the ministerial wants of the parish for many years.

Manager Denman is more determined than ever to take Saturday's game against the Daabsters. While Plainfield has so far won a majority of the games played, still the scores have been so close that the excitement of the games last until the last man is retired.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Clark, of Newark, have been visiting at the home of Mr. Clark's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Clark, of Prospect avenue.

Tecumseh Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will initiate two members into the mysteries of the order at the regular meeting of the council tomorrow night.

Mrs. William R. Buckley left today for a stay of several weeks with relatives and friends at Brimfield, Mass., amid the Berkshire Hills.

George Hunter, a resident of this place a number of years ago, but now residing at Catskill, N. Y., has been visiting Thomas M. Paff, Sr.

S. B. Thompson, who has been spending the summer along the New England coast, has returned to the Homestead, in the borough.

Mrs. Frank Perry, of McKinley avenue, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Henry Schreiner, of Mountain avenue.

Fanwood Council, R. A., held its semi-monthly meeting last night in the library rooms.

AMUSEMENTS.

Drawn by horses, which have seen service in the New York Fire Department, a real fire engine will play an important part in "The Still Alarm," at Proctor's 58th Street theatre during the week of August 29. The original scenery will be used, and the large cast will include, James Durkin, Miss Adele Bloch, Harold Hartsell, Miss Agnes Scott, Charles Arthur, William Norton, George Howell and the other 58th Street favorites.

Lake Excursion.

The beauty spot of New Jersey is Lake Hopatcong and one who visits the place is charmed with the diversified entertainment afforded. The surroundings are delightful in every respect and a day spent in the rarified mountain air of the Jersey foothills will do wonders for the tourist. There are ample facilities for fishing and boating and one who enjoys the rambles in wooded paths and the quietness of the natural pines, to him Lake Hopatcong is the gem of places. On August 27, 1905, the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its famous low priced and popular excursions to the Lake. Round trip $1.00, and special train leaves Plainfield at 9:20 a. m. The run is made in three hours and the entire day can be spent in delightful enjoyment.

It is important for the sake of health that the pores of the skin be opened wide this weather. Take a Turkish bath at Brookside sanitarium.

When you want first-class jewelry there is one place where you are sure to get it, and that is at Charles E. Vail's store in Park avenue. He gives full value.

Clothes dirty quickly in summer. They are cleaned just as quickly at M. A. Brown's establishment, West Second street. Send your suit or dress there.

AUTO PARTY BUMPS INTO A "JUNGBORN"

GETS QUITE A SURPRISE WHEN INMATE RUSHES OUT.

Paterson, Aug. 23.—An automobile party traveling through Butler got off the main road and after going some distance over a corduroy country road bumped into a ten foot stockade. The auto had no sooner stopped grunting than several men without shoes and stockings and their trousers rolled up to their knees rushed up to the auto party, and one of them said:

"You can't go in there. Don't you know that there are twenty nude women within taking sun and sand baths?"

Members of the auto party were skeptical until they were told that they had run upon the private grounds of "Jungborn," a settlement of nature lovers who are practising the simple life for the purpose of regaining health.

The settlement was established several years ago and now numbers among its members artists, musicians and professional men who are striving to get close to nature by living in the open air as much as possible, drinking, as far as possible, nothing but spring water, and eating nuts and vegetables chiefly at all meals in their eighty foot bungalow.

The colony owns fifty acres of ground and the property for the most part is in a delightful dell surrounded on three sides by woods. The higher ground toward the woods is dotted with tents, where the members sleep. Those who cannot stand the open air at first are put in rooms in the rear of the bungalow or in log cabins.

Benedict Lust, the director of "Jungborn," believes that people would not have to use medicine if they would place themselves in the care of nature when ill.

Many musicians are in the settlement and in the evening there are concerts in the bungalow. Literary and other exercises are also part of nightly amusement.

LITERARY.

The present criticism of legal ethics does not show that lawyers are morally below the rest of us. Probably they average higher than most occupations. The point is that a peculiarly high standard is required of them, if we are to be free to secure the laws we wish and their proper execution. We cannot do it while lawyers are led solely by the highest fee. In the last twenty years, Sing Sing has known about four hundred lawyers, and at present the Empire State has 193 in jail, with 16 under indictment in the County of New York. "This is Choate," said Wendell Phillips in 1859, "who made it safe to murder, and of whose health thieves asked before they ventured to steal." Phillips always spoke in violent terms, but the last part of his statement is relevant to too many leading attorneys of our day. We ask a great deal of this profession, by necessity. We ask even as much as Daniel Webster who, with his usual noble weight of style, said, "Tell me a man is dishonest, and I will tell you he is no lawyer."—Collier's for August 26, 1905.

The newspaper man looms big and strong in our vigorous modern life, taking often a man's part on many fields to which duty has sent him. Not too frequently, he is pictured effectively and justly in fiction by a pen that has had its training in actual newspaper work—the modern school of the novelist. We have a fine example of just this sort of intelligently vivid character drawing in a new story of action, "The Fortress," by a young newspaper man, Will Levington Comfort. This strong, human novel appears complete in the September issue of Lippincott's Magazine.

Mr. Comfort won his spurs in the States, and when he left the office of the Pittsburg Despatch to go to Manchuria as war correspondent he was chock-full of energy and bristling with experience. Of course, he succeeded, and all who followed the news columns will read with fascination the spirited tale of love and war that grew out of this young reporter's dash for Port Arthur. It breathes the air of battle. Its descriptions of assault, repulse, conquest, and famine are so faithfully pictorial that they form, really, a contribution to the inner history of the Russo-Japanese struggle.

ENSIGN C. T. WADE BLAMED

Court of Inquiry Names Him as Implicated in Bennington Disaster.

AT SAN DIEGO, CAL.

Suggests That Court Martial Proceedings Be Started—Finds That Wrong Valve Was Closed.

Washington, Aug. 23.—Secretary Bonaparte yesterday received and made public the proceedings and findings of the court of inquiry which investigated the explosion on the gunboat Bennington at San Diego, Cal., on July 21. The findings at once set at rest the stories which had circulated to the effect that the Bennington's boilers and perhaps those of other naval vessels of the same age were defective. As a matter of fact, the court found that the explosion resulted from the closing of a valve which connected the exploded boiler with its steam gauge so that the pressure on that boiler may have been several hundred pounds to the square inch when the accident occurred.

While praise was accorded to the officers and ship's company for their conduct during the harrowing scenes following the accident, the officer and men who were responsible in the opinion of the court, are pointed out, and court martial proceedings suggested in the case of the only one of them surviving, Ensign C. T. Wade.

The court consisted of Commodore Stevenson, retired, and Captains E. J. Moore and Thomas S. Phelps.

NEW JERSEY MAY STOP HANGING MURDERERS

STATE AROUSED BY DR. MEURY'S DISCLOSURES IN THE GENTZ CASE.

As the result of the insistence by the Rev. E. A. Meury, of Jersey City, that Murderer Gentz, while he was swinging on the gibbet in the Hudson County Jail, signaled, by a prearranged movement of his fingers that he was still conscious, New Jersey is having an active agitation for the abolition of capital punishment. Several of the jurors summoned by Sheriff Zeller to witness the hanging of the negro Tapeley, who was to have been hanged in Jersey City last Friday, were so horrified by the minister's revelations that they notified the Sheriff that they would not attend, and declared themselves opposed to the infliction of the death penalty.

Dr. Meury is receiving letters from all over the State urging him to organize anti-capital punishment societies and promising him active support in the movement. Several of the ministers preached Sunday against capital punishment in general and hanging in particular.

This is not the first time, however, that the State has been aroused concerning the use of the gallows. When Mechella, a Russian sailor who in the early '70s killed United States Marshal Stevenson in a Jersey City street, was hanged—the first man to be hanged in Hudson county—his execution disclosed that a man could be conscious after the trap was swung. On that occasion the Sheriff sent invitations to hundreds of persons to attend the hanging. One of those who was present on that occasion said yesterday that after the murderer had been swung up in the air the rope parted over his head and he fell to the stone flagging of the jail yard. The Sheriff and his assistants rushed to him, and as they raised him to his feet he made a desperate effort to free his pinioned arms and pleaded for his life. The rope was readjusted and the man was drawn up and strangled. That execution aroused a storm of indignation throughout the State.

When Gentz was hanged the Rev. Mr. Meury said the dying man signaled to him after the drop. The disclosure attracted little attention at that time, and might not have attracted much now if the public mind had not been stirred by the efforts to save Mrs. Valentina, the Hackensack murderess, from the gallows.

Several members of the Legislature say they will offer bills at the coming session to discontinue the death penalty. A conference of several of them a few days ago considered the lines upon which such an act should be drawn. It was agreed that a life sentence would have no terror for murderers if there was any chance of pardon, and it is probable that the bill will provide that no one shall have power to pardon such prisoners.

"Seeing a Man."

"Seeing a Man" in New York is not as easy as it might be. Anne Steese Richardson, in next Sunday's New York World, tells of the difficulties in the way—fresh office boys and impudent stenographers. It is a cleverly written story, full of humor. In this number of the Sunday World there are two good short stories, several real life romances and the first description of a world-wonder that will exceed the Eiffel Tower. Don't fail to order next Sunday's New York World.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

Manager Griffith, of the New York Americans, is scouring the country for young blood.

Jack O'Neill has ordered a full suit of armor for the remaining games with Westfield.

Devlin, of the Giants, is not considered a graceful thrower, but he is a very accurate one.

"Willie" Deegan will be on the firing line Saturday, and he can be depended upon to put it over the Denmanites.

"Mickey" Flynn is a good base runner, but he ought to know that it takes better than himself to work the squeeze play.

Over the hills comes the report that Summit wants to try conclusions with Plainfield. Let them come, more the merrier.

"Wally" Cosgrave is always contesting every point to win a game, and he takes many chances. Captain Driscoll rates him as one of the best.

Out of five games played, Westfield has succeeded in winning one from Plainfield, all of which shows that the Pirates have little chance for the county championship.

Brogan may not be able to play second on Saturday. He is employed by the New York Central, and the ball team representing that company wants his services for the day.

After the game Saturday "Willie" Deegan rushed up to a friend and inquired as to what caused the trouble. He could not seem to understand what made the disturbance.

Westfield is still pinning its faith in "Red" Waller to win the county championship. "Red" is certainly pitching good ball, but Deegan and the locals are going him one better.

Give your support and encouragement to Manager Daab and his team by attending Saturday's game with Westfield. Two more victories will cinch the championship so far as Westfield is concerned.

The Plainfield fans want to see Plainfield and Westfield play every one of the ten contests scheduled, and they do not want Westfield to get another game. "Rub it in good and hard," is the cry.

Persons who want to see Saturday's game between Plainfield and Westfield and who fear there may be trouble, need not remain away on that account. The Westfield players are too-shrewd to start any trouble here.

Manager Daab is thinking seriously of arranging a series of three games with Summit, leaders of the Lackawanna League. It would be great ball, as Linderman and Farmer would be pitted against their former team mates.

The buffers and polishers from the Singer Sewing Machine Company, of Elizabethport, will play a return game with Ponds' team on the Clinton avenue grounds Saturday afternoon. The team will be accompanied by a brass band.

For the sake of the interest of the game, it is to be hoped that Westfield will leave its questionable tactics at home on Saturday and play straight, clean ball. And the crowd can get along very well without "Hot Air" Mallen's indecent language.

Much surprise was occasioned yesterday by the announcement that the Orange A. C. team, of the Lackawanna League, had disbanded for the season for lack of patronage. Manager Mills, who is also president of the league, announced the disbandment and said that he had notified all the players of the fact. The team's last game was at Trenton on Monday, when the Y. M. C. A. club won out by a score of 15 to 2. To some extent the experience of the Orange club has been repeated in nearly all the Lackawanna League towns, and very few of them are making money. It is not known whether Mr. Mills will retain the presidency or not, or whether his club's action will cause a disbandment of the league. A meeting will be held in a few days to decide upon the future of the league. It is a fact that the Orange team has been playing miserable ball and it is not to be wondered that the patronage has been poor. An aggregation of such calibre would have died in Plainfield before it was a month old. The team has been making more errors than runs in nearly every game.

GOLF.

The clashing of dates in golf tournaments this week will probably lead to some action in the future to prevent this undesirable feature of play. There are tournaments this week at Deal, Watch Hill, Ekwanok, Lake Placid and Bar Harbor not to mention a number of smaller events. The players claim that they cannot give the time and attention to tournaments when they are bunched in this fashion and no doubt a board of control will be appointed to watch the various dates and prevent them from conflicting as at present.

Plainfield, N. J., August 23, 1905.

Noticed an item today that diamonds are going higher. Awful glad we got our winter supply before the rise came.

If the Sultan of Sulu looks anything like his pictures, Miss Alice Roosevelt should have no hesitancy in giving him a positive "no" to his proposal of marriage.

A New York firm submitted a bid to the State Commission yesterday for furnishing the silver service to be presented the battleship New Jersey, asking $12,000. When informed that the State could only expend $10,000, the company's representative said that the service would be made for that amount. The question naturally arises, is the firm going to make any profit out of the "reduced" figure, and how could it have lopped off that $2,000 so quick?

Some times when Plainfielders are on a vacation they do not forget home interests. This is the case of William D. Murray and a colony of summer visitors at Point Breeze Camp, Wolfboro, N. H. Every Sunday night an informal song service is held and the offering is made for some good cause. Last Sunday night the offering was received for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. It amounted to $17.61, and today The Daily Press received a check for that amount from Mr. Murray. It has been forwarded to the proper person.

Some time ago a man who contemplates writing a comprehensive History of Advertisecents began to collect specimens from all parts of the world. He originally intended to make a complete collection, but he has abandoned the idea for the simple reason that, unlike postage-stamps, the number of advertisements is infinite and their variety past classification. He expresses surprise at the magnitude and cosmopolitan character of advertising. But why should he be surprised? It is a big world; human desires are immeasurable, and the advertisement is the most useful medium for making known and therefore satisfying these desires.—Philadelphia Record.

FAMILIES TO GET CONVICTS' WAGES

LABOR FEDERATION ASKED TO HELP BRING IT ABOUT.

Trenton, Aug. 23.—State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections Dr. Wight appeared before the delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention yesterday morning and told them that there were seven industries at the State Prison in which 670 men were employed in rush times, and 575 men was low-water work.

He declared that the State Prison authorities had not violated their agreement with the Federation about the maximum employment of 100 convicts in one craft.

Relative to the Rahway Reformatory he said there were ninety-nine hands employed in making overalls, the only industry there.

The commissioner received a rising vote of thanks when he declared his intention to find some way whereby the wages earned by convicts could be applied to the needs of their families, so that women and children of convicts could be spared becoming public charges. He asked the co-operation of the Federation in finding the way to bring this about.

Important legislation by the Federation was affirmative action on a resolution appointing an organizer in each county, who should receive $1 for every local union he succeeded in affiliating with the Federation; unanimously supporting the present labor trouble between the firemen and the Newark brewers and a resolution of Jordon Drear, of Newark, placing Schmalz & Sons, Newark, on the unfair list for refusing to use the bakers' label.

The printers succeeded in getting passed a resolution calling for the union label on all school books to be used in the State as well as all State reports, the idea being that it would make so much work that the printers will be very strong when the struggle for the proposed eight-hour day comes in 1906.

Strong Impression That They Will Make a Conciliatory Move.

CABLE FROM CZAR

Received By Envoys Last Night And Instructs Them to Continue to Stand Firm.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 23.—There is a strong impression that Japan will make a conciliatory movement at the conference today, when the protocols come up for discussion.

It is stated that the Japanese have a plan for reopening the discussion by putting down on the table new proposals or by withdrawing some of the proposals already made.

The most likely theory is that the Japanese will withdraw the demand for taking over the interned ships and the limitation of Russia's naval power in the Far East, which, the best observers say, were put in the peace conditions merely for "trading" purposes.

Minister Takahira and Mr. Sato would not deny this, nor would they confirm it. They contented themselves with evasive replies.

It is more apparent than ever before, now that the nevoys of the two countries are face to face with the crisis, that both want peace. Indeed, the Russian official statement, printed in the despatches yesterday morning, said that the Russians recognized that peace is an absolute necessity for Russia.

The envoys have disposed of all the minor business. They are now exactly where they started, with the important points disagreed to, but not finally decided upon. Any one of them may be reopened. If the Japanese are in the conciliatory mood indicated last night they can get a respectful hearing from the Russians.

Still, notwithstanding this rather circumstantial story that the Japanese are ready to make concessions, the Russians do not expect peace. The fact is, that last night, between 7 and 8 o'clock, they received a cable from Russia telling them they must not recede an iota on any of the disputed points.

THE FORUM.

Editor The Daily Press:

In your article, "Trenton Will Not Defend Reward Suit," you state, "City Solicitor Bird has already decided, after a careful review of the facts in the case, that Van Nuis is not entitled to the reward." This statement is open to question. City Solicitor Bird has arrived at his opinion upon ex parte evidence claimed to be false and repudiated by Van Nuis in his letter published by you on the 7th inst. It is remarkable that a public official should so commit himself and it reminds me of a lawyer going to court with a damage suit submitting the plaintiff's evidence only, taking judgment by default, subsequently learning to his chagrin and disgust that no service had been made on the defendant.

TROLLEY WORK STARTED

Contractors Now Building "Fast Line" Link to Cross the State.

100 FOOT ROADWAY

Expected That Extension Will Be Complete Within the Next Eighteen Months.

Elizabeth, Aug. 23.—Work has been started at Bayway, in this city, on the construction of a trolley line between this city and Millburn, with a large force of men at work for the New York and Philadelphia Company staking out the recently acquired 100-foot right of way. Property rights have been acquired by this company, and over its own land it is now building what will eventually be a fast through line, operated by either the overhead or third-rail system, between Philadelphia and New York City, by way of Public Service connection between Elizabeth, Newark and Jersey City, and the use of a North River tunnel. It is understood that there will be no stops between this city and Trenton, and that only a few stops will be made between Trenton and Philadelphia. The road is being constructed under a steam railroad charter, it has a 100-foot right of way from Trenton to Elizabeth, ninety and 100 pound rails are to be used in its construction, it is to be double-tracked the entire distance and there are no stops or arrangements for depots for passenger uses. It is held by some that the Pennsylvania road may be interested in the New York and Philadelphia Company, and that the Pennsylvania eventually may operate a freight line over the New York and Philadelphia tracks.

No property has been purchased yet at Bayway, the road's terminal in this city, for a trolley terminal or for passenger accommodations except the 100 feet for "right of way."

Thousands of dollars' worth of property have changed hands in this city during the past three months on account of purchases for the road. Among the local people who have disposed of property is Comptroller Peter Bonnett, who sold a strip of land a mile long. The property, almost without exception, has been secured without difficulty.

John Vogel, of Linden, and the company have not been able to get together and papers have been filed in condemnation proceedings in this case. There was some delay over property owned by Lucretia Roll and Sanford Roll, of Linden, but a settlement was effected in this case. The right of way from Elizabeth to Milltown, where the Trenton-New Brunswick "Fast Line" has its terminal, has now been secured, the land acquired being 100 feet wide the entire distance from Elizabeth to Trenton. Property is now being acquired between Trenton and Philadelphia, so that the Camden connection of the line may not be on public roads.

The utmost secrecy is being maintained by those connected with the company, although it is stated that the contract for the extension has been awarded to Cole & Tensen, of Philadelphia and Toledo, O. This company built the famous Cleveland suburban line.

The New York and Philadelphia Company has become the successor to the Camden and Trenton Railway Company, the Trenton and New Brunswick Railroad Company and the New Jersey Short Line Railroad Company. The line does not connect directly over the Raritan River to this city without a curve. Where the bridge is to be placed has not yet been announced.

The contract with Cole & Tensen calls for the heaviest rails, the most substantial roadbed, rock ballasted; hemlock ties, made waterproof. An addition is to be built to the power house between New Brunswick and Trenton. The trestlework, as in the case with the road between Trenton and New Brunswick, will be of the Pennsylvania Railroad standard as to strength and material used. The road will have a standard gauge and block signals, as are used on railroads. Heavy cars, suitable for fast travel, will be used. The matter of car construction has not yet been decided; it is possible, if some of the cars go to the Brill people, that they will be built here.

Those interested in the contracting firm and in the engineering department of the new road, when seen in Trenton and in New Brunswick, denied having any knowledge of the road eventually becoming a steam road.

There are, of course, many rumors as to what the New York and Philadelphia road may do, and also as to the possibility of its being used by steam road systems. The rumor as to the Pennsylvania has been referred to. There are those who, speaking of the Pennsylvania, argue that it would not be feasible for that railroad company to operate a freight service over the new line. The grades between Trenton and New Brunswick are too great, it is claimed. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has fixed seven-tenths of one per cent. as the greatest grade. At places on the Trenton-New Brunswick line the percentage of grade reaches .038. Only three full freight cars could be drawn up a grade of this character. It would be more expensive for the company to reduce that grade than to buy new rights of way along its present main line. Unless there was a traffic arrangement with the Central Railroad, freight cars coming into Elizabeth over this line could not be taken to New York and elsewhere except by boat from a local terminal on the Staten Island Sound. So the talk goes.

In eighteen months it is expected that the extension will be finished and the cars running. It is supposed that trolley cars will be operated over the line for a while anyway.

The officers of the New York and Philadelphia Company are: W. A. Stern, president; I. H. Silverman, treasurer, and W. E. Harrington, general manager.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Criminal Carelessness.

That train was run off the New Jersey Central bridge into Newark Bay through gross carelessness, and not by an employe of the railroad. The young man who will probably be punished for manslaughter should have a guardian. He might rock the boat or fire off the unloaded pistol.—Jersey City Journal.

Blame Owner, Not the Dog.

The dogs, of course, do not understand that there is a law prohibiting them from chasing rabbits at this season of the year; their owners, however, are supposed to know there is such a law, but they pay no attention to it and the dogs are allowed their freedom and can be heard yelping and hot in pursuit of poor bunny at all hours of the night and many are caught and destroyed.—Swedesboro News.

Barns and Lightning.

Hardly a day passes during the hot summer months that a farmer's barn does not go up in smoke as a result of being struck by lightning.

Lightning's freaks cause the farmers and insurance companies a large annual loss, and its ravages seem to be growing altogether out of proportion to the growth of population and building. On this point accurate statistics would be instructive.

At all events the question is of sufficient importance to become the subject of intelligent investigation.—Trenton State Gazette.

Unquestionably Sincere.

There is no reason to doubt the sincerity of Senator Dryden and other life insurance magnates who are urging Federal control of that business. At present they have to work under a confusing assortment of conflicting State laws, and would much prefer to know just where they stand. The fraternal assessment orders find the same trouble. The Royal Arcanum in its recent readjustment of rates, had to go carefully over the laws of all the States in which it exists before it could fix the various schedules of options.—Atlantic City Daily Press.

Time for Voters to Think.

It is time now for the voter to begin to think about his duties. The official primaries will be held on September 12, and candidates as well as voters should get busy. Under the law it will be necessary for those who intend to be candidates for delegates to the county convention to file a certificate of such intention ten days previous to the primaries, on September 2. The primary machinery under the new election law is in absolute charge of the boards of registry and elections, composed in this county of two Republicans and two Democrats in each of the voting districts.—Elizabeth Journal.

Sturgeon Preferred to Salmon.

The Fish Commissioners of New Jersey and Pennsylvania are preparing to stock the Delaware with salmon and it is to be hoped that the effort will meet with more success than that of about thirty years ago. There were very few of the salmon liberated at that time that were afterwards caught, one of the most notable catches being by the late John Perrine, of this city, who caught a handsome specimen in 1878 and sent it with his compliments to Governor McClellan. Should the present efforts of the commissioners prove successful it is hardly probable that the salmon will ever prove as valuable a fish to our fishermen as the sturgeon has been, and were it only possible to artificially hatch that fish we would be well content to leave the salmon to the northern and western waters.—Salem Sunbeam.

Not a Bad Investment.

There is quite an agitation throughout the State relative to municipal ownership of public utilities, and among the towns that have caught the infection are Plainfield, Elizabeth, Princeton, Washington, Somerville, Bound Brook and North Plainfield. Hackettstown, with a population of 2,600, is pointed out as a successful example of public ownership. The town has for several years owned its water plant, and when the old one was found to be too small to meet the demands made upon it there was money enough on hand to enlarge it at a cost of $25,000. Because of this success, the towns named want to try the experiment of municipal ownership. Woodstown owns it own water plant, but has not yet been able to make it pay quite so well as Hackettstown, but the investment has by no means been a bad one.—Woodstown Monitor-Register.

NOTICE!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Finbury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Signed, July 12, 1905: Mrs. O. W. James, Mr. O. W. James." Leading Druggists, 25c-50c

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FASHION WHIMS.

For this season the choice of suitable attire for the young girl requires more thought, more artistic acumen and more scrupulous attention to details than that for the mother, in order to combine just the correct degree of simplicity with a smart and well-dressed impression.

Happily, there are many of the season's modes that are pre-eminenty suitable for the young girl and for the evening frock for juvenile parties, so frequent in the summer holiday time, there is a wide choice of materials and trimmings.

White is always suitable, fashionable and becoming, but pale colors are not tabooed, and some of the new flowered organdies make charming party frocks as well as the thin Oriental silks and cotton gauzes.

Plain white organdie or mulls, point d'esprit nets and sheer batistes with inset motifs of very sheer embroidery combined with valenciennes insertions are sometimes made over thin silk slips of pale buff, blue or sheel pink and there is a finish of rosettes or bows and sashes of soft ribbons in shades of the same color.

The blouse waist with a blouse effect which is now passe for young ladies and matrons it still employed in modified form by the best dressmakers for misses, as its lines are better adapted to the immature and undeveloped figure than the tight bodice. A wide girdle is worn with this waist which raises the bloused part and defines clearly the waistline.

The sleeves are either short, of elbow length, and the neck may be cut in Dutch style or demi-decollete. Practical mothers make the party frocks in a way to serve with a guimpe for less dressy occasions.

The skirts of gowns of sheer stuffs are shirred at the top or are held closely over the hips by tucks and fall in full folds. Flat trimmings are newer than flounces though the latter are not tabooed, and the double or triple skirts are still in vogue. Sun-plaited skirts retain a place in fashionable esteem and for certain materials are very pretty.

BENEFITS OF FRESH AIR.

Form the habit of always breathing deeply.

In the morning protect the body from the cold and, standing before the open window, take ten deep breaths, says an exchange.

Always inhale through the nose and exhale from the mouth.

After breakfast breathe deeply. It aids digestion.

Always breathe as fresh air as possible.

Always, when stepping out of doors, remember to breathe deeply; it quickens circulation and drives off the cold.

When going out for lunch.

Before dinner at night.

Again before the open window before going to bed.

Air is to the body what coal is to the furnace. The deeper the breathing, the more draughts are turned on and the brighter life burns.

It is not enough to stir the air in the upper part of the lungs. The stale air should be forced out and fresh air drawn into every part of the lungs.

Place the palms of both hands about the body, and slowly force out the breath. Press with the hands and notice how small the body grows. Then through the nose draw in as much air as possible. Make the body about the waist as large as possible

With elbows pointing from the shoulders straight out at the sides, place the tips of the fingers upon the chest. Exhale slowly, letting the chest sink as low as it will. Then draw in, through the nose, as much air as the chest will hold, lifting the chest as high as possible.

These four exercises can be taken at any time and anywhere, when walking or when driving.

To obtain the best results, one should practice at night and in the morning the following exercises, which are not so easily taken:

Lie flat on the back and draw in the breath slowly until the back feels as if it were pressing hard against the floor. Then, still lying on the back, by deep breathing lift as high as possible the upper surface of the whole body, from the chest to the abdomen.

The reason why we have so many narrow chested men and women is because we are too lazy to breathe—or else we have never recognized the importance of deep breathing and the necessity of letting fresh air into every part of our lungs.

Practice the deep breathing whenever it is possible.

It will make a woman more graceful and healthy.

It will develop the chest and broaden the shoulders.

Take the chest measurements today, practice the deep breathing from five to six times daily, and remeasure in six weeks. The measurements will prove the benefit of the exercise.—Newark Advertiser.

Sea Girt O. K.

The commendation bestowed upon this year's encampment of the National Guard, including the sharpshooters' league, is general and uncontradicted. Perhaps a consensus of this favorable criticism was that expressed by Colonel Frelinghuysen, of the staff, when he congratulated his associates on having been well-fed.—Trenton True American.

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

But Obermuller explained to him that he needn't act—just be himself out behind the wings, and lo! Lord Harold was "chawmed."

And Gray?

Why, she gave in at last; pretended to, anyway—sliding out of the Charity sketch, and rehearsing the thing with him, and all that. And—and do you know what she did, Mag? (Nance Olden may be pretty mean, but she wouldn't do a trick like that.) She waited till ten minutes before time for the thing to be put on and then threw a fit.

"She's so ill, her delicate ladyship! So ill she just can't go on this evening! Wonder how long she thinks such an excuse will keep Lord Harold off when I want him on!" growled Obermuller, throwing her note over to me. He'd have liked to throw it at me if it'd been heavy enough to hurt; he was so thumping mad.

You see, there it was on the programme:

THE CLEVER SKETCH ENTITLED THEATRICAL ARISTOCRACY.

The Duke of Portmanteau.....
.....Lord Harold Gray
The Duchess .....
.....Lady Gray

The celebrated Gray jewels, including the great Rose Diamond, will be worn by Lady Gray in this number.

* * * * * * *

No wonder Obermuller was raging. I looked at him. You don't like to tackle a fellow like that when he's dancing hot. And yet you ache to help him and—yes, yourself.

"Lord Harold's here yet, and the jewels?" I asked.

He gave a short nod. He was thinking. But so was I.

"Then all he wants is a Lady?"

"That's all," he said, sarcastically.

"Well, what's the matter with me?" He gasped.

"There's nothing the matter with your nerve, Olden."

"Thank you, so much." It was the way Gray says it when she tries to have an English accent. "Dress me up, Fred Obermuller, in Gray's new silk gown and the Gray jewels, and you'd never—"

"I'd never set eyes on you again."

"You'd never know, if you were in the audience, that it wasn't Gray herself. I can take her off to the life, and if the prompter'll stand by—"

He looked at me for a full minute.

"Try it, Olden," he said.

I did. I flew to Gray's dressing-room. She'd gone home deathly ill, of course. They gave me the best seamstress in the place. She let out the waist a bit and pulled over the lace to cover it. I got into that mass of silk and lace—oh, silk on silk, and Nance Olden inside! Beryl Blackburn did my hair, and Grace Weston put on my slippers. Topham, himself, hung me with those gorgeous shining diamonds and pearls and emeralds, till I felt like an idol loaded with booty. There were so many standing round me, rigging me up, that I didn't get a glimpse of the mirror till the second before Ginger called me. But in that second—in that second, Mag Monahan, I saw a fairy with blazing cheeks and shining eyes, with a diamond coronet in her brown hair, puffed high, and pearls on her bare neck and arms, and emeralds over the waist, and rubies and pearls on her fingers, and sprays of diamonds like frost on the lace of her skirt, and diamond buckles on her very slippers, and the rose diamond, like a sun, outshining all the rest; and—and, Mag, it was me!

IT WAS ME!

How did it go? Well, wouldn't it make you think you were a Lady, sure enough, if you couldn't move without that lace train billowing after you; without being dazzled with diamond-shine; without a truly Lord tagging after you?

He kept his head, Lord Harold did—even if it is a mutton-head. That helped me at first. He was so cold, so stupid, so slow, so good-tempered—so just himself. And after the first plunge—

I tell you, Mag Monahan, there's one thing that's stronger than wine to a woman—it's being beautiful. Oh! And I was beautiful. I knew it before I got that quick hush, with the full applause after it. And because I was beautiful, I got saucy, and then calm, and then I caught Fred Obermuller's voice—he had taken the book from the prompter and stood there himself—and after that it was easy sailing.

He was there yet when the act was over, and I trailed out, followed by my Lord. He let the prompt-book fall from his hands and reached them both out to me.

I flirted my jeweled fan at him and swept him a courtesy.

Cool? No, I wasn't. Not a bit of it. He was daffy with the sight of me in all that glory, and I knew it.

"Nance," he whispered, "you wonderful girl, if I didn't know about that little thief up at the Bronsonia I'd—I'd marry you alive, just for the fun of piling pretty things on you."

"The deuce you would!" I sailed past him, with Topham and my Lord in my wake.

They didn't leave me till they'd stripped me clean. I felt like a Christmas tree the day after. But, somehow, I didn't care.

CHAPTER VIII.

IS that you, Mag? Well, it's about time you came home to look after me. Fine chaperon you make, Miss Monahan! Why, didn't I tell you the very day we took this flat what a chaperon was, and that you'd have to be mine? Imagine Nancy Olden without a chaperon—Shocking!

No, 'tisn't late. Sit down, Maggie, there, and let me get the stool and talk to you. Think of us two—Cruelty to both of us—two mangy kittens deserted by the old cats in a city's alleys, and left mewing with cold and hunger and dirt, out in the wet—think of us two in our own flat, Mag!

I say, it makes me proud of us! There are times when I look at every stick of furniture we own, and I try to pretend to it all that I'm used to a decent roof over my head, and a dining-room, kitchen, parlor, bedroom and bath. Oh, and I forgot the telephone the other tenant left here till its lease is up. But at other times I stand here in the middle of it and cry out to it, in my heart:

"Look at me, Nancy Olden, a householder, a rent payer, the head of the family, even if it's only a family of two, and the other one Mag! Look at me, with my name in the directory, a-paying milk bills and meat bills and bread bills! Look at me with a place of my own, where nobody's right's greater than my own; where no one has a right but me and Mag; a place where—where there's nothing to hide from the police!"

There's the rub, Mag, as Hamlet says—(I went to see it the other night, so that I could take off the Ophelia—she used to be a good mimic herself, before she tried to be a leading lady.) It spoils you, this sense of safeness that goes with the honesty graft. You lose the quickness of the hunter and the nerve of the hunted. And—worse—you lose your taste for the old risky life. You grow proud and fat, and you love every stick in the dear, quiet little place that's your home—your own home. You love it so that you'd be ashamed to sneak round where it could see you—you who'd always walked upright before it with the step of the mistress; with nothing in the world to be ashamed of; nothing to prevent your staring each honest dian-pan in the face!

And, Mag, you try—if you're me—to fit Tom Dorgan in here—Tom Dorgan in stripes and savage sulks still—all these months—kept away from the world, even the world behind bars! Maggie, don't you wish Tom was a ventriloquist or—or an acrobat or—but this isn't what I had to tell you.

Do you know what a society entertainer is, Miss Monahan? No? Well, look at me. Yes, I'm one. Miss Nance Olden, whose services are worth $50 a night—at least, they were one night.

Ginger brought me the note that made me a society entertainer. It was from a Mrs. Paul B. Gates, who had been "charmed by your clever impersonations, Miss Olden, and write to know if you have the leisure to entertain some friends at my house on Thursday of this week."

Had I the leisure—well, rather! I showed the note to Gray, just to make her jealous. (Oh, yes, she goes on all right in the act with Lord Harold every night. Catch her letting me wear those things of hers twice!) Well, she just turned up her nose.

"Of course, you won't accept?" she said.

"Of course, I will."

"Oh! I only thought you'd feel as I should about appearing before a lot of snobs, who'll treat you like a servant and—"

"Who'll do nothing of the sort, and who'll pay you well for it," put in Obermuller. He had come up and was reading the note I had handed to him. "You just say yes, Nance," he went on, after Gray had bounced off to her dressing-room. "It isn't such a bad graft and—and this is just between us two, mind—that little beggar, Tausig, has begun his tricks since you turned his offer down. They can make things hot for me, and if they do, it won't be so bad for you to go in for this sort of thing—unless you go over to the Trust—"

I shook my head.

SERIOUS BLOW AGAINST GAMBLING AT LONG BRANCH

RAIDS ON THE STOCKTON IS THE TALK OF THE COAST.

Long Branch, Aug. 23.—The raid on the alleged gambling rooms in the Stockton House, West End, within a few hundred feet of the Pennsylvania Club, and the arrest of thirty-six men, including the alleged proprietors, has been the talk of the coast today.

From the Prosecutor's office it was learned today that as soon as they are sure of their game they will raid every club in Long Branch, but they did not care to make the effort until they were sure of rounding up the gamblers and their paraphernalia.

From a trustworthy source it is learned that several players were given the tip three minutes before the moving van containing the detectives from the Prosecutor's office arrived. Included in those who escaped arrest were many well known men, one or two who became bondsmen for the men indicted a year ago by the Grand Jury.

Nearly all of the players and lookers-on have obtained bail, and have engaged counsel to defend them if they are indicted, which they undoubtedly will be at the coming session of the Grand Jury. It is likely that Prosecutor Nevius will call the present Grand Jury together in a few days and consider the evidence in hand, so that the men can be further apprehended before the closing of the summer season.

Among the men who were present soon after the raid took place was Tom Johnson, who was indicted several months ago for running a gambling house, and whose trial is set for the middle of next month.

Chief James Payton is reticent over the raid. He knew nothing of it until it was all over. Intimate friends feel sorry for him, as they say he is handicapped and would willingly clean out all the gamblers if given half a chance. Mayor Francis is the real chief of police, and it is alleged that he told a certain official early in the spring, when asked about the club houses and Sunday selling: "Leave the club houses and Pleasure Bay to me." As a result, the Pleasure Bay hotels are selling liquor, it is alleged, on Sunday, while the clubs are doing business seven days in a week without interference on his part.

ASBURY TO STAY "DRY."

City Council Drops Ordinance That Provided for Licenses.

The project of having liquor licenses at Asbury Park is dead so far as the City Council is concerned until after another election for members of that body.

The ordinance which provided for licenses for liquor selling was quietly dropped Monday and dies a natural death because of inaction. The hotel men who sought to have a license provided for now charge that at the election last Friday the proprietors of "speak easies" in the city worked against license.

They did this because there is greater liberty and far more profit selling liquor as they have been doing than in doing it legitimately.

Property Owners Band Together.

Bernardsville, Aug. 23.—The people living along the Mine Brook road between Bernardsville and Far Hills have formed an association known as the "Mine Brook Property Owners' Association." Its object is to protect the brook, said highway and the valley in which the residents live against intrusion. The members of the association are John F. Dillon, Grant B. Schley, R. V. Lindabury, Charles S. Moran, Charles F. Squibb, Grant B. Schley, Jr., George D. Cross, William H. Page, Jr., Frank Bergen, Charles Barker, Edward R. Greene, B. Kaufman, John M. Dillon, W. G. Ladd. The officers are: R. V. Lindabury, president; Grant B. Schley, Jr., treasurer, and William H. Page, Jr., secretary.

Gold for Elephant's Tooth.

New York, Aug. 23.—Lena, the largest of the Thompson and Dandy herd of elephants, will have her teeth attended today, as though she was a human being. Dr. Martin J. Potter examined the animal's molars Saturday and discovered that one of them, which weighs about five pounds and measures nine inches in breadth, contained an immense cavity. The teeth will be filled, as the animal's life was in jeopardy. Lena will be shackled and then put under the influence of chloroform. The veterinarian will preceed then to put gold leaf into the cavity. Before the elephant is allowed to revive, the veterinarian will treat the animal's jaws.

Children Disturbed His Sleep.

Trenton, Aug. 23.—"Judge, I have eight children—I'll be honest with you—I've eight of them, and they make so much noise around the house that when I want a nap I have to go to Monument Park and get it," Robert Hutchinson, of Pennington avenue, said when arraigned yesterday before Judge Harris on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Policeman Heber said the man had been loitering in the park for some time and that he had been requested to move, but did not do so. Judge Harris imposed a fine of $2.

EXCITING INCIDENTS AT PRIZE FIGHT RAID

SPORTS IN A PANIC WHEN CONSTABLES SWOOP DOWN.

Elizabeth, Aug. 23.—Wild excitement prevailed late Monday night in Linden township, where a prize-fight was raided by officers from that place, led by Benjamin Brown, the borough marshal. About 200 sports from Elizabeth, Rahway, Cranford, Roselle, Westfield and Plainfield were given the tip and journeyed to the spot. The ring was pitched in a strip of woods in the rear of Schulthie's roadhouse. Two battles were scheduled to be pulled off. The first was to be between a white pugilist from Rahway and another from Elizabeth. This was to have been a five-round go. The second bout was to have been a twenty-round affair between two negroes.

Two furious rounds had been fought between the white pugilists with the honors even, and the third round was in full swing when the officers appeared on the scene. Instantly there was a mad stampede to escape. Men were knocked down and trampled upon in the rush, and a score of battered hats were left behind on the battlefield. One man, who had perched himself in a tree to get a better view of the combat, in his excitement jumped and landed on the neck and shoulders of one of the constables. The timekeeper was knocked down and the cover twisted off the gold watch he held in his hand.

The principals of both fights escaped, but the officers captured seven young men, who gave their names as Benjamin Davis, John West, Joseph Randolph, Dennis Mehan, Charles Doyle, John Ray and Thomas O'Donnell, all from Elizabeth. Some of the names are fictitious. The prisoners were marched to the office of Marshal Brown, who is also a justice of the peace. He opened court and held each in $200 bail to await the Grand Jury's action. Not having any bondsmen they were taken to Elizabeth and lodged in the county jail. Marshal Brown's assistants in the raid were David Hennessy, Simon Birmingham, Joseph Ricodello and two citizens, whom he pressed into service. Friends of some of the prisoners visited the county jail yesterday morning to see what could be done toward getting them out. Most of them will probably be released before night. The round-up is the chief topic discussed in Linden, Rahway and Elizabeth today.

Four of the spectators of the fight got wet to the skin by plunging into a pond while trying to get away. Another man was knocked senseless by colliding with a tree.

A Plainfielder who was caught in the raid gave an assumed name at police headquarters. He was bailed out by a friend this morning.

Funeral of Raymond Wood.

The funeral of Raymond Wood, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wood, of Park avenue, Scotch Plains, who died yesterday morning, from an attack of dysentery, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock from his parents' home. Rev. T. Moore-Smith, of the First Baptist church, of Scotch Plains, will officiate. Interment will be made in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Man and Woman Arrested.

Fred J. Perni, an Italian, was arrested last night in company with Mrs. Arabella Drake, for criminal misbehavior. Roundsman Flynn caught them on Watchung avenue. They were held for the Grand Jury by Justice Mosher this morning. The woman could not furnish bail, but Perni retained Lawyer W. L. Hetfield, Jr., to secure a bondsman.

A Careless Coachman.

Harvey Vail, of East Sixth street, riding a wheel on West Front street, opposite the post office this morning, was run into by a careless coachman. He saved himself from injury by jumping, but his wheel was wrecked. The coachman declined to give his name and hurried away. He is said to drive for the Hall family, of Netherwood.

To Pick Candidates.

The First Ward Republican Club will meet tonight in the Taylor building, to determine on ward candidates and delegates to the county convention. Suggestions as to candidates will be welcomed from every member of the club, or others interested in the campaign for purer politics.

The Misses Minnie Hossinger and May Hughes, of the Hill & Shupp store, are spending their vacation at the Fennimore, Asbury Park.

BRIGGS DEFEATED IN NATIONAL TOURNAMENT

PLAYS FINELY WITH CLOTHIER, FAVORITE IN THE TOURNAMENT.

Play in the annual Newport tennis championship in both singles and doubles was begun yesterday. Plainfield was represented but by one person, C. H. Briggs, of Albert street, two times winner of the P. H. S. tournaments. In the first drawing Briggs was picked to play W. J. Clothier, last year's runner-up, and a big favorite for winning the championship this year. Briggs was handicapped from the fact that he had never before played on grass courts, as used at Newport. In spite of this, he put up a remarkable game against so heady and clever a player as Clothier.

Although the scores would not seem to indicate it, every game was well contested, the Plainfielder in many instances forcing a game to deuce only to lose the next two points. The final scores were 6—2, 6—1, 6—1, a showing so good as to surprise his most hopeful followers.

However, it was not Briggs' intention in the first place, to enter the national tournament, but his friends urged him to play in that so as to get good practice on courts unfamiliar to him. He will play in the scholastic tournament for the championship of the country, which starts tomorrow. He won the right to play in this by carrying off the honors of the Columbia tournament of the East in June. To play in this tournament was the object of Briggs' journey to Newport. Some of the best players of the high schools and prep schools of the county will be in the play, but Briggs' friends here are in hopes that he will hold his own with the best in the tournament.

HAMILTON F. KEAN FOR STATE SENATOR

A BOOM FOR HIM IS LAUNCHED AT UNION TOWNSHIP.

A dispatch from Elizabeth to The Daily Press at noon today states that a boom is on at the county seat for the nomination of Hamilton F. Kean for State Senator. It is declared that his name was first suggested by the leaders in Union township, where he resides.

Mr. Kean was called up by telephone and asked about the boom, and he replied:

"When the delegates are elected, it is for them to say who shall receive the nomination. However, it should go to Plainfield, but if that city cannot decide upon a man acceptable to the rest of the county, the choice should be left to the townships."

THE THEATRE PRICES.

Mistaken Impression as to the Scale to Prevail.

So pronounced is the mistaken impression about the prices for the new Plainfield theatre that Manager Counihan has undertaken to set everybody aright. The scale for "The County Chairman" has nothing to do with all the other attractions that will follow, as it is customary at every theatre opening to make an exception. The prices for the shows coming will be graded according to their class. For the big Broadway successes the top-notch will be $1.50 or $2.00. For the majority of the attractions the scale will be from twenty-five cents to a dollar. All popular priced matinees, with the exception of holidays, will be a quarter, with a few reserved seats at thirty-five cents.

It was Mr. Counihan's intention to charge a lower price for the opening night, but he had to especially engage "The County Chairman," and the company will come direct to this city in a special car from Cumberland, Md., where it plays tonight.

On Trail of Borough Thief.

The borough police were informed yesterday that Simon Schiofora, the baker who robbed Henry Voehl of money and jewelry amounting to $125, had been seen at Perth Amboy by Peter Hansen, of Lincoln place. Chief Weiss went to Perth Amboy today to try and locate him.

Wesley S. Dunn's Funeral.

The funeral of Wesley S. Dunn, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley J. Dunn, of Westervelt avenue, will be held from the parents' home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A PARISH PICNIC.

Affair at Stony Hill Attended by Plainfielders.

The picnic held by the parishioners of St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, at Seeley's Grove, back of Scotch Plains, yesterday was a largely attended affair. Many from this city and the borough were present. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church; Father Schandell, the retired priest, who was for many years in charge of the Stony Hill parish, and Father Schwarze, the present rector, were present.

In the evening the grove was brilliantly illuminated with Japanese lanterns. A large dancing platform afforded amusement for the young people in the way of dancing, for which music was frunished by Suhr's orchestra from this city.

The picnic was a success socially and financially.

WANTED TO CLEAN HOUSE.

Michael Finnerty Enraged Because He Couldn't Get More Booze.

Michael Finnerty, a West Ender with a remarkable thirst, went into Watson's hotel early last evening and demanded drink. He was full to the limit of his capacity then, and the barkeeper refused to give him more.

Finnerty was outraged at the refusal and raised a loud and sustained fuss. He threatened to clean out the place, and was setting himself to do it when Patrolman Higgins, attracted by the noise, came in. Higgins squelched the insulted Mr. Finnerty and gave him a ride in the hurry-up wagon. He was penitent in court this morning, and because it was his first appearance in ten years, Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

LIONESS LOOSE IN CROWD 5,000 PANIC STRICKEN

SCORES TRAMPLED IN A RUSH OUT OF A NEWARK PARK.

Five thousand people in Electric Park, at Vailsburg, near Newark, last night, were thrown into a panic by a lioness let loose by the opening of a cage door. The crowd rushed pell mell for the park entrances; women and children were in the crowd, and a few received bruises. None were seriously injured.

About 10 o'clock a bicycle performer named Tourbilton, who rides a wheel about ten feet above the lions' cage, met with an accident, and his wheel dropped into the cage. The trainer of the lions opened the cage door and entered to recover the wheel, leaving the door open. Mosquitoes had made the beasts restive, and one dashed out.

Park employes and a few men who retained, or regained, their senses and courage, set about capturing her. Others set about gathering up the torn clothing and belongings of the crowd that had fled. The lioness was driven from her refuge, but gained another between two buildings. Her cage was drawn to one opening and efforts were made to coax her into it, but in vain.

As some got out and the excitement lessened, doctors came forward and helped the fallen. The police were reinforced by the reserves from the nearest stations, and men living in the neighborhood hurried to the scene with guns, revolvers, and lanterns and joined in the hunt.

Telegrams were sent in all directions, and at midnight there were more than 200 police and civilians beating up the neighborhood, though it was believed that the beast had hidden herself in or under some of the near-by buildings. There no one at first had sufficient nerve to venture.

Just after midnight the lioness was captured. Her cage was pushed near her and her trainer forced her inside by waving a torch behind her. She is the property of Mr. Bartell, of New York. She weighs about 400 pounds.

It took hours to gather families together after the panic. Many lost clothing, hand bags, and watches in the wild flight from the lioness.

Rev. Dr. Lester G. Leggett will conduct the prayer meeting at Faith chapel tomorrow night.

ASBURY HOTEL MEN CAN SELL TO GUESTS

COMPACT MADE BETWEEN THEM AND OFFICIALS YESTERDAY.

Asbury Park, Aug. 23.—Despite the death for the present of the Excise Board bill, the hotels within the one mile limit will be allowed to sell liquors. A compact to this effect practically has been made between the hotel men and the Mayor and other officials.

At a conference following the meeting Monday night which held the funeral of the excise board project, Mayor Ten Broeck read a letter from Henry M. Nevins, Prosecutor of the Pleas in Monmouth county.

The Prosecutor said in the letter that he and his associates had evidence that liquor was sold in defiance of law in Asbury Park. This illegal selling to the public, the Prosecutor insisted, must cease. If not, raids would surely follow. The Mayor after reading the letter said he had received assurances from the county officials that so long as the hotels confined the sale of liquor to regular hotel guests no harm would come to them, but under no circumstances must an open bar or dispensing room be maintained.

The Mayor and councilmen looked with favor upon the proposition from Freehold and gave it semi-official endorsement as the only solution to the liquor problem. T. Frank Appleby, president of the Common Council and leader of the anti-high license forces, was at the conference. He did not object to the "straddle."

The hotel men known to be violating the one mile limit law will be told to be good and not to sell liquor to any one but guests. This they will do willingly, for the policy sanctioned by the officials will permit them to sell liquor without paying a penny for so doing.

Another Pledged One.

Charles Leonard, charged with drunkenness, was released under suspended sentence by Judge Runyon this morning under an agreement to sign the pledge at once. Leonard filed his pledge, very neat and regular, a half an hour after court closed. Judge Runyon usually meets a broken pledge with a fine of $20 and twenty days in jail.

Charles Schenck, of Prospect place, left today for Asbury Park, where he will spend his vacation.

FIRST WARD CLUB VOTES FOR CANDIDATES

Names Edward Caldwell and W. Starr Bullock for Councilmanic Nominations.

PERT ADDRESSES

Announcement Made that Buying of Votes at Coming Election Would Not Be Tolerated by Independents.

The First Ward Republican Club, at a very enthusiastic meeting held in the Taylor building on North avenue, last night, voted unanimously in favor of Edward Caldwell, of Westervelt avenue, as its candidate for councilman, and endorsed the candidacy of Councilman William Starr Bullock, favoring his return to the Common Council for another term. The matter of selecting six delegates to attend the city convention and the same number to attend the county convention was deferred until the next meeting, to be held on Tuesday night at the same place.

In the absence of the president, Dr. A. W. Anderson, who was called out of town by the illness of his daughter, Charles W. Griffen acted as chairman, and Councilman Clarence L. Murphy was the secretary.

Mr. Murphy explained the methods of holding primaries, selecting delegates, making nominations and filing the same, for the benefit of those not acquainted with these facts. In response to a question by Mr. Caldwell, as to who has represented the First Ward in the Common Council during the past few years, Mr. Murphy named the different ones, adding that Ralph I. Tolles is the present ward member. He referred to him as a machine man, a personal friend of Mr. MacMurray and a most estimable gentleman.

Mr. Murphy stated further that the machine dominates the First and Fourth Wards, and the independent Republicans of the First Ward thought it advisable to get together early, decide on its candidates and select its delegates. He urged the necessity of doing this as soon as possible, because the nominations have to be filed by September 2.

Joseph Allen, of Westervelt avenue, in response to an invitation, suggested the name of Edward Caldwell as the ward nominee for Common Council, whereupon the latter stated that his choice would be Councilman Bullock. He said that he favored the endorsement of the present member because of his record and principles for which he now stands. Continuing, he said that there are some reasons why he should not be the nominee, chiefly because he is not so well known as some others, and be believed that logically Mr. Bullock should be the candidate.

Mr. Murphy said that he felt sure that Mr. Bullock would like to be returned and he believed that he should be, because he is fearless and is afraid of no one. But he wanted it understood that the club was not formed to further the interests of Mr. Bullock's candidacy. Personally he favored Mr. Caldwell as the candidate at large.

Charles H. Russell said that he had heard that there was a feeling of animosity against Mr. Bullock, and if this is true it might be well to name some one else.

Mr. Caldwell expressed the opinion that a better and stronger man than himself should be chosen. He said that he had always voted the Republican ticket, but that he knew very little concerning politics, had never held an office and was not well enough known to run for one. He thought the candidate should be a man of wider acquaintance, and in conclusion said that he felt loath to accept the nomination, as he is a very busy man. He then said that he would retire and let the members discuss the matter, and he would let the club know very soon whether he would accept the honor if it decided to tender it to him. He defined his position clearly by saying that if elected he would be absolutely independent, accept no dictation from any individual or group of individuals not representing the ward.

While Mr. Caldwell was retiring, Councilman Bullock arrived, after a week's business trip through Pennsylvania. The two men retired together to discuss the question of Mr. Caldwell's candidacy, at the same time giving the club the chance to do likewise. In their absence the club voted unanimously in favor of Mr. Caldwell as the ward nominee and for Mr. Bullock as the member at large.

There was general discussion pro and con among the members in the

OFF TO THE LAKE.

Union Lodge Takes 100 on Its Annual Excursion.

Members and friends of Union Lodge, No. 4026, G. U. O. of O. F., colored, to the number of about 100, left the North Avenue station this morning on their annual excursion to Lake Hoptacong. The train was originally composed of eight coaches and a baggage car, but it required less than three coaches to accommodate the excursionists, who were a little late in leaving.

The committe in charge comprises William Jones, chairman; J. W. Maury, secretary; John Reed, treasurer; Peter Gordon, William Johnson, Thomas Bowser, C. C. Irby, A. W. Brown and Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson.

Want Another Whack.

Factory Inspector Neil McCarthy's team of polishers from the Singer Works at Elizabeth will visit Plainfield Saturday afternoon to take another whack at Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell's team of molders from the Pond Tool Works. Last Saturday when these teams met on the Star grounds at Elizabeth, McCardell's team defeated McCarthy's men by the score of 4 to 1. McCarthy claims this score would have been 1-1 had it not been for an error of his third baseman. He says there will be no mistakes this time unless it be on the part of McCardell's team. One hundred of Elizabeth's celebrities and others will accompany Neal's team and root for victory. The game will take place on the Clinton avenue grounds.

Mr. Mosher May Remain.

Stanley Mosher, who was called home from Panama owing to the illness and death of his mother, Mrs. John Mosher, has not yet decided whether he will return or not. He now stands in line for promotion to the position of assistant engineer on the construction work at Panama and he regrets very much to lose this opportunity for advancement. On the other hand he has interests here that are inclined to lead him to give up his plans for the future.

More Patents for Mr. Scott.

Walter Scott, of this city, has been granted two further patents for printing press improvements. He holds as many patents for machinery of this kind as any manufacturer in the country.

—J. V. Beekman, of West Eighth street, has had a telephone installed in his house.

MISS OYAMA'S ESCORT

Plainfielder Took Daughter of Japan's Field Marshal to Dinner.

AT TOKIO FUNCTION

Francis W. Frost, Who Is Traveling With Taft Party Through the East, Meets Distinguished People.

Francis W. Frost, of this city, who is one of the party traveling through the Philippines and Japan with Secretary Taft, will leave his eminent fellow voyagers in the Flowery Kingdom on September 30. From Japan Mr. Frost will go to Korea, and from there to China, Java, Burmah and India. He will sail for home from the latter country.

Mr. Frost has taken part in all the elaborate functions that have marked the progress of the travelers through the East. He has met many famous men of the Orient and a number of distinguished women.

In Tokio, at a reception given in the Arsenal Gardens, he had the honor of bringing the daughter of Filed Marshal Oyama, head of the conquering armies of Japan, in to dinner. Miss Oyama, whom he describes as "the prettiest girl in Japan," in a letter home, gave the Plainfielder her dinner card. The card, which is a long strip of Japanese rice paper of remarkable quality, bears the autograph of the young woman in English, written in pencil in one corner. Mr. Frost sent it home.

At this dinner Mr. Frost met the Marchioness Oyama and Marquis Ito, the famous Japanese statesman.

The reception accorded the party in Tokio was of the most elaborate character, Mr. Frost writes. The features surrounding it were nothing short of magnificent, and impressed even the islanders themselves. They are said to have been the most striking, in every way, ever held in Japan since the visit of General Grant to the Flowery Kingdom during his second term as President.

Among the functions which Mr. Frost attended was a luncheon tendered by the Emperor and Empress.

HE WAS HURRYING HOME TO SAVE HIS JOB

DEADHEAD RIDE OF WESLEY HARRINGTON, OF PHILA., BRIEFLY INTERRUPTED

The Jersey Central police wired Chief Kiely yesterday afternoon that a young man was riding between the tender and the first car of a Philadelphia train that had just left the terminal at Jersey City. They wanted the young man arrested.

Detective McCarthy was sent to the North Avenue depot to wait for the train. When it pulled in he found Wesley Harrington, twenty-six years old and well dressed, curled up comfortably in the place described. He was surprised when the sleuth swooped down on him, but surrendered gracefully.

Harrington wasn't held long. He told the Chief he was an employe of the Philadelphia & Reading road in Philadelphia, and was hurrying back to report for work last night. He had been having a good time in New York and woke up yesterday morning without the price of ticket home. He tried to deadhead himself through on the flier to save his job and repent in familiar surroundings.

He had papers on him that proved his statement regarding his work, and the rest of the story was too probable to be disbelieved. Chief Kiely, who sympathizes with erring and repentant youths, sent a special tracer after Judge Runyon and had Harrington arraigned at once.

As soon as the magistrate heard the young man's tale he suspended sentence and helped him figure the time he had in which to reach his job. A few men who have no particular horror of a young fellow who gets stranded in a gay city made up the fare for the next Philadelphia train, and sent Harrington away with their blessing, in ample time to reach his work before the boss would have reason to wonder where he was.

Death of Infant Son.

George Vincent Santuzzi, the seven-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Santuzzi, of Elm place, died last evening after an illness of short duration. Funeral services will be held from the parents' home this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be made at Hillside.

Camping at Piscataway.

Lawyers C. M. Dolliver and N. Douglas Drake have been spending the week ends in camp in Piscataway. They leave town Friday afternoon and return on Monday. The trips will be continued until fall.

MORE BRICK PAVEMENT

Councilmanic Committee Has Plans for it Under Consideration.

THINK IT CHEAPEST

Purpose of the Department to Hurry Along the Richmond Street Storm Sewer.

The question of extending the permanent pavement similar to that now in use in Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street, is being considered by the street committee of the Common Council, and it is expected that some definite plans will be presented in the near future.

It will be remembered that when the vitrified brick was laid in Watchung avenue, it was the intention of extending it in the business section if it proved satisfactory. This seems to be the case thus far and the committee, as well as the Council, is convinced that it will be far cheaper in the end to provide permanent pavement in the business part of the city, thus saving a considerable expense in the cost of repairs which now have to be made frequently.

If it is decided to lay vitrified brick through Front street, the Public Service Corporation will have to stand its share of the expense, and this will be a great advantage to the city, especially along that part where there are double tracks.

There is no doubt but that macadam roads are very expensive, especially where there is a great deal of travel, and the expense of repairs in resurfacing and rolling amounts to considerable in a year. There is no doubt but that an effort will be made to lay permanent pavement in Park avenue, when the extensive building operations are completed, for it will greatly enhance the value of the property, besides adding to the general appearance of that thoroughfare.

It is the purpose of the councilmanic street committee to hustle along the matter of the Richmond street sewer for the drainage of surface water, and at the September meeting it is expected that the ordinance will be advanced far enough to permit the starting of the work very soon. It is not the plan of the Common Council to complete the proposed improvement at one time, as it is an expensive job, which will cost the city about $20,000.

A portion will be completed this year, and in succeeding years it will be continued until finished. For several years the residents in Richmond street and vicinity have been sorely troubled with floods in heavy rain and at times the street has been impassable. It is with the intention of relieving this condition that the separate sewer and drains are to be installed. Mr. Gavett, the street commissioner, has drafted plans for the improvements as planned, and if carried out will prove a great benefit to that end of the city.

A similar condition exists in Plainfield avenue, and the committee proposes to build a separate sewer and drains through that street in the near future. The Common Council was not quite ready to take this matter up, and rather than hold up both improvements, it was decided to go ahead with the Richmond street sewer. This was done with the understanding that the Plainfield avenue sewer would also be completed.

FEAST IN CELL.

John Peroni Cheered by Big Meat Pie—Divides With Companion.

John Peroni and Mrs. Arabella Drake, who were held for the Grand Jury yesterday by Justice Mosher on a charge of criminal misbehaviour, secured bail yesterday afternoon, through the efforts of their attorney, Fred J. Huff. They were bonded in $100 each, furnished by John Consoli.

Peroni had a feast in his cell yesterday at noon. His sister-in-law brought him an immense meat pie, steaming hot. She said he didn't usually get fed so heavily, but it was a special occasion and she thought he needed cheering up. Peroni asked Turnkey McCue's permission to share his pie with the Drake woman, who was in an adjoining cell. The officer allowed him to divide it, and the two had dinner, if not exactly together, at least in concert, so to speak.

Thatcher Renews Acquaintances.

George Thatcher, formerly of this city, who is now a member of "The County Chairman" company that will open Plainfield's new theatrte tonight, arrived in town early today and spent considerable time renewing old acquaintances. One of his first stops was at The Daily Press office, where he was warmly greeted. Mr. Thatcher says that he has witnessed and taken part in many performances, but he thinks that "The County Chairman" appeals more to the people than any other show because of its human interest.

JAIL DELIVERY AVERTED

PRISONER MAKES NOISE

Regan, at Work on Corridor Door, Betrayed Himself to Night Watchman on Duty Outside.

An attempt at escape by one of the inmates, and possibly a general delivery, was nipped in the bud at the Somerville jail early this morning through the alertness of Night Watchman William Moore.

While walking about the jail at midnight, Moore heard a sound as if an iron bar had dropped outside the walls He aroused Deputy Sheriff Anderson, who was sleeping in the officers' quarters, and the latter turned on all the lights. A close investigation was made, but nothing that could account for the noise was discovered.

Moore, however, was not satisfied that all was well, and redoubled vigilance after the lights were again turned off. At 3 o'clock he heard a noise as if some one was trying to force the door of the west corridor. He aroused Anderson again, and convinced him that something was wrong. Guards were posted at all the doorways.

As soon as daylight appeared, Anderson started a thorough examination of the jail. In John Regan's cell on the east side of the building he found the explanation of the noises. Regan had broken a hole in the stone wall through to the west side of the building, and had attempted to force open the door at the end of the corridor. He worked with an old poker and an iron bar wrenched from the bed in his cell.

Regan was arrested for robbery two weeks ago, and is a clever and courageous rascal. It is believed that he had planned to let out every prisoner on the west corridor, at least, and perhaps all the inmates. There are twenty-two prisoners in the institution. Regan has been put in another cell, and the guards have been increased all through the jail. The guards say they will die of nervous strain if the new jail isn't hurried up.

DEMOCRATIC OUTING A PERFECT LOVE FEAST

LEADERS SAY NOT A SINGLE BOOM WAS STARTED.

The annual outing of the Democrats of Union county to Whitestone, L. I., yesterday, was from all accounts a perfect love-feast. Not a single boom was started, neither was a conference held to talk matters over. The faithful appeared to be satisfied with general conditions and the outlook and decided to wait for cooler weather before opening the campaign.

There were nearly 700 Democrats aboard the steamboat. It was a three hours sail to Whitestone and when the party arrived a fine dinner was prepared and awaiting a hungry crowd. The afternoon was passed in a social manner and the return journey was commenced at 6:30 o'clock. It was three hours later when a landing was made at the 'Port.

There were four Plainfielders in the party—S. S. Swackhamer, James E. Martine, Justice Hezekiah Hand and Charles L. Moffett, Esq. They all expressed themselves well pleased with the trip. Mr. Swackhamer in speaking of the outing today said that nothing was planned for the future, but that a conference of county leaders will be held later to arrange for the opening of the campaign.

Robert McAdams was the chairman of the committee of arrangements, and he was ably assisted by several prominent Democrats throughout the county.

With practically everyone of its 1,350 seats already disposed of, the New Plainfield theatre will throw open its doors for the initial performance tonight. Scores of men have worked incessantly to have it completed and ready and it stands today one of the finest playhouses in the State. All arrangements have been completed for the event and it will mark a new era for the local amusement loving public.

The performance of "The County Chairman" is scheduled to start promptly at 8 o'clock, and during the intermission a programme of local flavor has been provided. Owing to Mayor James F. Buckle's unexpected absence from the city, Judge William N. Runyon has consented to make the dedicatory address. Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, who worked for many months to have the theatre located in town, will also be called upon, and there are several other numbers to be given during the intermissions. The auditorium is to be decorated with flowers and the whole house brilliantly lighted in the early part of the evening. Manager Counihan and his general representative, Wilbur H. Gelatt, will be in the lobby and will greet the many friends that they have made since their entrance to the city.

W. J. COUNIHAN,
Proprietor New Plainfield Theatre.

The corps of employes at the house includes Samuel Cunningham, of Philadelphia, who will be Manager Counihan's business director and treasurer; James Henry, formerly of Blaney's Arch Street theatre, Philadelphia, as stage manager, with eight assistants; John Richardson, of East Front street, flyman; John

W. H. GELATT,
General Representative.

Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, property man, and Andrew Carpenter, orchestra leader, with theatre musicians from Elizabeth and Newark.

Joseph Robinson, of West Third street, is to be head usher, and his assistants are Walter Hamilton, Edmond Texier, William Hoffman and Henry Uhrhahn.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley and Manager Counihan brought fifteen carts to the side and back of the theatre yesterday afternoon and exercised personal supervision while the building debris was removed. So anxious were they to have everything cleared up that both worked with pick and shovel, to the great amusement of a large crowd that chaffed them as they attacked great heaps of brick and mortar. Today fire escapes were placed on all sides of the structure and the twelve exits were indicated for the benefit of tonight's audience. The only thing not entirely ready is the men's smoking and retiring room, but the women's retiring rooms are fully completed and awaiting for the first visitors.

SYLVESTER RANDOLPH VICTIM OF DYSENTERY

PASSED AWAY AT HIS HOME EARLY THIS MORNING.

Sylvester F. Randolph, one of the best known residents of this city, and an uncle of Mrs. L. W. Randolph, of Myrtle avenue, died this morning at his home in West Eighth street, following a week's attack of dysentery and kidney trouble. His condition was serious from the first and little hope was entertained for his recovery. This morning he entered a semi-conscious state from which he failed to rally.

Mr. Randolph was born in Plainfield and lived here all his life. He was a carpenter by trade and followed it for many years. He was a member of the First Baptist church and a regular attendant. He is survived by a wife, two daughters, Mrs. William Abbott and Miss Lulu Randolph, and two sons, E. S. F. Randolph and Richard Randolph, all of this city.

The funeral service will be held from his late home Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be at Hilliside.

AUTO SUIT POSTPONED.

Witness for Stanbery Out of State—Hearing Next Friday.

The damage suit brought by Oscar Harrison against William R. Stanbery, over which the jury in Justice VonMinden's court disagreed after an all-day hearing two weeks ago, was again adjourned this morning. The hearing is now set for September 1, at 10 a. m.

After the disagreement the court adjourned the hearing until this morning. When the case was called today, Counsellor Swackhamer, for the defense, asked for an adjournment because Miss Ada Westphal, one of the most important witnesses, is out of the State. Attorney W. L. Hetfield, Jr., for the plaintiff, made no objection and the court laid the trial over until next Friday. It is not believed that the hearing will again be postponed.

LOVE LED MATTHEWS TO COMMIT SUICIDE

MYSTERY OF YOUTH'S RASH ACT HAS BEEN EXPLAINED.

The mystery surrounding the suicide of William Matthews, aged 17, has been solved at last. It was the hoplessness of a love affair that led to his rash deed.

It will be remembered that the young man hanged himself to a hay mow in the barn of Medford Runyon, at Stelton, on Monday of last week, the scene of his death being the structure that was destroyed by fire with four head of horses at an early hour yesterday morning.

At the time of the suicide no reason could be assigned for the act. Young Matthews was a quiet, steady boy of good habits, who always seemed in good spirits, and his successful resort to self-destruction was a great shock to the community in which he lived and was respected. The cause was a problem that none could solve.

It is now learned that love prompted his death.

Young Matthews was deeply in love with a young and handsome Hungarian girl who is employed in the service of Peter Leeson, at Stelton. He wanted to marry her, but he was a Protestant and she is a Catholic, and this difference in their religion proved an insurmountable bar to their union.

That the young girl was disposed to regard his suit with favor is shown by the fact that she communicated with her family in Hungary, it is said, and asked their advice as to what she would do. The answer, it is said, was an order not to wed one of a religion different to her own.

The knowledge of this rendered young Matthews despondent. Besides, he was earning very little, certainly not enough to support a wife, and the girl took the position that she would not marry any one who could not give her a home of her own. She was not disposed to take a husband and continue to labor as before.

Young Matthews is said to have brooded over the hopelessness of his passion until he determined to end it all by death. He felt that he could not live without the girl whom he adored.

His tragic suicide in the Runyon barn was the next act in this drama in real life.

The girl in the case feels her position keenly, and was greatly wrought up over her lover's fate. While she felt that she was in no way to blame for his death, she regretted that he should have resorted to so desperate a remedy.

Local gossip has weaved quite a fancy out of the affair, and whispers about how the girl imagines she is haunted by the dead boy's presence, and shuns the dark, but investigation fails to establish any foundation for so grim a tale.

Pennsylvania Railroad Maintains Schedule.

(New York Tribune, Aug. 13, 1905.)

During the month of July the Pennsylvania Special arrived in Chicago exactly on the minute of its schedule every day. The eastbound Pennsylvania Special arrived in New York on schedule time twenty-three days. The average detention on seven days was less than ten minutes, due entirely to conditions for which the train crew could not be held responsible. The greatest breach in the schedule was on July 14, when the Special was held up behind a freight wreck, which blocked all four tracks on the Middle Division, entailing a loss of two hours and twenty-two minutes in the regular arriving time at New York. It is difficult to find a match for this record. It demonstrates that the schedule has sufficient elasticity to take up any ordinary detentions which may occur between termini, and that even a faster regular schedule may be made should it be deemed wise. The fine condition of the roadbed, the efficient motive power, and skillful operation all contribute to the ease with which the Special accomplishes its work.

BECK'S REMARKABLE FEAT

Plainfield Pitcher Adds His Name to Baseball "Roll of Honor."

WHAT IT MEANS.

Reveals the Fact that He Had the Skill to Fool at Least Twenty-Seven Batsmen.

When Billy Beck recently retired the Newburgs without a hit or run, he performed the feat that is the aspiration of every pitcher. It is not an achievement easy of accomplishment. A glance at the records proves this. Since the National League was organized, thirty years ago, only thirty-three pitchers have succeeded in putting their names on this roll of honor, an average of only a trifle more than one a season. This record includes games played in the National and Players' Leagues, American Association and American League. The difficulty of the feat is not hard to understand. It means that the pitcher must have had the craft to fool at least twenty-seven hitters.

Not only must he have kept them from putting out hard drives into places of safety; he must also have had the fielding ability to prevent a little bunt dropped along either base line, and beaten to first base, from marring the clean record of ciphers in the hit column.

The infield hit counts just as heavily in the statistics as the drive that clears the fence, and nowadays with the fast men that play the game, it is indeed an unusual contest where at least one player is not able to beat out a bunt.

It has been twenty-five years since the first pitcher was able to send an opposing team from the field without yielding a single safety. Lee Richmond, Worcester's lefthander, one of the first of the southpaws, was the twirler, and the team he beat was Cleveland. In this game not a Cleveland player reached first base in any way. Richmond did not give a base on balls, and the team behind him did not make an error.

John M. Ward did the same thing against Providence a year and five days later, but the achievement of the famous Buffalo player, who afterward came to Brooklyn and became a noted lawyer, bore no comparison with the same exploit as "Cy" Young performed it against the Philadelphia American League team twenty-four years later, May 5, 1904.

On this occasion the great Boston veteran, after fifteen years on the diamond, still one of the most successful of twirlers, retired the Athletics in one, two, three order for the nine innings, giving neither a hit, base on balls, nor a hit by pitched ball, and not an error of any kind was made behind him.

Technically, Richmond and Ward did the same thing, but it must be borne in mind that the baseball of their day was very different from that of the present.

Then the pitcher could do anything he wanted in the box, from jumping in the air to taking a short run before he delivered the ball. Moreover, the rule was seven balls and three strikes, and a pitcher who couldn't locate the plate in seven tries must have had very poor control. Today they have to do it in four, with the additional handicap that the batsmen, while they may not land any harder on the ball than the sluggers of two decades ago, are infinitely more resourceful and tricky.

Beside, both Richmond and Ward shut out a comparatively weak hitting team, while Young downed one of the best aggregations in the country.

Twice again, in 1880, teams were retired without hits—Boston by Corcoran, of Chicago, August 19, and Worcester, by Galvin, of Buffalo, the next day.

Nobody was able to get away with the trick in 1881, but in 1882 Corcoran, of Chicago, repeated against Worcester his previous success over Boston.

In 1883 the feat was recorded twice, Radbourne, of Providence, a great pitcher, scoring it against Cleveland, and the latter team getting even at the expense of the tailender, Phillies, by giving them the same dose, Daly pitching.

Corcoran, of Chicago, made his record the greatest of any of the "no-hit" pitchers, by doing the act for the third time in 1884 against Providence.

No other pitcher has three such games to his credit, though Christy Mathewson, of New York, and "Cy" Young, of the Boston Americans, may be added to the list yet, for each has two records of the kind to his credit, and each is good for several years of effective pitching.

Galvin, of Buffalo, again repeated in 1884, Detroit being his victim.

Providence was twice retired without a hit in 1885, Clarkson, of Boston, and Ferguson, of Philadelphia, performing the feat.

Clarkson and Ferguson were two of the greatest luminaries who ever adorned the box. Ferguson, beside being a masterful pitcher, was a remarkable all-around player, who played any position and could hit the ball harder than any member of the team. Clarkson, with "Mike" Kelly, of lamented memory, made up the famous battery sold by Chicago for $20,000, the highest sum ever paid for two players.

In 1887 Seward and Weyhing, of the Athletics, both got away with the trick in the same season. Then comes quite a break. Four years passed before any twirler was good enough to send back his opponents hitless; then it was Lovett, of Brooklyn, who performed the feat against the New York Giants.

Nine days later New York got complete revenge, for the great Amos Rusie, one of the speediest pitcher who ever threw a ball, administered the same dose to the Brooklyn nine.

Big Jack Stivetts, of Boston, once more made Brooklyn see how it felt to get the whitewash brush thrown over its hit column in 1892, and Jones, of Pittsburg, put his name on the records, with Cincinnati for his victim, in the same season.

Washington, blanked by Hawke, of Baltimore, was the only addition to the roll in 1893, and then came another four years blank until 1897, when Young did the trick for Cincinnati.

The season of 1898 saw the feat recorded the unusual number of four times, first by Hughes, of Baltimore, against Boston; then by Breitenstein, of Cincinnati, against Pittsburg; next by Donohue, of Philadelphia, against Boston, and finally by Thornton, of Chicago, against Brooklyn.

Washington and New York suffered at the hands of Philippe, of Louisville, and Willis, of Boston, in 1899, and in 1900 Philadelphia, deprived of hits by Hahn, of Cincinnati, was the only team to make this kind of baseball history.

Mathewson, of New York, kept St. Louis from putting out a safety, July 12, 1901, and Callahan, by retiring Detroit without a hit, September 20, 1902, put himself on record as the first American League pitcher to perform the feat.

Fraser, of Philadelphia, was the only pitcher to win the twirling blue ribbon in 1903, Chicago being his prize.

Beside Young's wonderful exploit, already referred to, there was one other no-hit game in 1904, Tannehill, of the Boston Americans, pitching it against the Chicago team.

Mathewson, of New York, did the trick to the Chicago Nationals early in the present season, and shares with Henley the honors of 1905.

Judging by the records of the past, the feat will hardly take place again this season.

AMUSEMENTS.

With the present engagement of "Woodland," the Grand Opera House, New York, auspiciously opens the season of 1905-06, and "Woodland" is only a foretaste of the good things that are to follow weekly in rapid succession. Manager John H. Springer, on August 19th, entered upon a second five-year tenancy of this theatre, and it is his intention to eclipse completely the splendid record achieved during the first five years of his managerial direction. Nothing but the biggest Broadway successes will be presented at the Grand's popular schedule of prices, and sooner or later all of America's leading attractions will come over to Eighth avenue.

Luna Park is preparing itself for the five days' jubilation of the Mardi Gras of next month. Thompson & Dundy, who were the originators of the Mardi Gras idea at the New York seaside resort, have taken hold actively in the management of the coming celebration, which they promise will be a sensational success. Already the cohorts of the various shows are assembling in private rehearsals for the parades and carnivals of the five days of merrymaking. It is expected that there will be considerable rivalry among the amusement enterprises for the best showing, and Thompson & Dundy say that this year, as in former seasons, Luna Park will easily be among the leaders. The free circus continues to draw crowds of curious to the park. Among the acts on the programme this week are Le Page, Edgerton, Josie Ashton, J. Rooney, Calcedo, Lorenz, Herbert's Dogs, Carl Goliath, Seeth's Bears, Did Duo, Abdallir Trio and Cameroni.

Ibsen will be served to the Proctor patrons for the first time during the week of August 28th at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, the tempting morsel being "A Doll's House," for the leading part in which Miss Florence Rockwell has been especially engaged. Miss Rockwell is a great admirer of Mrs. Fiske, and it is believed that her interpretation of the part will be a close reproduction of that famous actress. The cast will include the following members of the regular Fifth Avenue Stock Company: J. H. Gilmour, Geoffrey Stein, Harold Hartsell, Albert Veazie, Miss Eleanor Moretti, Miss Ethel Conroy, Miss Mary Bertrand and others. This will be the last attraction of the summer season, the regular season beginning the week of September 4th with Amelia Bingham, Charles Richman, Gertrude Coghlan, J. H. Gilmour and the other members of the new all star stock company in a revival of "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson."

Mrs. E. Frankenheim and children, Louise and Louis, of New York, have returned after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. M. Leichtentritt, of West Front street.

Miss Lizzie Stafford, of Grove street, left yesterday for Toronto, Can., where she will visit her brother, James A. Stafford, who is in business there.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The Hoboken team will play the Cincinnati Nationals at St. George Cricket Grounds on Sunday.

Manager Denman expects McCormick to play with him on Saturdays even though he has gone to York, Pa.

Jimmie Beisel pitched for Leighton against Mauch Chunk on Saturday and was defeated by a score of 5 to 4.

When asked what he proposed to do on Saturday, Manager Denman replied: "Why Westfield will win, of course."

Harry McCormick, playing left field for York, on Tuesday only got one hit. He accepted five chances in the field without an error.

It is said that Joe Wani has apologized to Jack O'Neill for Saturday's incident, expressing his regrets that he struck him with the bat.

"Willie" Deegan has been keeping in fine condition for Saturday's game and he says that the Daabsters are scheduled for another victory.

Vinson, who was recently suspended by Cleveland, of the American League, has joined the Harrisburg team, of the Tri-State League.

"Red" Waller says that with the Plainfield team behind him, he don't think he would ever lose a game. Sad reflection on his own team.

It is too bad that some of the local critics on baseball matters are not given an opportunity to demonstrate their ability on the diamond.

If Manager Daab consents to play last Saturday's game over again with Westfield, the Denmanites will not be allowed to come so near defeating the locals.

If Manager Daab plays Summit, Dover and the Elizabethport Stars, and wins a majority of the games, there will be no question as to the county championship.

One of the local fans saw the Pittsburgs defeat New York on Tuesday and in his opinion the old Scotch Plains team could have done the same thing. He says the Giants have no license to win the pennant this season.

Bender, the Indian pitcher, has been ill with Bright's disease at his home in Detroit, and his phyiscian does not believe he will be able to play again this season. Bender married a wealthy Detroit woman after which he decided to make his home in the Michigan city.

Manager Frank Burke of the Elizabethport Stars, says that he would like to have another game with Plainfield, and no doubt Manager Daab will be able to accommodate him. The Daabsters defeated the Stars the second game of the season by a good score, with Long, of New London, opposing them.

The rules to govern the playing of the post-season series between the winners of the National and American League pennants, provide that every player engaging in the contests must be a bona fide member of the club he represents regularly under contract, and said contract must be approved and promulgated by the president of the league of which his club is a member on or before August 31 of each year.

Manager Charles Denman in further explanation of his intention to protest last Saturday's Plainfield-Westfield game, says that he does not want anyone to think that the Detroit-Washington game Tuesday had anything to do with his decision. That was simply a coincidence and that he had previously decided to protest the contest. He thought best to wait until some time after Saturday before speaking of it, as he felt sure that neither Manager Daab or himself was in the right frame of mind to discuss the question on Saturday. Mr. Denman says that he makes the contention solely on the merits of the rule governing and defining the duties of a catcher and he believes that O'Neill did interfere with the play as planned and that Deegan was in the box in position to pitch the ball. He will suggest that the last game be thrown out and another one played in its place.

TENNIS.

The annual open tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association for the East Jersey Challenge Cup, will be opened on the courts of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club next Tuesday and continue to September 4. The events will consist of men's singles, for the challenge cup; men's doubles, first and runners-up prizes; mixed doubles, first and runners-up prizes. Play on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will begin at 3 p. m.; Saturday at 2 p. m., and Labor Day at 10 o'clock in the morning. Miles S. Charlock is chairman of the tournament committee. It is expected that the Plainfield County Club will be well represented in the tournament.

GOLF.

The only event at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday will be the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. Additional events are planned for Labor Day, when the fall season will open.

George White, of the borough, has been visiting relatives at Millstone.

Plainfield, N. J., August 24, 1905.

The contributions for the King's Daughter's Baby Camp have now reached a total of $96.26. Who will make it an even $100?

No, gentle reader, Wall street did not have anything to do with floating that airship over New York yesterday, though it does float some things that come down much quicker.

"Rowdyism such as Capt. Driscoll displayed is disgraceful, to say the least."—Westfield Leader. Not to mention the vile language and questionable tacts of "Hot Air" Mallen which women as well as men were compelled to listen to throughout the contest. "Clean ball and not scraps is what the public pay for," is another Leader sparklet. Since when did the Westfield team begin to play clean ball? They don't even know what the word means.

Some statements are so saturated with their own moral as to require no comment. "Riding on a car during the excitement over naval battles between Russia and Japan," said Thomas Martindale before the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania, "I observed that the men were reading the war news and the women were reading advertisements. Those women I watched keenly, read every line of the advertisements, and then turned to the woman's page. This ride was a distance of eighty miles, yet at the journey's end the women had not yet had time to turn to the actual news of the day. The women want advertising to read, and you must present your business in readable shape to be in the fight these days.'—Philadelphia Record.

SAYS WAGON DRIVERS MONOPOLIZE THE ROAD

RUPERT W. ANDERSON PROTESTS TO TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE.

Rupert W. Anderson, who has a handsome summer home in Washington Valley, back of Washington Rock, takes exception to drivers of stone and ice wagons "monopolizing" the "notch" road leading to this city. His objection to the practice found expression in the following open letter addressed to the North Plainfield township committee today:

"On behalf of myself and other taxpayers of the township, I beg to call your attention to the violations of law in the township by drivers of ice, stone, and other wagons using the public road from Washington Valley to the borough line. As I understand it, the law of the road is, that all moving vehicles shall keep to the right, and in passing, pass to the left. This law is constantly violated, by drivers who monopolize the whole road with overloaded wagons, and act as though there were no laws they were bound to respect. The drivers of ice wagons frequently block the road at the hotel in the notch, and wash their ice in the road to the annoyance of taxpayers and to the injury of the public highway, while the loose stones dropped from the overloaded stone wagons have been known to have seriously lamed horses driven over the road. I beg that your honorable body will take immediate action in the matter and see that the rights of the taxpayers of the township and of the community at large are respected.

Yours respectfully,
Rupert W. Anderson.

Mr. Gavett Wont Go.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett will not attend the convention of the League of American Municipalities, which opened in Toledo, O., yesterday, although the Council, at its last meeting gave him permission to do so and voted him $150 for expenses. His assistant was taken ill Saturday, and pressure of business makes it impossible for the commissioner to leave his work.

COAL BARRENS MAKE DESCENT ON CASHINS

LIVELY TWELVE GATHER FOR A FAREWELL RECEPTION TO COMRADE.

After an enforced quiesence of a year's duration, the hungry and irresistible Coal Barrens Twelve executed one of their old-time devastating raids last night. Excuses for swooping down on defenceless fellow-members, once many and prolific, have been scarce for some time, so the news that M. J. Cashin, one of the original Barrens, is on the point of moving to Roseville, Newark, was hailed with joy and much champing of teeth.

The old rallying cry was sounded early last night, and the Barrens gathered for a descent on the unfortunate Cashin family, the which they called a farewell reception. It was a highly successful swoop. Much singing throbbed on the still Division street air, stories bubbled through the sections of the night otherwise unoccupied, and a lot of things to eat and drink took part in the affair. When the Twelve were through, Mr. Cashin was Beef Barren, a Cake Barren and a Barren of several other degrees.

In the course of the lean year the consciences of the Barrens have become tender, so they couldn't go away from the Cashins last night without doing something to soothe the soul of their victims. They left a handsome bit of household furniture to help brighten the new home in Newark.

BELIEVED INTRUDER TO BE HIS FATHER

BUT WILLIAM FOSTER THOUGHT DIFFERENT WHEN HE WAS STRUCK.

William L. Foster, twenty years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Foster, of Greylock avenue, Belleville, and a former employe of The Daily Press, was confronted by a strange man as he was entering his home about 11 o'clock Tuesday night. The members of the Foster family left the house early in the evening, and the son was the first to return home. As he opened the front door he saw a man dressed in a light suit in the hallway, a few feet away. Believing it to be his father, he said:

"Hello, pop."

As he did so the man advanced, shoved Foster up against the wall and ran out the door. Foster went out after him, but the stranger disappeared in the darkness. When the other members of the family came home an investigation was made, and it was discovered that nothing in the house had been disturbed.

It is believed that the stranger entered the house just before the arrival of the young man. He obtained entrance, probably, through the front door, which had been left open.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster formerly resided on Maple avenue, the borough.

WON'T PAY INDEMNITY

Russia Willing to Treat on all Points But This.

UTTERLY IMPOSSIBLE

Declares that Such Payment Would Seriously Menace Vital Interests of the State.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 24.—The Associated Press has the best of reasons and authority for declaring again, with increased emphasis, that Russia will never consent to the payment of an indemnity to Japan. Such payment would so gravely menace the vital interests of the State as to make this article in the Japanese terms utterly impossible of acceptance.

Furthermore, The Associated Press has the same reasons and authority for the declaration that if Japan withdrew her indemnity demand peace would practically be assured, as the Russian attitude on the other three points, including the cession of Saghalien, does not preclude the possibility of reaching a satisfactory settlement.

Indemnity is the crux of the whole matter. If this question can be arranged, it is believed here that all other questions on which there has been a divergence of opinion will practically settle themselves.

In view of the known Russian attitude on the other eight points, Russia believes that Japan's insistence on indemnity is the only thing that will make peace impossible. Officials declare that attempts at word juggling, such as calling indemnity by some other name, or attempting to collect indemnity under the guise of other payments, will avail nothing. Russia, they say, will not conclude a peace treaty at Portsmouth which includes the payment of indemnity or other financial contribution.

Russia is ready, however, to make a reasonable and proper payment for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners in the hands of the Japanese.

This has been the attitude of the Foreign Office since the four points in dispute were referred to St. Petersburg from Portsmouth, and it is the true expression of Russian official and public opinion. Since the beginning of the discussion here on Japan's original terms there has been absolutely nothing to suggest that Russia could or would pay indemnity. Each day has sharpened the conviction that such a payment is impossible, and today the general opinion, from the highest to the lowest, is that Japan's insistence on an indemnity dooms the Portsmouth negotiations to failure.

Russians recognize the serious internal conditions of the country, but they say these conditions will never force the payment of an indemnity, which would be dishonorable in itself and would most seriously menace the life of the State.

SOUTH RIVER'S BIG BLAZE.

Offices and Wareroom Destroyed at a Loss of $10,000.

New Brunswick, Aug. 24.—The four-story offices and warerooms of Andrew S. Church, a coal and feed merchant, at South River, were destroyed by fire Tuesday night. The fire started on the upper floor of the building, which is located near the river, and got beyond control of the South River department. Then a hurry call was sent to New Brunswick for help. Phoenix Engine Company No. 3 was sent down, making the seven-mile run from New Brunswick in thirty-five minutes and getting a stream on in forty-five minutes from the time the call was received.

The Public Service Corporation took the members of the company down in a regular trolley car and brought them back in a special. The warehouse was destroyed, but the New Brunswick firemen kept the flames from spreading, although at one time it looked as if a section of the town had to go. The loss was about $10,000 on the building and its contents. Two men who were employed in the building have not been located and it is feared they were burned to death.

Not the Same Man.

Hearing that Simon Schafiora, the baker's helper, who robbed Henry Voehl, the Somerset street baker, of $100 in money and jewelry, has been seen in Perth Amboy, Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, went to Perth Amboy, yesterday, with a description of the missing man. The suspected man is working at the latter place, but as the description did not tally with the one wanted, nothing was accomplished.

STATE ORDERS SERVICE FOR NAMESAKE SHIP

WILL BE FURNISHED BY TIFFANY & CO., FOR $10,000.

Trenton, Aug. 24.—The commission, consisting of the Governor, William J. Bradley, president of the Senate; Speaker John Boyd Avis, Samuel D. Dickinson, Secretary of State, and Adjutant General R. Heber Breintnall, which has in charge the purchasing of a silver set for the battleship New Jersey, met Tuesday. Representatives of Tiffany & Co., of New York, presented a drawing of a service designed by F. W. Whitehouse. It consists of a centrepiece, a large punchbowl with trays, a pair of candelabra of nine lights each, a tea set, including kettle, pot, milk and water bowls with tray, a smaller punchbowl, salad bowl, asparagus dish and strainer, four compotiers, eight vases, six saltcellars, four olive dishes, four vegetable dishes, two entree dishes and one large meat dish.

The centrepiece is most elaborate. Its supporters are the female figures of the State coat of arms, emblematic of Liberty and Prosperity.

Tiffany & Co. asked $12,000 for the service as designed, but when informed that $10,000 was all the commission was authorized to spend the firm agreed to furnish the service at that price. The design was approved and the firm authorized to do the work. The service is to be ready for presentation at about the time the New Jersey goes into commission.

STATE'S VICTORY.

Court Holds that New Jersey Can Protect Its Water.

Trenton, Aug. 24.—The State of New Jersey won a notable victory Tuesday when Vice Chancellor Bergen filed an opinion upholding the constitutionality of the Bachellor act, passed last winter, to prevent the Hudson County Water Company from selling water to the New York municipalities of Staten Island.

All of the contentions of the water company that the act was a violation of constitutional rights, and that it was a violation of the Interstate Commerce act of the United States, were set aside by the Vice Chancellor's decision. It is the intention of the water company to now carry the matter to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Governor Stokes signed this act May 11 last, and did so as a rebuke to those who contended that it was unconstitutional. The Governor said that was a matter for the courts, and for him to decide.

WIFE USES WHIP.

Lashes Pretty Saleswoman Until Crowd Interferes.

Asbury Park, Aug. 24.—Flourishing a rawhide whip, which she snapped angrily through the aisles of a department store, Tuesday morning, Mrs. Emma Cohen, wife of a local business man, rushed to the stationery counter and, leaning over, struck Miss Emma Stager, a pretty saleswoman, a stinging blow across the shoulders.

"Will you let my husband alone?" she screamed, and struck Miss Stager repeatedly until shoppers interfered.

During Mrs. Cohen's absence from the city some one wrote her that Cohen was giving more time to the saleswoman than prudence would justify. After the chastisement Miss Stager refused to admit an interest in Cohen, but promised to get even.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 27.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Mission work among women.—Acts xvi, 13-18; Tit. ii, 3-5.

It seems to be one of the unfortunate phases of human life that women suffer from so many things for which they are not responsible and over which they have no control. The correctness of this statement can find no better illustration than in heathen lands. The women of India, China and Japan have had nothing to do with the development of the religions of their countries, and yet who suffers so much as they from the infamous features of these religions? They have been held in more or less bondage and have suffered most from the practices of the religious faith of their country. It was the mother in India who cast her babe as an offering into the Ganges, and it is the girl widow there today who lives a life indescribable in its cruelty, and yet her husband had been chosen for her, and in many cases she had never seen him! Christianity is the only religion that has recognized womanhood at its true value and has given woman her rightful place in life; hence the gospel should be carried to the women in heathen lands and should lift them, as it only can, out of the burdens and cares of their lives.

Mission work among women has always been unusually successful. Women have found in Christianity that which satisfies the wants and needs of their hearts. They seem able to grasp the blessings and benefits of Christianity even more heartily than men and are also more ready than men to accept Christ and to consecrate their lives to Him. Paul found that women were ready to respond to the call of Christ for consecration and service. In Lydia we have a good type of the effect of Christianity upon the lives of women and of the invaluable service that women have rendered to Christianity. And millions of consecrated women like Lydia have given their lives to Jesus Christ in beautiful service for others. But, inasmuch as it was done in His name, it was done unto Him.

Mission work among women should not only aim to save them by faith in Jesus Christ, but also to develop in them the traits and characteristics that true Christian women should possess. Paul in his instructions to Titus sets these forth as follows: "The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, obedient to their own husbands; that the word of God be not blasphemed."

Mission work for women must largely be done by women. Women understand each other better, and on the mission fields they have easier access to the homes and to the women. In foreign fields this is especially true. The women live enforced secluded lives in many cases, and only the women missionaries can have the opportunity of speaking to them of Christ. Every Christian woman should be specially and deeply interested in mission work for women.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Matt. xv, 21-28; John iv, 21-30; Rom. x, 14, 15; Matt. xxvi, 6-13; Rom. xvi, 1-5; Rev. xxii, 17.

Wafted From the Philippines.

A letter from Rev. George William Wright, the successor to the late lamented Leonard P. Davidson as missionary of the Presbyterian board in Manila, says: "We have Endeavor societies in almost all of our churches, though it is a difficult thing to give them the personal attention they so much need. Our Tondo congregation here in Manila has a strong society, and every Friday night they fill the little room. This is a sort of first training school for young preachers. I mean by that that they begin to do their talking in the Christian Endeavor meeting, and it is usually the young men who develop in this way who become our evangelists."

The Quiet Hour In California.

California is far in the lead in the matter of Comrades of the Quiet Hour. Miss Sadie I. Tuthill, the superintendent for the state, recently reported a list of 193 new names. "The interest in the Quiet Hour," she writes, "is steadily increasing throughout the state, and every mail brings a testimony from some one who has been helped by the observance of this covenant."

Rouse Ye For Christian Endeavor.

[A new state song written for and dedicated to the Louisiana Christian Endeavor union by John R. Clements, press superintendent World's Christian Endeavor union.]

Sing to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia."

Sing a stirring working song
That tells of much to do
As we press our way along
To Jesus, ever true.
Many tasks now wait our hand,
With workers all too few.
Rouse ye for Christian Endeavor!

CHORUS.

Peal out! Peal out! A watchword sweet and clear.
Peal out! Peal out! The hour for work is here.
"Christ and church" our call today,
And this our banner year!
Rouse ye for Christian Endeavor!

Sound a stirring bugle call
And wake the sleeping band.
Work is waiting great and small;
Let no one idle stand.
Jesus needs us in the ranks;
Move forth at his command.
Rouse ye for Christian Endeavor!

Harvests white now need the blade,
Why pass an idle day?
Have you Jesus' call obeyed?
Forth to the field away.
Rich reward is waiting you,
Then labor while ye may.
Rouse ye for Christian Endeavor!

"In behalf of your proprietary article called AZIENZA CREAM, as a remedy for diseases of the skin, I desire to add my appreciation of its wonderful properties as a cure in a case of Bone Tumor or Abscess of five years growth on my husband's back, which I have cured in less than five weeks time by constant application, and now it is as well as any part of his body. It was cut out once by a specialist and had again grown to a large size, was as hard as a bone and of a very dark purple color. The AZIENZA at once allayed the pain and began to soften it, and in less than eight days, by my pressure upon it, suddenly to my surprise it discharged a quantity of pus, impregnated with a hard, cheesy substance. I kept it open and cleansed it as it discharged and every day would dress it with a plaster of AZIENZA CREAM, until it was entirely healed up. I cannot speak too highly of AZIENZA CREAM and its merits. For inquiry regarding this case you may apply Mr. and Mrs. James, Embury Ave., care Hiller, Ocean Grove, N. J. Aug. 27: "Woman's Work For Missions"—Mark xiv, 3-9; Acts ix, 36; Rom. xvi, 1, 2.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

Women have ever been among the foremost helpers in Christianity as in all other religions. The Scripture texts refer to names of noted women in the early church who did much for the furtherance of the gospel.

No less successfully are women working at the present time. The women's boards of missions in the various churches are of recent origin. Their work has but lately been possible. Indeed, our whole scheme of mission work, as now organized and carried on, dates back scarcely more than a century. The foundation laying was long and arduous. In the east it was for many years impossible to penetrate the barriers which surrounded the native life and come into close touch with the people in their deepest needs. As progress was made it was found that no man could meet in any way the women of the upper classes in society. But the real citadel of religion in any land is in the home, and the womanhood of the land holds its key. Women alone can reach women.

In many lands at nearly the same time the opportunities presented themselves for woman's work. Christian womanhood readily responded to the call for her services. In the zenanas of India, the kraals of Africa, the compounds of China, the homes of many lands, the call went up for the skill of Christian women to teach their less advanced sisters. Women had long been among our most successful teachers. So it was natural that the children of heathenism should be placed under the care of our consecrated young women for their education. Bible reading and conversation among the women in their homes followed naturally, almost inevitably.

Then the utter misery of heathen womanhood in sickness and the complete lack of medical skill and knowledge in those lands aroused our women to a knowledge of their ability in this direction. Our girls studied nursing, medicine, surgery, and went out as healers. God has greatly honored His church for this. He has opened the doors of all pagandom, and the skilled physician has won the hearing for the gospel message which teacher and preacher might have sought in vain.

This work of women for missions has many sides, and the story has many incidents of surprising romance and thrilling interest. Large ability in business enterprises and handling with fidelity trusts of great financial responsibility have been among the developments and surprises.

Theories of woman's capacity have been profoundly modified as these enterprises have progressed under her own management. She is doing her full share with her brother in making the world that is to be.

One of the most valuable results of her work for missions has been the development of her ability to do work in fields of activity never before recognized as open to her. She has gained for herself a place of higher worth and wider influence than ever before accorded her. This is greater than all she has done besides, since it is prophecy and promise of what she shall be and do in the days to come.

Surely she is true sister to the Son of Man and mother of all the good the race holds fast.

Superlative Wisdom.

"He that winneth souls is wise." He is wiser than one who wins wealth, because the soul is worth more than all material wealth. He is wiser than one who finds out how to separate the gold from the dross and turn the crude ore into pure metal, because it is a greater work to separate a sinner from his sins and turn him into the way of righteousness. He is wiser than one who enters into partnership with kings and princes in the grandest enterprises of statecraft, for he enters into partnership with God in building up an everlasting kingdom. He is wiser than one who discovers and makes known a sovereign remedy for the worst physical malady, for he makes known to the lost soul the remedy for sin and saves him from everlasting misery.

And in this holy, sweet employ—
However long and hard the task,
The sacrifices it may ask—
The worker shares the heavenly joy
Which breaks in rapture from the throne
When sinners are for glory won.

—Christian Work and Evangelist.

To Deal Kindly With Others.

Be true, be honest, be faithful, be just in what you think with yourself, in your inward communings and dealings with your own spirit, where no one is witness but God, and your words will be true of themselves, and the temptation will hardly come to you to deal unkindly and unfairly with your brother.—Dean Church.

The Things I Miss.

An easy thing, O Power Divine,
To thank Thee for these gifts of Thine—
For summer's sunshine, winter's snow,
For hearts that kindle, thoughts that glow,
But when shall I attain to this—
To thank Thee for the things I miss?

For all young fancy's early gleams,
The dreamed of joys that still are dreams,
Hopes unfulfilled and pleasures known
Through others' fortunes, not my own,
And blessings seen that are not given
And never will be this side heaven.

Had I, too, shared the joys I see
Would there have been a heaven for me?
Could I have felt Thy presence near
Had I possessed what I held dear?
My deepest fortune, highest bliss,
Have grown, perchance, from things I miss.

Sometimes there comes an hour of calm,
Grief turns to blessing, pain to balm;
A Power that works above my will Still leads me onward, upward still,
And then my heart attains to this—
To thank Thee for the things I miss.
—Thomas Wentworth Higginson in Christian Endeavor World.

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

FASHIONS.

An advance showing of mourning millinery is as fascinating as it was of yore lugubrious. The showing in question consists mostly of toques and bonnets, rather than the hats to which the younger element is entitled. Each of these models is fresh from France, and is blessed with the "indescribable" chic which comes in for any amount of description, impossible as that is held to be. Silk, cloth, ribbon and the fascinating novelty strips are the chief materials used in these creations which make up in cleverness and smartness for whatever they may lose in color. And indeed to look upon these exquisite effects is to marvel that such beauty is possible without color.

A Mary Stuart.

It is the quintessence of poetic justice to give the palm in mourning modes to the bonnet introduced by Mary Stuart. No wonder she hit upon the best design—she had practice so early and often. Furthermore, she grew up at the very feet of Fashion at the court of France.

This bonnet, then, is of peau de soie, shirred on cords, and tortured into the most beautiful rosettes. There are two of these rosettes, each with a cabochon centre. The rosettes nestle prettily each side the front dip, and an aigrette is added to the one at the left.

The strings are of the peau de soie. These the Queen of Scots did not have, though, by way of compensation, she wore trains twelve yards in length when she went to a ball.

A Leaf Brim.

One of the very attractive models shows a leaf brim. The leaves look to be made of little silk twists, suggestive of French knots. They are very rich.

As for the crown, it is very simple, being of soft silk, finely shirred.

All these bonnets are fitted with strings a good yard in length and four and five inches in width.

Plaited Ribbon.

One of the very prettiest of these bonnets is composed of novelty strips and plaited ribbon.

The strips are exquisite things, composed of rich embroidery and narrow, flexible silk braid, which is intertwined with exquisite effect. There is richness without ostentation; fine workmanship rather than show. The plaitings of soft ribbon are introduced with charmingly subdued coquetry.

Cloth and Taffeta.

One of the smart examples has been achieved from strips of black broadcloth, which overlap so deeply that only an eighth of an inch of each shows. There are plaited frills of grossgrain silk by way of trimming, and at the left there's a knot of ribbon, the loops being laid in folds. Two of them are wired and stand up, though not directly. Rather do they incline forward.

With a Plume.

There are also some smart bits of mourning headgear for the younger generation.

For a young woman there's a chapeau, large of brim, except at the back, and rather tall of crown. This shape has been beautifully covered with soft, rich faille Francaise, and the left side is turned up so slashingly as to immediately fasten itself to one's memory. Additional dash is given by the graceful coq plume, which drapes the upturned left brim and sweeps down to the back hair.

This hat would not be mourning for a widow, however young she might be.

DON'T TALK ABOUT IT.

If you are not well, don't talk about it.

To do so only exaggerates your consciousness of physical discomfort. Also, it casts a shadow of gloom over other people. They grow hesitant about asking you how you feel; it gives them cold chills to be continually told that you are "not very well," or "not so well," or "about the same."

Probably you've said these things so often that you say them now as a matter of course. It seems incredible to you by now that you should even feel really well, because you've unconsciously made a habit to be ailing.

Do you know that a good deal of this is imagination? If you braced up and told people cheerily that you felt tip-top, nine chances in ten you would feel tip-top pretty soon. You'd forget the ailing habit.

And, after all, what great difference does it make, to any but your nearest and dearest, if you don't feel well? Suppose you are even hampered by downright physical ills? Your work must be done just the same. It can't be? What nonsense! Of course it can.

Consider the men who have conquered desperate ills in order to get their work done—Spencer, Darwin, R. L. Stevenson, John R. Green, Dr. Johnson, Lamb and scores of others. The man who has something to do doesn't have time to complain of not feeling well.

So keep your ailments for the sympathy of the one or two who love you best—and have a care that you don't impose too heavily on these.

Don't let yourself become a slave to such a miserable little absorber of health and happiness as the perpetual habit of "not feeling well."

IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company).

"Well, this thing will be an ad. for you, besides—if the papers can be got to notice it. They're coy with their notices, confound them, since Tausig let them know that big Trust ads. don't appear in the same papers that boom anti-Trust shows!"

"How long are you going to stand it, Mr. Q.?"

"Just as long as I can't help myself; not a minute longer."

"There ought to be a way—some way—"

"Yes, there ought, but there isn't. They've got things down to a fine point, and the fellow they don't fear has got to fear them. . . . I'll put your number early to-night, so that you can get off by nine. Good luck, Nance."

At nine, then, behold Nancy Olden in her white muslin dress, long-sleeved and high-necked, and just to her shoe-tops, with a big white muslin sash around her waist. Oh, she's no baby, is Nance, but she looks like one in this rig with her short hair—or rather, like a schoolgirl; which makes the stunts she does in mimicking the corkers of the profession all the more surprising.

"We're just a little party," said Mrs. Paul Gates, coming into the bedroom where I was taking off my wraps. "And I'm so glad you could come, for my principal guest, Mr. Latimer, is an invalid, who used to love the theaters, but hasn't been to one since his attack many years ago. I count on your giving him, in a way, a condensed history in action of what is going on on the stage."

I told her I would. But I didn't just know what I was saying. Think of Latimer there, Maggie, and think of our last meeting! It made me tremble. Not that I fancied for a moment he'd betray me. The man that helps you twice don't hurt you the third time. No, it wasn't that; it was only that I longed to do well—well before him, so that—

And then I found myself in an alcove off the parlors, separated from them by heavy curtains. It was such a pretty little red bower. Right behind me was the red of the Turkish drapery of a cozy corner, and just as I took my place under the great chandelier, the servants pulled the curtains apart and the lights went out in the parlors.

In that minute I got it, Mag—yes, stage fright. Got it bad. I suppose it was coming to me, but Lordy! I hadn't ever known before what it was. I could see the black of the men's clothes in the long parlors in front of me, and the white of the women's necks and arms. There were soft ends of talk trailing after the first silence, and everything was so strange that I seemed to hear two men's voices which sounded familiar—Latimer's silken voice, and another, a heavy, coarse bass, that was the last to be quieted.

I fancied that when that last voice should stop I could begin, but all at once my mind seemed to turn a somersault, and, instead of looking out upon them, I seemed to be looking in on myself—to see a white-faced little girl in a white dress, standing alone under a blaze of light in a glare of red, gazing fearfully at this queer, new audience.

Fall? Me? Not Nancy, Maggie. I just took me by the shoulders.

"Nancy Olden, you little thief!" I cried to me inside of me. "How dare you! I'd rather you'd steal the silver on this woman's dressing table than cheat her out of what she expects and what's coming to her."

Nancy really didn't dare. So she began.

The first one was bad. I gave 'em Duse's Francesca. You've never heard the wailing music in that woman's voice when she says:

"There is no escape, Smaragdi. You have said it;
The shadow is a glass to me, and God
Lets me be lost."

I gave them Duse just to show them how swell I was myself; which shows what a ninny I was. The thing the world loves is the opposite of what it is. The pat—pat—pat of their gloves came in to me when I got through. They were too polite to hiss. But it wasn't necessary. I was hissing myself. Inside of me there was a long, nasty hiss-ss-ss!

I couldn't bear it. I couldn't bear to be a failure with Latimer listening, though out there in that queer half-light I couldn't see him at all, but could only make out the couch where I knew he must be lying.

I just jumped into something else to retrieve myself. I can do Carter's Du Barry to the queen's taste, Maggie. That rotten voice of hers, like Mother Douty's, but stronger and surer; that rocky old face pretending to look young and beautiful inside that talented red hair of hers; that whining "Denny! Denny!" she squawks out every other minute. Oh, I can do Du Barry all right!

They thought I could, too, those black and white shadows out there on the other side of the velvet curtains. But I cared less for what they thought than for the fact that I had drowned that sputtering hiss-ss-ss inside of me, and that Latimer was among them.

I gave them Warfield, then; I was always good at taking off the sheenies in the alley behind the Cruelty—remember? I gave them that little pinch-nosed Maude Adams, and dry, corking little Mrs. Fiske, and Henry Miller when he smooths down his white breeches lovingly and sings "Sally in Our Alley," and strutting old Mansfield, and—

"Say, isn't it funny, Mag, that I've seen 'em all and know all they can do? They've been my college education, that crowd. Not a bad one, either, when you come to think of what I wanted from it.

They pulled the curtains down at the end and I went back to the bedroom. I had my hat and jacket on when Mrs. Gates and some of the younger ladies came to see me there, but I caught no glimpse of Latimer. You'd think—wouldn't you—that he'd have made an opportunity to say just one nice word to me in that easy, soft voice of his? I tried to believe that perhaps he hadn't really seen me, lying down, as he must have been, or that he hadn't recognized me, but I knew that I couldn't make myself believe that; and the lack of just that word from him spoiled all my satisfaction with myself, and I walked out with Mrs. Gates through the hall and past the dining-room feeling as hurt as though I'd deserved that a man like Latimer should notice me.

The dining-room was all lighted, but empty—the colored, shaded candlesticks glowing down on the cut glass and silver, on delicate china and flowers. The ladies and gentlemen hadn't come out to supper yet; at least, only one was there. He was standing with his back to me, before the sideboard, pouring out a glass of something from a decanter. He turned at the rustle of my starched skirt, and, as I passed the door, he saw me. I saw him, too, and hurried away.

Yes, I knew him. Just you wait.

I got home here earlier than I'd expected, and I'd just got off my hat and jacket and put away that snug little check when there came a ring at the bell.

I thought it was you, Mag—that you'd forgotten your key. I was so sure of it that I pulled the door open wide with a flourish and—

And admitted—Edward!

Yes, Edward, husband of the dowager. The same red-faced, big-necked old fellow, husky-voiced with whisky now, just as he was before. He must have been keeping it up steadily ever since the day out in the country when Tom lifted his watch. It'll take more than one lost watch to cure Edward.

"I—followed you home, Miss Murieson," he said, grabbing me by the hand and pushing the door closed behind him. "Or is it Miss Murieson? Which is your stage name, and which your real one? And have you really learned to remember it? For my part, any old name will smell as sweet, now that I'm close to the rose."

I jerked my hand away from him.

"I didn't ask you to call," I said, haughty as the dowager herself was when first I saw her in her gorgeous parlor, the bishop's card in her hand.

"No, I noticed that," he roared jovially. "You skinned out the front door the moment you saw me. All that was left to me was to skin after."

"Why?"

"Why!" He slapped his leg as though he'd heard the best joke in the world. "To renew our acquaintance, of course. To ask you if you wouldn't like me to buy you a red coat and hat like the one you left behind you that day over in Philadelphia, when you cut your visit so short. To insist upon my privilege of relationship. To call that wink you gave me in the hall that day, you little devil. Now, don't look at me like that. I say, let's be friends; won't you?"

"Not for a red coat trimmed with chinchilla," I cried.

He got between me and the door.

"Prices gone up?" he inquired, pleasantly. "Who's bulling the stock?"

"Never you mind, so long as his name isn't Ramsay."

"But why shouldn't his name be Ramsay?" he cooed.

"Just because it isn't. I'm expecting a friend. Hadn't you better go home to Mrs. Dowager Diamonds?"

"Bully! —Is that what you call her? No, I'll stay and meet your friend."

"Better not."

"Oh, I'm not afraid. Does he know as much about you as I do?"

"More."

"About your weakness for other girls' coats?"

"Yes."

"You do know it all, don't you? And yet you care for me, Maggie Monahan!"

I retreated before him into the dining-room. What in the world to do to get rid of him!

"I think you'd better go home, Mr. Ramsay," I said again, decidedly. "If you don't, I'll have to call the janitor to put you out."

"Call, sweetheart. He'll put you out with me; for I'll tell him a thing or two about you, and we'll go and find a better place than this. Stock can't be quoted so high, after all, if this is the best prospectus your friend can put up. . . . Why don't you call?"

I looked at him. I was thinking.

"Well?" he demanded.

"I've changed my mind."

MINSTRELS HURT IN TRAIN CRASH ON ERIE

THIRTEEN MEMBERS OF THE W. H. WEST COMPANY DISABLED.

Newburg, N. Y. Aug. 24.—In making a flying switch in the Erie yards here Tuesday the private car of William H. West's Jubilee Minstrels was wrecked and thirteen members of the company were hurt, two of them seriously. The injured are:

Alvin, Michael, side hurt.
Ballie, L., bruised and cut.
Ballist, George, internally hurt.
Beach, W., arm cut.
Ballard, Billy, ankle and knee hurt.
Brown, B. H., injured at the base of the brain.
Johnston, E. C., body bruised.
Renard, M. W., groin injured.
Ricaby, S. B., proprietor of the show, hip injured and thought to be injured internally.
Smith, T. A., arm bruised.
Stokes, J. W., arm and side hurt.
Wade, G. L., of Champagne, Ill., hurt internally, side and head injured.
Van, G. S., of Brooklyn, stomach and arm hurt.

The company was on its way from Paterson to Saratoga and, as customary, the switch was made by gravity down a heavy grade, the engine having been cut loose at the brow of the declivity, and run on a siding. The heavy private car of steel got beyond the control of the brakeman, who jumped, and it crashed into loaded coal cars in front of the station.

Some of the minstrels were asleep. Those awake say the car ran at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The coal cars, with brakes set, were driven forward 100 feet.

Wade and Ballist were taken to St. Luke's Hospital for treatment.

BOY HUSBAND'S PLIGHT.

Mother Ousts Him On Hearing of His Marriage.

Jersey City, Aug. 24.—Indignant at learning the news of her boy's secret marriage from his own lips, Mrs. Seaford, of 210 Pollack avenue, this city, Tuesday ordered her son Robert out of her house. It was only Saturday afternoon that Mrs. David Humler, of 406 West Side avenue, this city, discovered that her daughter Daisy, nineteen years old, had become the wife of Robert Seaford.

Mrs. Humler was arranging the room of her daughter during her absence, and in turning the mattress she found a marriage certificate which told the whole story. The young couple had gone to Shohola Glen a week before and there had become man and wife. When young Seaford learned that everything had been discovered by his mother-in-law he succeeded in obtaining the blessing of the bride's parents, and then decided to break the news to his mother and obtain her blessing.

He had not, however, reckoned with the stern character of his mother, and when he informed her of the good luck which had befallen him she apparently failed to appreciate it and told him to pack his things and leave the house. Dismayed at the mother's reception young Seaford went back to the forgiving mother-in-law and is now making his home with the bride's parents.

MT. TABOR'S LAST SERVICE.

Campmeeting Comes to a Close with Hearing of the Reports.

Mt. Tabor, Aug. 24.—The farewell service of the Mt. Tabor Campmeeting Association took place Monday in the auditorium, Dr. A. B. Richardson, of Dover, president of the association, acting as leader. Several hymns were sung. Mrs. Britan, superintendent of the primary class, at the request of Dr. Richardson, gave her report of the children's hour, which was held every afternoon at 4 o'clock during campmeeting.

Reports of the different departments of the work was then given—Rev. C. F. Woodruff, of the young people's meetings; Dr. A. B. Richardson, of the family prayers at Hotel Arlington and of the adults' prayer meeting at 6:30. The 6 a. m. prayer meeting was reported by Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of Dunellen, and the preachers' meeting at 9 a. m. by Rev. Frederick Bloom. All these reports showed a decided increase in attendance over last year, particularly the young people's meetings.

THE HISTORIC HUDSON.

The Hudson River has a renowned reputation in more ways than one. Its business interests are more widely known than any other stream, while for excursions and outings it has no equal. There are sights galore—the Palisades—the U. S. Military Academy at West Point—the far-famed State Prison at Sing Sing, and interesting Newburg. The scenery in every direction is superb, and the steamers which convey the excursionists are commodious and comfortable. On August 31st, 1905, the New Jersey Central is going to run one of its popular low-rate excursions up the Hudson, the rate for the round trip to be $1.00, children 50c, and special train leaving Plainfield at 8:46 a. m., will connect at Jersey City station with famous steamer "St. Johns" for the trip. Don't forget date or train time.

GOLF.

Robert Abbott, of the Plainfield Country Club, finished second in the qualifying round in the open golf tournament, open to members of clubs of the United States Golf Association, and invited golfers, which began at the Misquamicut Golf Club, Watch Hill, R. I., on Tuesday. He returned a score of 165. The qualifying round was thirty-six holes, thirty-two to qualify. E. M. Byers finished first with a score of 153.

Abbott continued his fine work yesterday when in the first round he beat T. Plummer, by 8 up and 7 to play, and in the second round he beat J. S. Taylor, by 3 up and 2 to play. Today he will take part in the finals with an excellent chance of winning.

According to the Newark News, the professional golfers are dissatisfied with the handicapping system as arranged by Leighton Calkins, of this city, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association. The objection was explained in an article last night as follows:

"Handicapping professional golfers is a new one. This novelty has been undertaken by the resourceful secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, Leighton Calkins, but in plain English, the 'pros' are not in love with the idea. Since golf has been played in this country professionals have been placed on an equality. They have been the instructors, regarded and recognized as past masters, ever ready and willing to measure strength with all others of their class. Now they are to be given a rating—some to be placed on a higher scale than others, and officially regarded so by the Metropolitan Golf Association. Just what the ultimate effect will be is impossible to determine with exactness now, but it's evident that the Scots regard it with misgiving. Several were approached on the subject last night and all were of one mind. One prominent professional, who didn't wish his name mentioned said:

"'I no like the idea, sir. We can't all be on scratch and it will serve to cheapen the mon given a long mark. No, sir; if I'm no good enough to play from scratch my place is at home in the shop.'

"Others spoke in the same strain. The premise is that many of the 'pros' are regarded very nearly on an equal basis. In his particular section 'Wollie' is fancied to beat 'Jock,' and vica versa. It's getting more prevalent each season for clubs to hang up a purse for two professionals to play for and it frequently happens that the artists don't have to be champions, either. They are high-class golfers in the eyes of the clubmen who are paying for their exhibition.

"Give these players an official rating and the situation immediately changes. What club would be apt to offer $100 for a match between a pair of 'pros' with a ranking of say 10 to 12 on the M. G. A. handicap list? An exhibition between professional 'dubbs' would not be conducive to a large nor enthusiastic gallery.

"Again, what club of any prominence, taking a certain pride in its 'pro,' would care to employ a man officially stamped as a third or fourth rater? The latter would likewise stand a slim chance of making the same satisfactory terms with his club as in the past. This sytem of handicapping would certainly tend to benefit the favored few, who, by their brilliancy, were fortunate enough to be placed at plus or scratch, but it would be at the expense of the majority.

"As a matter of fact, rating professional golfers is likely to prove a mighty uncertain business, anyway. Take the open tournaments thus far this season as a criterion. At Van Cortlandt Park Isaac Mackie won out, and at Deal Jack Hobens did the trick, while on both occasions Will Anderson, the open champion, who will undoubtedly enjoy the post of honor in the official rating, could do no better than finish in the money. In the West the recent professional tourneys have resulted the same way. Unless the professionals change their mind between now and the middle of September there will be but a slim representation in the eighteen-hole handicap at Fox Hills."

ROD AND GUN.

Clarence Thorn and Clarence Huff spent Tuesday fishing at Willow Lake, near Rahway. While the fish did not bite heavily, Thorn caught one good sized pickerel weighing three and a quarter pounds.

Hazelwood Craig and Walter Craig, of West Front street, were fishing at Amboy yesterday. Thirteen weakfish ranging in size from a pound and a half to two pounds were caught, as well as a green turtle weighing ten pounds.

DUFFIELD CLAIMS NO TANGLE IN ELECTION LAW

CHARACTERIZES TALK ABOUT IT AS "ALL NONSENSE."

The notion of various leaders in the State that there is a tangle in the law passed by the last Legislature abolishing spring elections in townships and boroughs and combining them with the general election in November is called "all nonsense" by Assistant Attorney General Edward D. Duffield.

The bill was introduced by Mr. Gibbs, of Camden, and affects all officers except members of school boards. Under its provisions the terms of all officers except justices of the peace hereafter elected in any township or borough, shall commence at noon January 1 succeeding their election and continue for the respective terms already fixed by law. This law makes it necessary to nominate and elect on November 7 all the officers in the townships and boroughs that would have been elected last year under the old law.

The puzzled ones asserted that the new law is absolutely silent as to the manner of nominating candidates outside of the cities, leaving it, as they put it, an open question whether the primary election law, as applied to cities, should govern and the candidates be chosen September 12 at the primaries, or whether the candidates for township and borough offices should be named under the old law.

The supposed tangle, it was said, was giving the municipal and county committees much trouble and the attorney general had been asked for an opinion setting the matter straight.

Assistant Attorney General Duffield, in the absence or Attorney General McCarter, who is away on a vacation, said that no application had been made to his office for any such opinion. He characterized the alleged tangle as "all nonsense," insisting that section 1 of the primary law provided for just such emergencies.

FIRST WARD CLUB MEETING

meantime. John Rowland said that being convinced that Mr. Bullock is not a ring man, he favored him. He knew he was elected by the machine, but his record had shown his independence.

Mr. Murphy confirmed Mr. Rowland's statement, adding that no pledges were required of Mr. Bullock and the machine found itself unable to rule him, consequently it had no use for him. He declared that the position of a councilman is a thankless one, but when it is possible to get such men as Mr. Bullock and Mr. Caldwell to accept office, they should be loyally supported. In explaining how the club hoped to be successful at the coming election, he said that it expected that the Second and Third Wards would send anti-machine delegates to the city convention, but in the election of the members at large he considered the key to the situation, as therein lay the control of the Common Council.

George Taylor stated that he had heard that the machine does not intend to nominate Councilman Charles C. Randolph in the Fourth Ward, and that he would probably run on an independent ticket. It was also rumored that Councilman W. E. Gloak would not be run again by the machine, but that a stronger man would be chosen as a candidate.

At this time Mr. Caldwell returned with Mr. Bullock, and Chairman Griffen informed both men of the action taken relative to their candidacy. Mr. Caldwell gave hearty expression of thanks for the honor bestowed and said that he would give the matter earnest and careful consideration and inform the club very soon as to his decision.

It was the desire of the club that Mr. Bullock should be heard, and after explaining that he had traveled 447 miles in the last forty-eight hours in an effort to attend the meeting, expressed his pleasure at being able to address the members. He said that he had served as a councilman as honestly as he knew how, and he admitted the statement of his opponents that he is no politician, at least in the sense they mean. He said that he did not believe in those kinds of politics. As for Mr. Caldwell, he had known him ten years and felt sure that he would never wear any man's collar.

Continuing, Mr. Bullock said that now is the time for good, honest endeavor. Many things in the past had been done in the dark, of which he could not speak. The opposing side, the machine, he said, play politics twelve months in the year, they are always at it, and he admitted that the new organization is not as well up in the game as the "Little Tammany," as it has been called by many. Mr. Bullock cited incidents as to how the machine works things.

Referring to several calls recently made, he said that he noticed a certain party keeping track of his movements, watching him enter a house and leave it. He said that the new organization is not quite up to these kind of tricks, but desires straight, clean politics, to be fought on principles against methods which are considered wrong. He defined the duties of a leader and a boss, saying that the former suggests, while the latter dictates. He declared that he was not fighting any individual, but purely contending for independence of thought and action. If the machine is smashed, he said that there would be nobody to blame but its members. He urged the members of the club to get to work quickly and hustle, and if success is not attained this year it will surely come next year. In conclusion, he thanked the members for endorsing his candidacy, adding that if he had made mistakes, they were errors of judgment and not intention. However, if the members could find a stronger man for the position than himself, he was perfectly willing to step aside in favor of another.

This led Mr. Murphy to ask Mr. Bullock whether he would decline a nomination, whereupon the member said that if the delegates were a unit for him he would accept, otherwise he would prefer that someone else be named.

Mr. Bullock announced that the buying of votes would not be permitted at the coming election, that if the independents are successful it will be in a clean and honest manner.

This led I. N. Hill to remark that at one primary held in the First Ward more votes were cast than there were voters in the ward, which statement caused much laughter.

Before the meeting adjourned, Mr. Murphy said that it is the hope of the club to hold a public meeting before the primaries are held, and to have Assemblyman Everett Colby present as one of the speakers.

SHIP SAILS IN AIRY SEA

All New York Watches Its Flight Over the Housetops.

TRAFFIC BLOCKED

Aeronaut A. Roy Knabenshue Has at Last Secured a Dirigible Balloon.

A large part of the business end of New York was held helpless yesterday in a gaping crowd intent on seeing the flight of A. Roy Knabenshue in his airship. Long before the time set for the ascension thousands had gathered near the vacant lot at Sixty-second street and Central Park West, where the modern Pegasus is stabled. They blocked traffic at the point, and made the lives of the policemen who were on duty at the spot miserable.

But, great as the trouble was here, it was when the huge bird had finally begun its flight over the city that the excitement really began. Men and boys ran after it, pushing, ramming and hauling through the crowd.

All were intent on getting some of the $100 checks which it had been said would be dropped from the ship. Many fought in little side battles when one of these pieces of paper floated down. Chagrin was their reward when they found they were pieces of newspaper. When the ship rose over the city people rushed to their windows, trolley cars were emptied, and the streets became jammed with people looking up. Broadway presented a picture with men, women and children hanging from every window, while the roofs of the buildings were crowded. From Canal street to Harrison street a long line of cars was stopped, while conductors, motormen and passengers forgot their business and stared into the sky.

The ship went down First avenue, and at Twenty-fifth street stopped, remaining stationary for some time. Then Mr. Knabenshue, apparently to show his control, manoeuvred it in various directions, the ship answering the rudder at all times.

The balloon on its return trip went directly uptown over First avenue, as far as Twenty-ninth street. A northwest course was then taken to Lexington avenue and Forty-second street. Here a short stop was made, and then a northeasterly course was taken to First avenue again. At about Forty-eighth street or Forty-ninth street it went toward Central Park.

The balloon landed at the south side of the Sixty-fifth street transverse road, on the edge of the ball grounds. This spot was selected by the navigator, as there was a little prominence on which he could land easily. The balloon landed almost as lightly as a feather. There was not a scratch where it struck.

Mr. Knabenshue's trip back through the park to his lot was through a cheering crowd. Ten mounted men and forty reserves marched with him to keep the crowds away from him.

CADETS OUT OF SHOOT

Belief That Sea Girt Tourney Might Interfere With Their Studies.

GUARDS ARRIVING

Event Formally Opened Today and Will Continue Over Tomorrow at Least.

Sea Girt, Aug. 24.—Weather conditions yesterday morning were decidedly unfavorable when the preliminary work on the 800 and 1,000-yard ranges was begun by the teams assembled for the National Rifle tournament. A heavy mist obscured the big targets on the ocean front and no particularly good scores were made in the morning. They averaged less than forty out of a possible fifty.

In the afternoon a light breeze was blowing at the rate of five miles an hour, the light was excellent and the targets were outlined in fine shape with the sky for a background. The riflemen made fours with ease and bulls' eyes with greater frequency than in the morning.

General William P. Hall, the executive officer of the tournament, spent considerable time on the firing line, and manifested great interest in the long distance shooting. He was well pleased with the work. He had the assistance of a large corps of regular army and National Guard officers.

The Pennsylvania team at different times shot alongside the crack teams of the regulars and made a fine showing. There is considerable disappointment because the Annapolis cadets will not compete. For years the officers of the National Rifle Association have endeavored to get the Army and Navy Academies here, and the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice took the matter up a year ago, and it was expected both teams would meet this year.

The West Point team was first to arrive, and the boys were anxious to meet their football rivals on the rifle range. It is understood that the Bureau of Navigation objected to the naval cadets coming here to shoot because it would interfere with their studies. The West Point boys will try their skill, however, in competition with the college boys from Princeton and Cornell universities. The West Point team will also shoot in the national team match.

There are more than 500 entries for the national individual match, which commenced today. This will be shot at 200, 300, 500 and 600 yards, ten shots at each range; rapid fire at 200 and 500 yards, ten shots at each, and two skirmish runs. The match is open to the same individuals as may shoot in the national team match. There are twelve prizes, the first being a gold medal and $60 in cash, and the twelfth a bronze medal and $5 in cash. The match was won in 1904, at Fort Riley, by Sergeant George Sayre, of the Fifteenth Infantry, with a score of 462.

At a meeting of the team captains last evening some of the matters likely to provoke discussion during the meeting were talked over. The order that there be no coaching and no communication on the firing line will be adhered to, despite the dissatisfaction it has raised. General Hall notified the team captains that the entries of the teams for the national match must be handed in by this evening at the latest.

The meet was formally opened at 9 o'clock this morning. The event scheduled for today and tomorrow is the national individual match. The indications are that the contest will not terminate Friday, however, as there are more than 500 entries.

FOUNDER BRADLEY BLUSHED.

Bath-Houses Collapsed, and Asbury Bathers Rushed Out Costumeless.

While the Asbury Park crowds were thronging the beach and the bathing was at its height yesterday two entire sections of the bath-houses at Seventh avenue took a drop of about a foot and a half to the ground. The accident was caused by the beams under the sections giving away.

At the time the houses were filled with bathers either dressing or preparing for a dip, and frantic men and women in all degrees of dress and undress rushed out of them, calling for help. Founder Bradley blushed when told of what had happened.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH ISSUES ANNUAL REPORT

SOME INTERESTING DETAILS COMPILED BY THE OFFICIALS.

According to the annual report of the State Board of Health, just issued from the printer, the death rate of the State per 1,000 of population for the year 1903 was 15.87, or .04 less than the year previous. The document contains 494 pages and gives a complete review of the health conditions of the State for the year mentioned.

A chart is given showing the fluctuations of the death rate for the past twenty-five years. There has been a general decrease since 1892, when the rate was 21.62. Speaking of this decrease in mortality, the report says:

"Every disease in any way preventable by hygienic measures has shown decrease in frequency and fatality in New Jersey, but there are still many unnecessary deaths, especially from tuberculosis, diphtheria and diarrhoeal diseases of children, notwithstanding that it is in these groups that the greatest improvement in mortality has already been secured. Education has been the potential factor in reaching the results already attained, the further progress in lowering the death rate depending upon the extent to which the principals of hygiene can be disseminated.

"Much reliance is placed by this board upon the superior service which we believe will be rendered by the higher class of local sanitary officers created by the provisions of chapter 215 of the laws of 1903, for under the intelligent guidance of well informed officials whole communities can be led to see the dangers which lurk in polluted wells, contaminated milk, open privies, dust, mosquitoes and flies and action for the abatement of nuisances of this character follows, sooner or later, if the parties interested are fully convinced of the injurious nature of these evils. We may, therefore, look forward with confidence to a further reduction in the mortality due to diseases already recognized as preventable, and doubtless others will from time to time be added to the list."

Charts are also given, showing the condition of certain diseases in the State for twenty-five years. One of these presents the fact that there has been a remarkable increase in the number of deaths from cancer. The rate per 10,000 of population in 1879 was 3.79, and in 1903 it had grown to 5.61.

The death rate for consumption per 10,000 population shows a general decrease for the twenty-five years, though the rate for 1903, 16.76, was slightly above that for 1902, when it was 15.32. Malarial disorders present a decreased death rate since 1891, when the rate was 3.71. In 1903 it had fallen to .20.

There has been a decrease in the number of deaths among children under five years of age since 1899. The rate per 10,000 then was 56.30. In 1902 it had fallen to 49.81, and in 1903 it was 44.38.

The vital statistics for the year covered by the report were: Births, 37,242, rate per 1,000 of population, 18.47; marriages, 19,512; deaths, 31,820; rate per 1,000 of population, 15.87. The statistics for Mercer county were: Births, 1,151, a decrease of 5 from 1902; marriages, 890, an increase of 141; deaths, 1,662, an increase of 96.

Trenton shows the following vital statistics: Births, 923, a decrease from 1902 of 7; marriages, 780, an increase of 127; deaths, 1,405. The death rate for the city was 16.30.

The report shows also what a length of time it takes to get some of the State documents into the hands of the people. The document covers the year ending December 31, 1903, was compiled during 1904, presented to the Legislature of 1905, and is just being distributed.

1,200 PEOPLE AT OPENING OF NEW THEATRE

Plainfield's Modern Playhouse Formally Begins Its Career,

PLAY SCORES A HIT

Introduced by Mayor N. B. Smalley, City Judge William N. Runyon Makes the Dedicatory Address in a Typical Vein.

The career of Plainfield's new theatre was formally commenced last night, when over 1,200 people witnessed an excellent production of George Ade's comedy of political satire, "The County Chairman," as presented by Henry W. Savage. It was veritably a gala occasion and was attended by residents of every section of the city with a generous sprinkling from neighboring towns. Somerville was ably represented by the entire Somerset County Republican Committee numbering sixty, which came at the invitation of Colonel Joseph Frelinghuysen. The opening was a decided success; the performance was equal to the original production at Wallack's, and though there were a few slight hitches and delays because of the newness of everything, the result was a pleasure to both patrons and management.

It was just 8:30 when the orchestra struck up the introductory overture, and for fully a minute the efforts of the musicians were lost amid the burst of handclapping that extended all over the house. It was the first opportunity the gathering had been offered to show its enthusiasm and the outburst was like music to the ears of those who recalled the days of the city's former playhouse. Further effect was added by a score or more of shrill whistles that emanated from as many puckered pairs of lips up in the gallery, where the real dramatic critics are wont to gather.

With the selection finished, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, whose energy resulted in Manager Counihan making the theatre venture, stepped before the curtain. In a few words he welcomed the audience and then introduced City Judge William N. Runyon, who gave the dedicatory speech. The entrance and exit of the Mayor were marked by applause, and the genial judge was compelled to wait some time until the enthusiasm subsided. He began his remarks by thanking the audience for the reception, and observed, however, that it rather unfitted him for the role of "cheerful corpse," for which he had been cast by some of his Elizabeth "friends." Continuing, he said:

"From the standpoint of amusement, the last few years in Plainfield have been long, and lank, and lean. In the theatrical world, the stigma has rightly been placed upon Plainfield, that it was the only city of its size in the country not having an up-to-date playhouse. Its condition reminds me most of the story of the sleeping princess, who slumbered for years, awaiting the coming of Prince Charming for her awakening. Plainfield has truly been the sleeping princess, and many princes have there been who have endeavored to rouse her from her lethargy, chief among whom has been our own 'Bonnie Prince Charlie'—surnamed Hand, who has thrice imprinted dewy osculations on her cherry red lips, the only success attending his efforts, however, being that Plainfield emitted a series of feeble sighs and sank back into her torpor. We have always called ourselves 'The Queen City of the East,' and are but an hour's ride from the greatest city on earth, and yet, wonderful to relate, our Prince Charming has come to us from the sleep-compelling 'cradle of liberty,' the city of the holy Sts. John—John Wanamaker and John Weaver—Philadelphia.

"I might speak of the part rendered by the Elks, who originally purchased the building; by the Order of Eagles, who kindly surrendered valuable lease rights, and a long chapter on the doings of that quintessence of energy, that ball of fire, that man who once he puts his hand to the plow doesn't know how to turn back, Mayor Smalley; but will content myself with saying a word concerning the manager, William J. Counihan. He came to us a stranger, but those of us who have come to know him, have learned to like him and believe in him thoroughly. As the best evidence of his abiding faith in us, I wish to state that practically every dollar that Mr. Counihan has in the world has been placed in this theatre. As a mark of appreciation, the Plainfield public should support him

TWO DINNER PARTIES AFTER THE THEATRE

COLONEL FRELINHUYSEN AND GEORGE J. TOBIN THE HOSTS.

Following the performance at the Plainfield theatre, last night, there were two dinner parties at the Hotel Iroquois. One was given by Colonel Joseph Frelinghuysen to the members of the Somerset county committee, and the other by George J. Tobin to Manager Counihan, Assistant Manager Gelatt and other attaches of the playhouse.

Colonel Frelinghuysen's was an informal affair and of a necessity had to be hurried as the committee's special car was attached to the 12:59 train for Somerville. Mayor Smalley was one of the local guests and it has been whispered about that lots of things that have happened off and on recently were forgotten entirely and that he and the colonel thoroughly understood eacn other before the affair terminated.

Mr. Tobin's dinner was the result of a wager made by him with Manager Counihan that the theatre would not be opened at the date set. Whoever lost was to be the host and it fell to Mr. Tobin's lot to do the honors. He invited many Plainfield friends and the affair proved one of the pleasantest of the evening's features.

BRIGGS DEFEATED IN SCHOLASTIC MATCH

PRINCETON MAN BEATS HIM AFTER THREE FULL SETS.

In one of the hardest fought matches yet played on the Casino courts at Newport, Chester H. Briggs, of this city, was defeated in the first round of the championship scholastic tournament on Wednesday. His conqueror was S. Gordon, of Princeton, and the two were so evenly matched that the play had to go the three full sets.

As the score stood when the match was completed, Briggs was defeated 1—6, 6—4, 3—6. Hard drives and accurate cross-court drives characterized the playing on both sides. Gordon won the first set 6—1, but only after most of the games were played through deuce.

Briggs braced decidedly in the next set, and in the closest play of the match won the second set, 6—4. In the third set, too, the lead would go from one side to the other, the Princetonian winning by the score of 6—3.

By his showing at Newport on Tuesday against Clothier, and Wednesday against Gordon, Briggs has added laurels to his tennis career. He met the hardest men in both tournaments as his first match, but his play was most creditable. Briggs has, ever since he started the game, played on sand courts, and at Newport he was grossly handicaped on the grass courts. However, considering his age, the defeats should lend him experience and encouragement for the future. He will return home either tomorrow or Sunday to take part in the East Jersey tournament, in doubles, at Elizabeth, which starts on Monday. Either M. B. Long or T. O. Gavett will be his partner.

Bold Theft of a Wheel.

John Ross, of Prospect place, the borough, a collector for the Prudential Insurance Company, had his wheel stolen Friday in a bold manner. He left the wheel in front of Woodhull & Martin's store while he went inside. He was gone about two minutes and when he returned it had disappeared. He has been unable to get any trace of the bicycle.

Wetumpkah Tribe Moves.

Wetumpkah Tribe, No. 229, I. O. R. M., has given up its meeting room in the Coward building on Park avenue, and leased Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall on West Front street. The reason for the change is that the tribe wants to meet every Tuesday night, and it is impossible to secure the Park avenue hall for that night. The change will be made September 1.

Local Firm Beats Philadelphia.

Shirley & Johnson, the West Front street carpet dealers, secured the contract in competition with Lit Brothers, of Philadelphia, to furnish the carpet for the New Plainfield theatre. It is a red velvet and was much admired last night. The firm will also equip the stage with carpets and other furnishings.

Old Glory on Police Building.

A new flag pole, with a gilt ball top, now adorns the top of borough police headquarters. A flag will now hang from it on clear days.

Hip hooray, our sleep is o'er!
Plainfield's wide awake once more.

Blessings on you little man.
Long live Billy Counihan.

SWATTED THE CONSTABLE

North Plainfield Township Woman Wouldn't Let Him Change Road Grade.

ARRESTS FOLLOW

Both Mrs. de Haas and Her Husband Haled to Justice Smalley's Court and Held for Grand Jury.

The troubles existing between North Plainfield Township and Dirk de Haas, who lives on the Washington Valley road near Pedeflous' Hotel, for a year or two, reached a climax yesterday, when Mrs. Haas made a bold attack on Constable Clemmens, who had been sent to the place to clean out a ditch in the roadway, opposite her home. She used a broom handle with telling effect, beating Clemmens until he was forced to beat a hasty retreat. Later he returned, accompanied by friends, and arrested both Mr. and Mrs. Haas. They were arraigned before Justice Smalley, in the borough, in the afternoon and held for the September term of the Somerset County Grand Jury. The township was represented by W. R. Coddington, of the firm of Coddington & Swackhamer, who is counsel for the township, while Charles A. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Codington, represents the defendants. Both counsels were in court.

The Township Committee has decided that it is necessary to keep the ditch alongside the valley road open so that water in rainy seasons will be carried off without flooding the adjoining property and according to the Committee, every time the ditch is cleaned, Mr. Haas fills it up again, claiming that it is not necessary to keep it clear. He says that he has expended a considerable sum of money to improve the frontage of his property and that the efforts to keep the ditch open is a case of spite work on the part of neighbors.

The Committee has ordered the ditch cleaned several times and it has been filled up just as often. Yesterday morning Mr. Clemmens was sent to the place to remove the obstructions and before he had fairly started the work, Mrs. Haas appeared with a broom and swept him off that portion of the township. The last seen of him he was rushing at a breakneck speed down the valley road toward home.

After he had got his second wind and had time for reflection, he decided to arrest Mr. and Mrs. Haas and have the long-disputed matter settled. The couple accompanied the constable to Justice Smalley's court, where the proceedings were very brief. On the motion of Mr. Coddington, the defendants were held for the Grand Jury.

Mr. Coddington and Mr. Reed met afterward and decided to visit the scene of the trouble to make an inspection so that they both would be able to present the case more intelligently. They will be accompanied by members of the Township Committee and others competent to judge whether the Committee has wrongfully encroached upon the Haas property or not.

TIMBO SOCIAL CLUB HAS OUTING SUNDAY

MEMBERS AND FRIENDS WILL ENJOY THEMSELVES AT LAKE HOPATCONG.

The Timbo Social Club will conduct its second annual outing Sunday, when the entire membership of the organization and at least 100 friends will go to Lake Hoptacong for a day's recreation. The trip will be made in three special cars attached to the excursion train which leaves the North Avenue station at 9:20. Arrived at the lake, the Plainfielders will begin a series of athletic games and various sports until 2 o'clock, when dinner is to be served at the American House. The return trip will commence at 5 o'clock.

The committee which has had charge of the arrangements comprises Henry J. Wierenga, chairman; Theodore J. Larew, James J. Kane, Frank Schuck and H. P. Greenwood. President Thomas Timbo will exercise personal supervision during the entire day.

HE WAS CAUGHT IN A PRIZE FIGHT RAID

AND MYSTERY SURROUNDS IDENTITY OF TALL YOUNG PLAINFIELDER.

A prize fight was raided by the police at Linden Tuesday night. Among the spectators rounded up was a tall young man, who was recognized as a Plainfielder.

He gave his name at the station house as John West. The name looked suspicious, and the police accused him of adopting it for the occasion. He denied it at first, but when the officers refused to allow him to go out on bail unless his right name was forthcoming he weakened. He told the name and was released. A Plainfield man went on the bond.

The Elizabeth reporters who "covered" the fight and the raid were interested in the young man's identity, because his was six feet, two inches tall and of striking appearance. They were unable to get his real name from the police, however, and his identity is a mystery except to the officials.

It is said that "John West" is an employe at the Pond Tool Works shop.

Chief Doane's Watchfulness.

Chief T. O. Doane exercised personal supervision of the fire department's end in the theatre opening last night. He was present with Assistant Chief Jennings, Captain Feiring and Firemen R. Victor Lorton, William Chamberlain, Sylvanus Hoffman and G. H. Freeman. Men were stationed near the exits, and were prepared for any sort of trouble.

Cleaning Gutters.

The street force is cleaning out the gutters of the West End streets. Some of the gutters, particularly where there are no curbstones, were left in bad shape by the recent heavy rains, which carried a lot of silt and other deposit down with them.

MR. CLARK'S DECLINATION

States Positively That He Will Not Accept Mayoralty Nomination.

GIVES HIS REASONS

Announcement Received With Regret by Borough Voters Who Wanted Him As Their Candidate.

After giving the matter his full and earnest consideration for the past week, former Councilman Robert M. Clark, Jr., has announced that he will not become a candidate to succeed Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough. He has all along been urged to head the Republican ticket, and also to lead an independent organization, both believing that he would be the most acceptable of any resident whose name has been coupled with the office. Great pressure was brought to bear upon him, and for this reason he did not decide at once, but has been viewing the matter from all sides.

In explaining his determination not to enter the race, although it is a foregone conclusion that he would be elected, Mr. Clark mentioned the fact that his business interests at Newark are such that they demand almost every moment of his time. In addition, his general health opposes his taking up the duties of an office that requires many hours of labor that must be accomplished outside of his personal affairs, and that would naturally prove a great drain.

Mr. Clark's positive declination has been received with regret by the borough leaders, as they had held to the belief that he would eventually see his way clear to accept the mayoralty nomination. It is also a great disappointment to a great majority of the voters, as his record in the Council is such that it shows him to be a man of good, sound judgment and rare executive ability. He is fully capable of discharging the duties evolving upon North Plainfield's chief executive, and from the interest he has always manifested in municipal affairs could be counted upon to treat the borough's numerous problems in a fair and unprejudiced way.

Saw Long Garden Snake.

Valentine Kirby, of Park avenue, brought back a snake story from a cigar-selling trip over the mountain yesterday. On the Coontown road, near Warrenville, he says, he saw a remarkably long garden snake stretched across the road. It was between eight and ten feet in length, although very slender. Mr. Kirby doesn't mind snakes, and stirred the wriggler into activity with his whiplash, sending it into safety in the underbrush on the roadside.

Woman Falls from Window.

An Irish woman living in the Italian settlement in Watchung avenue fell out of a window while walking in her sleep yesterday afternoon. The ambulance was summoned, but she refused to be taken to the hospital. She was then removed to the home of a friend in Exchange Alley, where a physician was summoned. She received several broken bones.

READY FOR THE SIXTH

Plainfield and Westfield Line Up For the Struggle Again Tomorrow.

HOT CONTEST SURE

"Willie" Deegan and "Red" Waller to Oppose Each Other on the Firing Line.

On Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon the sixth of the series of ten games for the county championship will be played between Plainfield and Westfield, and judging by past performances it will be a contest well worth going miles to see. Plainfield has not found Westfield to be easy, for the scores in the preceding five games have been very close with the exception of the one in which Westfield was victorious.

Plainfield took the first contest by a score of 4 to 0, the second was won by a score of 5 to 4, eleven innings, and the third was taken by a score of 3 to 1. Westfield won the fourth contest by the most decisive score of 7 to 2, and last Saturday Plainfield won by a score of 2 to 1, ten innings. This gives one a fair idea of the relative strength of the teams, and it shows that Plainfield has not very much on Westfield, yet has been able to go the Denmanites one better.

"Willie" Deegan, who has been selected by Manager Daab to do the twirling in the remaining games, has pitched twice against Westfield, and been successful each time. On this basis he can be depended upon to bring the championship here. He will officiate tomorrow, with Jack O'Neill at the receiving end. The rest of the team will probably remain the same as last Saturday, unless Brogan is compelled to play elsewhere. Dalton may be able to cover second, but it is doubtful, as his foot seems hardly strong enough. Manager Daab will have a good man in the position, and he feels confident of another victory, as does Captain Driscoll. "Dave" nas been enjoying a week's vacation in Connecticut and he says that he was never in better condition.

Quite naturally, Manager Denman and his team feel rather disheartened over the failure to win more games, but Mr. Denman and Captain Mallen have held a conference and decided that the team must win tomorrow. There is sure to be one change in the lineup, provided Patience goes to Central Islip. In that event another good man will cover second base. According to Mr. Denman, Harry McCormick will be in his position in right field. He expects him to return from York, Pa., for the contest.

Of course "Red" Waller will be on the slab and more determined than ever, and he will be ably backed up by Cotter. Joe Wahl, who helped to cause the trouble last Saturday, will again be on first, but he will probably be a little more careful this week, and Captain Mallen is quite likely to be on his good behavior here. Taking it all in all, the contest should be a top-notcher, and the fan who misses it will always have cause to regret it.

This will be the lineup:

Plainfield—Kiernan, ss; Cosgrave, cf; Brogan, 2b; Connolly, rf; Cregan, lf; Leonard, 3b; Driscoll, 1b; O'Neill, c; Deegan, p; Turner, extra.

Westfield—Berfwhistle, lf; Flynn, ss; McCormick, rf; Wahl, 1b; Mallen, cf; Patience, 2b; Barry, 3b; Cotter, c; Waller, p.

TRENTON COUNCIL ACTS.

Directs City to Defend Van Nuis' Action—Money in Chancery.

The Trenton Council adopted a resolution directing the city to defend the suit of Franklin Van Nuis, of New Market, for the Long reward, at a meeting held last night. The City Council will now proceed to establish the municipality's right to file a bill of interpleader, and pay the money into the Court of Chancery, which will decide to whom the reward belongs.

By paying the money into Chancery the cost of the suit is thrown on the claimants. The cost will come out of the reward, and the successful claimant will merely get the balance of the money. Similar action is to be taken by Mercer county, in regard to the freeholders $250.

HAM KEAN, SPEAKS UP

In a Burst of Confidence Rids Himself of Some Senatorial Reflections,

HYPNOTIZES A SCRIBE

Brother John's Barrel Guardian Takes Himself Seriously and —But Here It Is:

Hamilton Fish Kean, brother of Senator John Kean, a veteran warrior of many hard-fought county campaigns, and noted as the practiced watchdog of the bunghole of Brother's Barrel, has been added to the list of senatorial possibilities by the busy guessers of Elizabeth. Some of the Elizabeth politicians are so anxious to see Judge Runyon lose the prize that they can discern something good and stable in any sort of a suggestion that involves the sidetracking of Plainfield's favorite son.

One of the bright young men of the Elizabeth Times heard the rumble of the Kean boom yesterday and was impressed enough by the creation to ask Mr. Kean about it. Mr. Kean must have treated the young man seriously, because he writes about the interview with much earnestness and an air of disclosing information of great importance.

When the young man asked Mr. Kean about the boom, the latter "would not deny that he is ready to accept a nomination if it is tendered to him." Encouraged by this suggestive coyness, the interviewer "asked point-blank if he would accept the nomination."

To this daring question Mr. Kean made this startlingly original and illuminating answer:

"Wait until is has been offered to me and see what I'll do."

This burst of confidence encouraged the Times man to ush for more enlightenment. He got it.

"Tell us now," he urged, with the irresistible pertinacity that characterizes Elizabeth newspaper men; whereupon, he writes, Mr. Kean said:

"The office of State Senator is a great responsibility. It is an honor to represent Union county at Trenton, and it is a position which cannot be treated lightly. Whether I would accept the nomination, of course understanding, should it be offered to me, is a question which cannot be treated lightly. Whether I would accept the nomination, of course, understanding that it had been first offered to me, is a question which I cannot answer at this time either affirmatively or negatively."

Having given this complete and comprehensive statement to the light of day, the Times man, his fingers affected, perhaps, by the spirit of the loquacious Mr. Kean, delivers himself of some observations on the situation:

"Mr. Kean will not push himself to the front in this matter, but stands as a peace offering in case the situation up-county grows too warm. When asked regarding the alleged promise that Plainfield was to have the senatorial nomination this year, Mr. Kean would say nothing whatsoever. Should the convention not decide upon Runyon, and Ackerman be not available, then, according to Senator John Kean, the nomination should go to some of the townships. It is generally recognized both up-county and here at the county seat that if Hamilton Kean wants the nomination very badly he can get it, not only through the delegates of this city but those from Plainfield as well."

A Plainfield politician was shown the Times man's interview this morning.

"Son," he said, "hot weather tales form one of the pleasantest diversions of the overworked politician."

Reception to New Director.

Plans are being made by the Y. M. C. A. officials for a reception to Physical Director Boardman, who will succeed Mr. Henckel on September 1, late next month. Boys' Secretary Robbie is arranging the preliminaries.

'PLAINS RURAL DELIVERY TO COMMENCE SEPT. 1

EDWARD DEBBIE, OF STONY HILL, APPOINTED THE CARRIER.

Scotch Plains' rural free delivery number one is now an assured thing, Edward Debbie, of Stony Hill, having received notice that he is the fortunate one to receive the appointment as carrier from the many who tried the examination held two months ago. Mr. Debbie has been notified to begin the free delivery September 1. His territory which covers a radius of fourteen miles, will include Glenside, Washington Valley, Stony Hill, Berkeley Heights and as far west as the point of the rural delivery from the Plainfield office ends, which is Gillett. The work will be done under the supervision of of 'Plains office, under Postmistress Mrs. Augusta Dunn. One delivery will be made a day, leaving the 'Plains each morning at 9 o'clock, and to cover the route in schedule time the returns to the office will be made at 1:30.

Mr. Debbie is to furnish the regulation mail wagon and horse, for a salary of $550 per year. Many of the residents have already erected the necessary mail boxes and everything is ready to begin the service at the specified time. The opening up of this section to free delivery will give the residents better postal facilities than they have ever enjoyed, as the country is so widely scattered that the nearest postoffices have been the 'Plains or Plainfield. The residents welcome the change and the postal authorities at Washington believe that the route will soon be self-supporting.

POW-WOW POSTPONED.

Democrats of North Plainfield Put Off Their Little Confab.

The meeting called by the North Plainfield Democrats for last night, for a discussion of possible candidates for borough offices at the coming election, was not held. It was put off after the receipt of a notice from Chairman Jacob Shurts, of the county committee, that the body would meet tomorrow to talk over the new primary law, which came to the leaders yesterday. It was deemed best to put off the pow-wow until after the committee had had a chance to see where the organization stood in the light of the new provisions of the statute.

Only a handful of the faithful turned out, word of the postponement having been passed among the men interested as soon as the step was decided on. The date of the pow-wow has not been fixed.

The People Who Told You So.

By H. H. Wilson.

Of all unpleasant people 'neath the skies,
The pessimistic prophets I despise;
The ones who sit and prophesy for woe,
Then, if it comes, exclaim "I told you so!"

They never see the sunny side of things,
Find in the sweetest rose the thorn that stings;
Delight in all the adverse winds that blow,
Because they recollect they "told you so."

If ever they should miss the pearly gate
And be condemned to meet their proper fate,
They'd surely find a pleasure there below
A saying to themselves "We told you so."

PEACE OUTLOOK GLOOMY

Both Sides Now Despondent Over the Situation as it Now Exists.

ALMOST NO HOPE

Conference Will End Tomorrow Unless Japan Makes New Proposals.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 25.—The outlook for peace today is gloomier than it has ever been since the beginning of the conference. Pessimism is not confined to the Russians; this time the Japanese are equally despondent.

Minister Takahira said yesterday that he belived there was no hope for peace at present. This was after Count Lamsdorff's statement, made in St. Petersburg, had been received at the Wentworth Hotel. It was shown by a correspondent to one of the Japanese officials last evening, and he said:

"This is not conciliatory on the part of Russia and does not show a friendly feeling toward Japan. We came here from Tokio to make peace on fair terms and prevent further bloodshed. M. Witte apparently came from Russia with absolute instructions to refuse our principal demands, which had been made known in the papers some weeks previously. If Russia did not intend to agree to pay any money, why did the Czar send his envoys here to waste all this time?

"We can only think that Russia does not want peace and has commissioned Count Lamsdorff to make her wishes known to the world at large. If his statement is correct, Saturday will see the end of the conference. We are prepared to go any day. Our homeward journey will be by the first steamer, and our only stops will be at New York."

In an interview last night, M. Witte said:

"There is no change in the situation from yesterday. I have not received any dispatch so far from Count Lamsdorff. Perhaps it may come later."

Asked if the conference would end on Saturday, M. Witte replied:

"I can assure you that I do not known myself, but the outlook for peace is not good. I have been out all day in the country, and have just returned, so I am not aware of what has taken place in my absence."

In the opinion of the Russian officials last evening, Saturday will see the end of the conferences, unless Japan has some new proposals to make, which is not very likely after yesterday's statement from St. Petersburg.

ASBURY'S MAYOR AFTER AUTO DRIVERS

DECLARES HE WILL STOP RECKLESS MOTORING IN STREETS.

Asbury Park, Aug. 25.—Mayor Frank H. Ten Broeck, of Asbury Park, is determined to put a stop to reckless automobile driving in this resort. Since the season began, not a week has gone by that some accident has not been reported, and within the last day or two there have been several. Fortunately, none have yet proved fatal, but that seems very remarkable, and such good luck cannot be expected to continue.

Yesterday an automobile whizzing around the corner of Bangs and Cookman avenues, ran over Horace Haines, the nine-year-old son of John Haines, of West Park. The wheel passed over the boy's chest. He was picked up and examined by Dr. H. S. Kinmouth and found to be not seriously hurt unless developments show internal injuries. The car was No. 12,960. A crowd of people mobbed the driver, but he put on full speed and shook them off. So many machines pass through Asbury Park that it is generally hard work to get across the streets without having one whiz by in front of one's nose, or just behind one's back. Mayor Ten Broeck has stationed a policeman at the Deal Lake bridge to take the time of all the racing cars entering the resort, and another one on South Main street, to take the time they leave town. The distance is a mile and a quarter, and if it is figured out that they have exceeded the time limit, the occupants will be arrested upon their next round.

Miss Ada G. Higgins, who underwent an operation at the hospital for appendicitis, has returned to her home at Watchung.

Augustus Nash, of Prospect avenue, and Martin Stutsman, of East Fifth street, who have been sojourning at Asbury Park, are home again.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Too Long In Coming.

The State Board of Health has just issued in printed form its annual report for 1903. Much of the interest is lost when these official reports are so long in coming.—Elizabeth Journal.

May Be Different After a While.

After a while when the automobilist learns that the "honk" of his horn does not obligate all other vehicles on the road to climb over the fence or jump into the ditch, things may be different.—Mount Holly Herald.

Must Control Her Own Destiny.

Asbury Park is slowly but surely awakening to the knowledge that she has an individuality and a destiny of her own that must and shall be worked out by home government.—Asbury Park Press.

Shade Tree Commission Wanted.

A large majority of the people in Jersey City would like to have a Shade Tree Commission to care for and increase the shade trees. The law authorizes the Aldermen to adopt the law by initiative proceedings and when it thus becomes operative the Mayor may appoint the commissioners. These must serve without compensation, but they will have some trifling patronage. — Jersey City Journal.

Ought to Know Better.

The city didn't look any too pretty yesterday. The immense summer crowd had strewn lawns and sidewalks, as well as the public squares, with pieces of paper bags, box lids and various other unsightly miscellany in a manner we have seldom seen it before. These summer visitors ought to know better than to scatter such stuff promiscuously in our streets and parks.—Asbury Park Journal.

A Healthy Town.

The report given out by the State Board of Health places Perth Amboy in an enviable light in comparison with her sister cities. The death rate here has decreased in spite of the fact that we have grown faster than any other municipality of the second class. The report also shows us far below New Brunswick and lower than nearly all other second-class cities. This goes to prove that Perth Amboy is one of the healthiest places in the State.—Perth Amboy News.

Senator Kean Wins His Fight.

United States Senator John Kean may not derive quite as large an income hereafter as he did in the past from his water works in Elizabeth, but he can enjoy the satisfaction of knowing that for five years at least one municipal ownership scheme is dead.

After about two months of stress and storm he has succeeded in inducing the Common Council to agree that the people shall keep on quenching their thirst from his reservoirs. —Hoboken Observer.

Jersey Brand of Weather.

According to reports from Washington, Warren county, early risers report having seen a slight frost Saturday morning. It was plainly visible on the tin roofs in many places At 6 o'clok various thermometers registered 50 degrees. Vegetation did not suffer by this unusually early frost. All right. Let the correspondents see frost if it pleases them. Only about two days before this visitation some of them were seeing heat so intense, that, according to chronicles by them made and sold at space rates, the steel of the railroad track was so warped that trains ran in a circle, and only by the shutting off of steam were prevented from colliding with their own rears. Concerning New Jersey weather, in truth, it is much like other weather of the same latitude but the truth neither warps a rail nor decorates the pumpkin with premature rime. —Newark Advertiser.

ILLITERATE POPULATION.

Out of 60,000 Inhabitants Elizabeth Has 17,000 Who Cannot Read.

Elizabeth, Aug. 25.—The statistics of the recent census show that 29.82 per cent. of the population of this city is of foreign birth. Of the total of 60,509 persons in this city, 42,461, including negroes, are native to the soil. The total foreign-born population is 18,048, divided as follows: Germans, 4,536; Irish, 3,634; Italians, 1,253; English, 1,345; all others, 7,280.

There are 17,737 persons who cannot read in Elizabeth. These include children under 5 years of age, who number, however, but 7,039. Allowing that there are 3,000 children between 5 and 8 years, which errs in excess, if at all, there still remains 12.5 per cent. of the population above 8 years which cannot read any language.

The census returns show that there are 30,845 males and 29,664 females. Between the ages of 21 and 45 there are 13,252 men and 11,555 women, a difference of 1,679.

The total negro population of the city is just 1,100, of which 566 are males and 534 females.

Except between the ages of 21 and 45, males and females are very nearly equally divided. In the class of those under 5 years of age females are in a majority of 19. In all other classes males predominate.

Dr. A. W. Anderson, of East Second street, has been called to North Wilbraham, Mass., on account of the serious illness of his young daughter.

Westfield will play Summit on Labor Day morning at Recreation Park.

A record breaking crowd is looked for at the Plainfield-Westfield game on Crescent Oval tomorrow.

"Dan" Connolly will be back in the game tomorrow ready for two or three hits.

Umpire Merity will officiate behind the bat tomorrow and Henning will take the field.

While "Pete" Cregan has not been hitting the ball hard, he has been getting a hit or two in most every game.

If you want a seat at tomorrow's game, go to the Oval early. Late comers will have to take their chances.

The hue and cry on the part of a few fans that the Plainfield-Westfield games were fixed, has dropped into oblivion.

There will be one game here on Labor Day, when Westfield will meet the Daubsters on Crescent Oval in the afternoon.

"Mike" Leonard has been improving in his hitting during the Plainfield-Westfield games and is almost sure of a single in every game.

It is the opinion of many fans that Manager Denman should be willing to abide by the decision of the umpire as regards Saturday's game.

Despite the unpleasantness of last Saturday, Westfield fans are compelled to admit that the Daubsters acted the part of gentlemen, which is true.

Captain Driscoll is so well pleased with Plainfield that he may decide to take up his residence here. "Dave" says that the reason the local fans are so critical is that they follow the game better than in some towns and are right up to date.

The prospects of a series with Summit, of the Lackawanna League, is arousing considerable interest. The hill-top boys, including Richardson, "Chick" Cruzius, Henriques, Linderman and Farmer are all well known, and all but "Chick" have played on the local team.

Now that Manager Daub has decided to continue in Plainfield another season, it is up to the baseball loving public to stand by him loyally and give him its hearty support. He will do his share, as in the past. No one will deny that he has given Plainfield the best baseball in its history.

George A. Schaefer, the sporting writer on the Westfield Leader, devotes several short items this week to Captain Dave Driscoll relative to his actions a week ago. "Dave" may have acted hastily, but for baseball filled with questionable tactics, Westfield takes the lead. Plainfield's captain fights to the limit to win a game, and his friends do not believe that he ever purposely resorted to a dirty trick to gain a point. On Saturday he was simply helping to defend the rights of his team mates, who he thought had been encroached upon, and, like a gentleman, apologized to Joe Wahl after the game.

Plainfield, N. J., August 25, 1905.

The most ingenious "ad" in the world—the most interesting, the best written, the most convincing—is bound to be ineffective if hid away in a corner or secreted in the columns of a newspaper without circulation. Nature has the privilege of hiding precious things, such as diamonds and gold ore; but the wise merchant knows that no such privilege belongs to him. His masterpiece "add' goes straight to the masterful newspaper.—Philadelphia Record.

Years of waiting ended, we have our theatre at last. What are we going to do with it?

We have clamored for theatre and we have wailed over the lack of one. It is to be proved that we deserve a show house.

One theatre has failed here because the public would not support it. Will Mr. Counihan's venture fail, too? It has been said that the management of Music Hall made mistakes, and the theatre, not the people, was to blame for the closing of its doors.

Perhaps that is true. But it is not to be true of the house that opened its doors last night. It is one of the prettiest in the State, and the best shows on the road will appear on its stage. The prices are to be moderate and wise, and experienced management is to offer the public every inducement to patronize it.

Proprietor Counihan, rating our cry for a theatre at face value, has given us one. He has put something like $20,000, practically all he has in the world, in the response to our call. For his sake alone, it is to be hoped that we will prove loyal to our expressed sentiments and support the theatre, as we have led him to believe we would.

But whether we have feeling for Mr. Counihan and the risk he has taken or not, let us support the theatre for the sake of the city. For five years it has rested under the stigma of being the only municipality of its size in the country without a playhouse. Not that a theatre is a mark of remarkable progress, but the lack of one does indicate a lack of public pride.

The playhouse on Second street is one of which we may be proud. Let us show that we recognize a good thing, and have go enough as a community to keep it with us.

WESTERN RIFLEMEN SCORE AT SEA GIRT

VICTORS IN THE FIRST STAGE OF THE INDIVIDUAL MATCH.

Sea Girt, Aug. 25.—Victory in the first stage (200 yards), in the national individual match yesterday, the opening contest of the National Rifle Association competition, forsook the East and alighted on the bayonets of the newcomer dark horse marksmen from the Middle and Far West.

There were 656 contestants who fired at the 200-yard targets, and of the first fifteen places the sharpshooters out of the West won ten.

High score was 46, made by Lieutenant A. E. Clark, of Minnesota; Sergeant M. A. Gilbert and Captain G. E. Hensick, of Oregon, and Sergeant A. S. Bowers, of Iowa.

The firing on the next, 300-yard range, began at 1 p. m., but the tremendously large number of contestants made the match drag, although the prearranged programme was broken up and the firing went on simultaneously on four ranges. Dusk, however, cut short the sport before all the riflemen had made their 300-yard score, and the summaries could not be completed. The contest began at this point this morning, and will be followed by the 500 and 600 yard stages, slow fire, and 500 and 600-yard stages, rapid fire, and two skirmish runs.

The national pistol match for the championship is also set for today. The summary of the first stage of the match was decidedly interesting, the first seven places going to Western men. Then a New Jersey man loomed up, Sergeant A. H. Pfrill, of the Third Regiment, N. J. N. G. In addition to the four previously mentioned who scored 46, the following showed up well with 45 each:

Corporal Nagen, Wisconsin; Sergeant Jones, Illinois; Sergeant Hird, Iowa; Cadet Dixon, West Point; Captain Lee, California, and Sergeant A. H. Pfrill, Third Regiment, N. J. N. G., they being listed in the order named on the cards of the official scorers. It is possible that the national team match, which is scheduled for Saturday, may have to be postponed until Monday.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Sylvester Randolph, who died yesterday at his home in Plainfield, had many friends in this place and throughout the township. He was a school trustee and took an active interest in the schools of the township. He was also interested in the South Plainfield borough proposition and was serving as chairman of the law committee. For many years, with his family, he occasionally attended the Baptist church here.

Miss Mattie Mettic, of North Hector, Genesee county, N. Y., has been spending a few days visiting Miss Emma Manning and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Latourette.

Mrs. W. B. Manning is expected home soon from Asbury Park, where she has been spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Voorhees.

The plum crop which formerly has been prolific here was almost a failure this year.

Additional suburban news on page two.

PISCATAWAY SLATE DISCUSSED LAST NIGHT

VARIOUS CANDIDATES SUGGESTED FOR THE DIFFERENT OFFICES.

The Republicans of Piscataway township got together at Friendship Hall, New Market, last night and discussed informally the candidates to be placed on the ticket at the coming fall election. There was no official significance attached to the meeting, the members of the party merely adopting this method to get a line on those they want to run for office.

Dr. Myron J. Whitford, of New Market, was chairman of the meeting, and William B. LaRue, of Bound Brook, the secretary. The vacant offices this year include those of tax collector, one town committeeman, constable, and justice of the peace, and in addition there is an executive committee to be selected and delegates to the county convention.

For tax collector the name of William B. LaRue, of Bound Brook, was suggested, while Arthur Tappen was named for member of the township committee. Robert Pierce, of New Market, the present constable, was suggested for re-election, and W. E. Smith, of South Plainfield, was named for justice of the peace at that place. Those picked for members of the executive committee are Dr. Myron J. Whitford, of New Market; Thomas Brantingham, of South Plainfield, and Nelson Giles, of New Market.

For delegates to the county convention these persons were suggested: Dr. Myron J. Whitford, William B. LaRue and Archie Steengraff, the latter of South Plainfield.

The ticket will have to be named at the primaries, to be held in September, and filed with the county clerk.

Tub for a Pond.

Three finely bred Pekin ducks have been added to Frank Hedden's collection of fowls at the Fourth street stable. Mr. Hedden is doubtful of raising the ducks because the only thing in the way of a pond on the premises is a big tub that is used in washing the wagons, but he is going to try it. The cement floor around the tub is always damp, and the ducks may manage to eke out enough moisture on the stable grounds to make life endurable.

Likes the Navy.

In a letter to a friend here he says he has decided to stay in the navy all his life. He is very enthusiastic over the service. He formerly resided on Essex street.
